COMMONER AND DARROW TILT IN WAR OF WORDS

Each a Denouncer and Denounced.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Dayton, Tenn., July 18.—[Special.]—Clarence Darrow of Chicago and William Jennings Bryan tonight engaged in a duel replete with mutual, bitter denunciations, in outlining their views on the progress of the Scopes trial and the effect of the Tennessee evolution law.

The statements came as a climax to a day in which both sides were preparing for the reconvening of court on Monday, when the jury, which has been barred for most of the session will be admitted to hear closing arguments. These arguments will close the case, probably Tuesday morning.

All day long the experts brought here by the defense and barred from testifying worked on affidavits which will tell of evolution. It is not believed Judge John T. Raulston will permit these to be read in court—it is more likely they will be interjected into the record to be sent to the Appellate court.

Plans New Holy Wave.

And during the day it developed that Bryan, enthused by his victory in this case, will carry his holy war against science into the legislature of seven other states within the next two years. Mr. Bryan's statement was an arraignment of evolution as a "conspiracy against Christianity" and a concerted attempt of "a minority to rob man of his God."

He bitterly assailed Darrow as a "confessed agnostic" and leader of the "most militant anti-Christian sentiment in the country." His attack included the scientific experts, whom he ridiculed, modernist ministers—characterized as unfaithful to their trusts, and the rank and file of evolutionists, who were called dishonest.

Convicted in Advance.

Darrow's reply began with a charge that John T. Scopes was convicted before he was ever brought into court.

"We have two hopes," he declared, "that a higher court shall pass upon this case and that other states will permit their citizens to think and investigate."

With bitter irony he taunted Bryan with setting himself up as the "only judge of what the Bible and Christianity mean" and continuing, declared that "no scientist had ever invoked the law to compel any one to believe in his theories."

Concluding, he said that while the scientist believes man is steadily improving the fundamentalist view "created him perfect and then permitted him to fall into error."

DARROW'S STATEMENT

Dayton, Tenn., July 18.—(AP)—John Thomas Scopes was condemned from the start of this case, Clarence Darrow declared in a statement outlining his views of the case, evolution and religion.

"We know that in this state, under the surroundings and conditions of the trial, Mr. Scopes was condemned from the start," he said. "We are interested in two things:

"That a higher court shall pass upon this case, and that in other states those who wish to pursue the truth shall be left free to think and investigate and teach and learn.

Liberal Bible Not Accepted.

"We know that the great majority of the intelligent Christians do not accept the literal interpretation for the whole Bible. We have learned here, both from laymen and clergymen, that a large part of the fundamentalists do not accept it. This doctrine is a doctrine of the literalists, and we are perfectly satisfied that the majority of the Christian church has long since passed beyond that."

Outlining his views on prayer, Mr. Darrow said:

"I did object to daily praying in court. This praying is rare in court, even in the south. I objected to it because of the peculiar situation where Mr. Bryan had sought to make this trial a contest between religion and science.

Wanted Unbiased Court.

"I thought that, of all cases, this was one where the court should stand entirely free of all bias. Even the judge who presides has not followed the regular habit of opening court with prayer until this case arose.

"Every attorney on the part of the state understands the setting and background of the case. We do not ask any one in Tennessee for it; we know that all men take their views largely from their environment.

"Before the trial of this case, I had

NUDE BOYS AND LAW ROUT GIRLS AT CREEK BEACH

Waldron, Ind., July 18.—[U. P.]—Birthday suits instead of bathing suits are the style again today at the old swimmin' hole just outside the village limits of Waldron.

Boys of the town may splash around in the cooling waters of the pool without clothing just as they have done for fifty years.

Girls who went into Squire Clarence Thompson's court to rout the "Adam bathers" from the swimming hole can find another place to swim.

The pool belongs to the boys and it is their hereditary right to swim in it in nature's garb.

Squire Thompson has ruled to this effect, and Squire Thompson is the law of Waldron's 400 inhabitants.

Victory for the boys in the fight for exclusive rights to the pool came when Prosecutor Adams decided to drop charges of public indecency against two of the youthful Adam bathers.

The charges were brought by Miss Eunice McKay, pretty young school teacher, and two other girls who went down to the swimming hole and found the pool full of boys; and the bank piled with clothing.

TOWN ROUTS 15 BANDIT RAIDERS IN GUN BATTLE

Kulin, N. D., July 18.—More than a score of citizens here staged a successful counter attack today on fifteen bandits, who had taken possession of the town preparatory to robbing the First State bank, and saved $4,600 locked in the bank's vault. More than 150 shots were fired in the battle. One of the residents was slightly wounded.

Awakened by the explosion of eighteen charges of nitroglycerin in the bank, the citizens, heavily armed, took up positions behind trees, houses and buildings, while the robbers returned their fire from behind stones and iron girders piled immediately across from the bank.

Slowly advancing from building to building, gradually encircling the bandits, some of whom were still vainly attempting to blow the safe, the town sharpshooters forced the invaders' retreat.

Slayer Kills Prison Mate; Robber Flees

BULLETIN.

Winnetka and Glencoe police mobilized in search parties shortly before last midnight upon receipt of reports that Teddy Webb, the killer who escaped from the state honor farm on Friday, had been seen in the neighborhood of Hubbard Woods. Webb, who killed Detective Sergeant Peter Hart in Chicago in 1914, is regarded as desperate and orders were given the police to shoot to kill. Webb was reported as working north.

The record of activities at that humming center, the Illinois penitentiary, near Joliet, was enlarged yesterday by the escape of a Negro robber and by the slaying of one prisoner by another.

Here are the fresh developments, including the already recorded escape of a murderer, which occurred on Thursday:

1. Otto Malm, a murderer serving a life sentence, yesterday killed John Mack, a colored man convicted of robbery, while both were supposed to be at work in the fiber factory.

2. Robert Wesley, a colored robber from Chicago, received at Joliet Feb. 4 on a sentence of from 3 years to 20 years, escaped yesterday.

3. Teddy Webb, one of the most dangerous murderers, was still at large, his escape on Thursday from the honor farm being the twenty-eighth in eighteen months.

Chief Schoemaker Aroused.

Chief of Detectives William Schoemaker of Chicago was aroused. His opinion is that a penitentiary should contain and retain prisoners convicted of crime and duly sentenced. Schoemaker called attention to Webster's definition of penitentiary—a place for penitents.

"They should be made sorrowful," the detective chief said. "Remember that quotation: 'The way of the transgressor is hard.' That's another dream.

"The way of the transgressor is hard only in getting him into jail—and the way for the transgressor to get out is easy or soft, not hard."

The Chicago police were more incensed about the escape of Teddy Webb than of many other grievances they may have against the state prison. Webb killed one policeman, Peter Hart, and tried to kill others in evading capture, and now the expectation is that he will kill again to avoid recapture.

Search Vigorously for Webb.

The police were making a vigorous and determined hunt for Webb yesterday on the possibility he had returned to Chicago. Then there was a message to the effect Wesley had escaped.

Wesley was supposed to be employed in the quarry outside the old prison and when the convicts were returned to the cell house last night it was found Wesley had decided not to go back. Forty guards in automobiles set out at once in several directions to persuade him to return to the prison bed and board, but he eluded them.

Next came the dispatch concerning the additional murder by Malm. Malm killed Edward Lehman, a night watchman, in Chicago two years ago. When Mack died yesterday after Malm had struck him on the head with a monkey wrench, Malm said, "He hit me first."

Sarcastic Over Honor Farm.

"Malm, of course, is weak minded," Chief Shoemaker said. "Such a thing might happen in any jail. The only thing strange about it is that Malm wasn't on the honor farm too.

"Why they call it the honor farm I don't know. I do know there is no honor among thieves and certainly none among murderers, yet Chicago's most desperate robbers and killers usually are assigned to restful occupations on the so-called farm where the free air is supposed to do what stone walls do not do—a prison make."

Henry Barrett Chamberlain, operating director of the Crime Commission of Chicago, was also aroused over the twenty-ninth escape from the penitentiary and he said it was possible that another appeal would be made to Gov. Small to do something toward trying to keep Chicago's convicted criminals safely locked up.

GRAFTING DRYS HONEYCOMB U. S. REPORT REVEALS

Federal, State, and City Officials in It.

Washington, D. C., July 18.—[Special.]—Amazing developments of nation-wide corruption among federal prohibition officials, as well as among county, state, and municipal officers, have been made to the department of justice by more than forty United States district attorneys in response to a circular letter requesting information on various phases of the prohibition problem.

ASST. SECRETARY ANDREWS. [Copyright: Harris & Ewing.]

The federal attorneys from Maine to California were asked to furnish all possible information on the number of dishonest officials in their judicial districts, the extent to which political influence was being exerted, the attitude of county, state and municipal officials, the chief sources of liquor supply in their districts and the names and addresses of principal offenders against the dry laws.

A Catalog of Graft.

When completed, these reports will constitute the most thorough compilation of information on the prohibition problem which any governmental department or voluntary dry organization has collected since the enactment of the Eighteenth amendment and the Volstead act.

It then will be forwarded to Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Andrews, prohibition czar, for his use in inaugurating his new program of dry enforcement. Many of his appointments of prohibition administrators and changes undoubtedly will be influenced by the reports of the district attorneys.

This is in line with Secretary Mellon's original announcement that, under the program to go into effect next month, the department of justice would cooperate in every detail with the treasury. It means that the friction between these departments, which formerly handicapped thorough enforcement, has been eliminated.

Some Agents Found Honest.

Whether the government in the light of these reports will inaugurate a movement for the removal or impeachment of certain public officials alleged to be corrupt, is a question. It is a fact that the reports reveal the activities and honesty of a small force of federal officials to have been nullified completely in some sections of the country by the hostile attitude and crookedness of county, state, and municipal officers.

In many instances, such officers as sheriffs and minor judges were characterized as more helpful to the bootleggers than to the enforcement agents. Many replies contained charges that one or more officials in various districts were in league with the heads of liquor rings.

People Against Dry Laws.

District attorneys in the cities said popular sentiment was adverse to the dry laws.

With local officials catering to the popular sentiment, district attorneys reported that the enforcement of prohibition had become dependent on the efforts of a pitifully small and futile force of honest dry agents.

Faulty preparation of court cases by agents, together with use of illegal methods of obtaining evidence, were found to be two major reasons for failure to get convictions.

In accordance with Secretary Mellon's determination to effect closer cooperation with the department of justice a conference with Assistant Attorney General Mabee Walker Willebrandt will be sought by Gen. Andrews at an early date to discuss a proposal that United States district attorneys be instructed to keep a sharp eye on the work of the prohibition agents.

Efforts also will be made to expedite trials and to assure a more careful preparation of evidence presented against bootleggers.

Moors Battle for Keystone of French Line

BULLETIN.

EL ARAISH, Spanish Morocco, July 18.—(AP)—The French garrison at Rihana, northeast of Ouezzan, has surrendered to the rebel tribesmen on account of lack of munitions. Three French officers, ten soldiers and fifty-three Senegalese troops, comprising the garrison, were made prisoners and taken to Sheshuan.

FEZ, Morocco, July 17.—[Delayed.]—The Riffian pressure today and yesterday around the two posts of Ain Aicha and Ain Matouf, French strongholds forty miles north of Fez, indicate a renewed determination to break the resistance at these points, which constitutes the keystone to the present French line in the central sector.

Land communications between Ain Aicha and Fez have been cut off for the past week, but the post is in constant communication with headquarters by radio. Relief columns will fight their way forward with supplies within a few days. Thirty thousand rounds of ammunition and 1,000 hand grenades were dropped into the post from low flying French airplanes yesterday.

Enemy Losses Heavy.

The enemy losses are reported to have been unusually heavy during yesterday's fighting, in which three squadrons of airplanes participated. The natives' positions were kept under a continual bombardment from the air and heavy artillery located two miles back.

In spite of these efforts, the Riffians managed to cling to the trenches and strong points they hold around both places. Heavy infantry fighting is expected when the relief columns push forward.

Women Kept Away.

At Taza, where Abd-el Krim's forces are close to the all important French imperial roads connecting Casablanca with Algiers across north Africa, the situation remains unchanged. The European women evacuated from the town recently have not been allowed to return, and a large number of European stores are closed. The streets lack their usual scenes of activity.

The French continue to employ cavalry columns throughout the area north of Taza, arresting strange natives, disarming others, and preventing movements of any large number on the roads. No new tribes have joined the enemy forces in the last few days.

Offer Peace; Prepare to Fight.

PARIS, July 18.—(AP)—Pending the acceptance or rejection of the Franco-Spanish peace terms by Abd-el Krim, the French, by sending Marshal Petain and Gen. Naulin to Morocco, and the Spanish, by their action north of Loukkos and in the Larache section, are bringing all possible pressure to bear to heighten their prestige in the eyes of wavering tribesmen. At the same time they are organizing the situation so as to be ready to reply vigorously in case the Riffian chief's answer is negative.

France's famous Moroccan division, cited more times than any other similar war time unit, is proceeding rapidly to Morocco, and other important effectives, including battalions of Madagascar infantry, are on their way. In the meantime Marshal Petain is due to arrive soon at Fez, where he will confer with the general in command and then visit the front.

Rabat dispatches affirm that the marshal's arrival has greatly impressed the natives, as his record in the European war has made him almost a legendary hero.

TRIO SHOT DOWN BY POLICE AFTER TRYING HOLDUP

Three men fleeing in an automobile after trying to rob two men and a woman in another car early this morning were shot by police under Lieut. Dominick Mullaney in a running battle. The wounded men were taken to the Montrose hospital, where it was said their wounds were not serious. They gave these names and addresses: John Wilson, 23 years old, 2933 West Lake street; Charles Conroyd, 21, 2449 Lowell avenue, a stationary engineer, employed by the Board of Education, and Robert Walsh, 1656 North Luna avenue.

The three stopped a machine occupied by Walter Fisher, 3838 North Hoyne avenue; Miss Susan Bradley, and Melvin Kirschwehn, 2105 Grace street, near Elston avenue and Addison street, and demanded their money. Patrolman John McGovern saw the attempted holdup and started for the robbers. They fled, McGovern firing at them several times, but missing them.

Lieut. Mullaney's squad was notified and soon overtook the fleeing car. The robbers opened fire and the police returned it with shotguns. After a chase of a mile the men, all wounded, surrendered at Irving Park boulevard and Christiana street.

ITALIAN GUNMEN FIGHT DUEL TO DEATH IN STREET

Fight Over Bail Bond Forfeiture.

Jimmy Vinci, labor gangster, and Joseph ["Machine Gun Joe"] Granata, alias Bernatto, ex-convict, fought a duel which ended in the deaths of both men last night. The battle occurred at Wells and 29th streets.

Granata, fighting with a knife and a revolver, drove Vinci across the street intersection diagonally, the latter appearing to be trying to escape. After they had reached the sidewalk at the northeast corner, Vinci fired the six cartridges in his revolver. Both of the men fell dead at almost the same instant.

Duel Over Defaulted Bond.

In searching for a motive for the duel the police gained information which led them to believe that Vinci had induced some of his friends to furnish a $15,000 bond for Granata two months ago after the latter had been arrested in connection with a $10,000 jewelry store robbery in Oak Park. That bond recently was forfeited. The police suspect Vinci sought and gained revenge last night, although it cost him his life.

Search was started for a third man, who, witnesses said, figured in the shooting and later escaped. They were unable to say whether he was with Vinci or with Granata.

Eyewitness Tells Story.

"I was walking along the street near the corner when I saw one man and then another start shooting," Albert Pautch, 2843 South Wells street, said when questioned by Sergt. Joseph Pieroth at the Cottage Grove avenue police station. "Some fifteen shots were fired before the two men fell. Then a third man, about 30 years old, weighing about 200 pounds, and wearing a light suit, fired four shots into the body of one of the men. I don't know which man it was. The tall man then ran south in the alley between Wells street and Wentworth avenue."

John Genero, owner of a saloon at 2900 South Wells street, told the police that Granata entered the place at 10:40 o'clock, that Vinci came in some two minutes later and Granata started out, Vinci following him. The men did not appear to be quarreling, he said, and he paid little attention to them until he heard shots.

Wounds Found on Body.

Granata's body bore three bullet wounds and there were gashes in his abdomen, side, neck and cheek. Vinci had been shot above the heart and in the right side of his chest. Vinci's clothing was slashed, but his body had not been cut.

Further evidence that there was a third man in the battle was given by the fact that a .38 caliber revolver was the only weapon found on the scene. That was clutched in Vinci's hand. A .45 caliber steel-jacketed bullet was taken from Vinci's body.

Jimmy Vinci was the driver of the automobile in which the slayers of "Mossy" Enright rode when they killed him several years ago. Recently Vinci has been operating a saloon at 24th street and Shields avenue, a few blocks from the scene of the shooting.

Vinci lived at 3212 Princeton avenue and Granata at 2040 West 68th street.

Dips Hands in Blood.

A throng gathered quickly about the bullet riddled bodies as they lay on the sidewalk. Soon afterward Sam Vinci, pressed through the crowd, sobbing, "He's my brother! He's my brother!"

After the physician had pronounced Jimmy Vinci dead, Sam leaned over and dipped his hands in the blood of his brother. That act is performed regularly by relatives of slain Italians as a symbol of the survivor's pledge to avenge the death.

This act, however, had little significance in this instance, for Jimmy's slayer lay dead a few feet away.

Refuse to Give Kin the Body.

James Vinci, an uncle of Jimmy, and his wife, with whom Jimmy had lived when he was a child, also pushed their way through the crowd. The aunt sobbing hysterically, dropped to Jimmy's side and resisted efforts of policemen to take her away. Later she and her husband sought to claim the body, but their request was refused.

Sam later went to Jimmy's home. The latter's widow and two little girls, Angelina and Frances, had heard of the duel and were sobbing. The widow said she could suggest no motive for the shooting. Sam and another brother, Joseph, both of whom live at 712 West 25th place, when questioned by police, said the two dead men had been neither friends nor enemies and that no feud was known to exist between them.

Relatives of Granata, whose mother died recently, appeared early this morning at the morgue where his body lay and told the police they knew of no reason for the duel.

While the police believed the forfeited bond furnished the motive for the duel, they were investigating other possibilities. Among them was the chance that liquor might have figured in it. Sergt. Michael McFadden of the detective bureau said that so far as he knows Granata had not been involved in any of the feuds of the old "Bloody 19th" ward on the west side. The police said also that so far as they knew neither of the men was connected with the Genna gang.

Held Saloon Keeper.

Genero, the saloon keeper, was held for questioning. Among others questioned were Tony Fallesach, 2844 South Wells street, an eyewitness to a part of the battle, and Mrs. Josephine Breteich, 2843 South Wells street, who told of hearing some eighteen shots and of seeing the two men just before they fell. Acting Captain Edward Birmingham of the detective bureau directed the investigation.

The robbery which led to the forfeiture of Granata's bond occurred April 27 in the jewelry store of Holly Boyson, 127 North Oak Park avenue, in broad daylight. He later was held in $15,000 bonds for a jewelry store robbery in Milwaukee avenue.

The police believe Granata was the actual slayer of "Red" Weinberg, a member of his gang, slain near West 16th street and the Baltimore and Ohio railway tracks because, it was said, he had "double crossed" other members in the division of the loot. Granata was released about a year ago from the Pontiac reformatory, where he had served a term for robbery, Sergt. McFadden said.

JIMMY VINCI'S CAREER

James Vinci was convicted five years ago on a charge of complicity in the murder of Maurice (Mossy) Enright. Previously in a spectacular confession, which he later repudiated, Vinci had accused Big Tim Murphy, Mike Carozzo and Vincent Cosmano of plotting the murder.

Vinci was at the time known as a chauffeur for Big Tim's crew of union labor wreckers. It was before the days of the bootlegger.

Vinci was given a term of fourteen years in state prison, but was granted a new trial by the state supreme court in December, 1920. The killing of Enright closed the career of a man, a product of the athletic clubs back of the yards, a soft spoken, hard boiled egg.

In Steamfitters' Fight.

Enright had come to prominence in the fight between the International association and the United Association of Steamfitters. He was on the latter side. He had been tried for the killing of Vincent Altman, a leader of a gang of sluggers and gunmen of the rival faction.

From that Enright had branched into more general labor activities, less easily defined and Big Tim Murphy, a later comer in the labor game, was becoming a rival in his field.

Enright was shot to death on the afternoon of Feb. 3, 1920, and he dropped over the steering wheel of his automobile as the car stood in front of his home.

The shooting was done by Cosmano, Vinci told Maclay Hoyne, then state's attorney. Carrozzo was in the car, Vinci declared. They had been watching Enright for days, at the direction of Murphy, Vinci told the prosecutor.

But later when on trial he repudiated his story, declaring in Judge Sabath's court that he had been beaten and threatened with death by the police in efforts to make him implicate Murphy and others.

Could Not Remember.

Vinci was defended by former State Senator James J. Barbour. Finally Vinci took refuge in saying he could not remember the circumstances attending the Enright killing.

The reason for the reversal of the conviction of Vinci was the admission at his trial of the confession that he repudiated. When the time came to try Murphy and Corrozzo, there were witnesses missing and the repudiation of the confession practically had done away with the state's case.

Murphy did not get into real trouble until the million dollar mail theft case that sent him to prison.

Came to U. S. When Child.

Vinci had come from Italy as a child and had been associated with Corruzzo and others whom Tim Murphy used to build up his power among the street sweepers and others. Vinci was a sort of minor hanger-on.

At one time in 1921 when Vinci, who was not tried a second time, was arrested he was found to be carrying a gun. He produced a permit signed by Justice Walter Ahearn of Evergreen Park.

When Saloon Was Raided.

In February, 1922, the saloon of Vinci at 300 West 26th street was raided. The result indicated the character of the place. Six of the nine men arrested were identified as robbers. At the time Chief of Detectives Hughes recommended that the saloon license be revoked.

STABBED TO DEATH IN FIGHT

August Plummer, 30 years old, was fatally stabbed last night in a fight with Richard Rainiso, 37 years old, 3410 West 38th street, that started after a drinking party in a flat at 3713 South Kedzie avenue. Plummer died on the way to the county hospital. Rainiso was arrested.

The flat was raided and several half empty bottles of "moonshine" were found. The police also took into custody Frank Grygiel, his wife, Mary, the occupants of the flat.

U. S. Tourists' Thirst Makes Hague Peace Palace Go Dry

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

THE HAGUE, July 18.—A Hague magistrate today cancelled the license to sell intoxicating drinks on the premises of the peace palace, where the international court sits, on the ground that the caretaker misused the license by selling liquor to foreign visitors, especially Americans. The caretaker's only defense was that he did not charge bootlegger prices, only putting on five cents to the ordinary retail price. He was fined $10.

21 Hurt by Ammonia Tank Blast in Pittsburgh Hotel

Pittsburgh, Pa., July 18.—Twenty-one persons, including nine firemen, were either burned or overcome as a result of explosion of an ammonia tank in the basement of the William Penn hotel here today.

MODISH IMITATE LOOKS OF GLASS OF GRAPEJUICE

Newest Garments Arrive for Fashion Show.

Last year it was the fashion for the well dressed woman to get herself up like a breakfast menu: a gown the color of toast, coffee colored hose, and slippers the hue of crisp bacon.

But this year the modish young woman prefers to look like a tall glass of raspberry juice, a blackberry parfait, or a drink of deep purple grape juice. Anything, just so it's tall and straight and purplish.

At least that is the fundamental fashion edict predicted for this winter in the array of garments which Frank Halperin, secretary and treasurer of the Chicago Fashion show, was censoring yesterday in the association's headquarters at the Great Northern hotel preparatory to handing them over today to the twenty pretty girls who are going to model in them at the show, which begins a two weeks' engagement at the Rainbo Gardens Aug. 3.

Purples First; Then Red, White.

As to colors, royal purple seems to be the most democratic thing there is. Everybody is using it in fabrics priceless and fabrics cheap. Pansy, fuchsia, violet, heliotrope, and just plain purple or orchid. There's a lot of different names for a lot of different shades. Then, too, reds and white are good.

The lines are straight, with a flare at the bottom. Only, of course, the bottom of the skirt doesn't anywhere near approximate the top of the sidewalk. For skirts are to be very short, with an emphasis on the circular swirl to the hem.

And here's a tip: The really smartly gowned woman no longer rolls her stockings. She hikes them. That is, they tell us, she wears a girdle of some sort with a garter attachment, so that she can hike up her stockings tight and sleek above the knee. The result, they again tell us, is more effective with the short skirt.

To Display $1,000,000 in Furs.

While Mr. Halperin and his committee were getting their million dollar exhibit of gowns and wraps ready for the Aug. 3 showing, Don L. Omo, president of the Chicago Association of Fur Industries, announced yesterday that 100 mannequins will swathe themselves in a million dollars worth of furs and parade them at the fur show.

This exhibit opens at the Chicago theater July 27. Aug. 3 sees it at the Riviera theater, Aug. 10 at the Tivoli theater, and Aug. 17 it closes at the Senate theater.

4 BALLOONS OFF IN ATTEMPT FOR DISTANCE RECORD

Akron, O., July 18.—[United Press.]—Somewhere between here and the Atlantic coast tonight four balloons are sailing in an effort to break the American distance record for bags of 35,000 cubic feet capacity. They left Stow field at 4 o'clock this afternoon.

The first balloon to take off was the Goodyear V., piloted by Jack Boettner and Porter Collins. Then followed the United States army balloon S-10, in charge of Lieut. Moyer and Lieut. Koontz; the Goodyear IV., piloted by Herbert Maxson and Walter Morton, and the Goodyear VI., piloted by J. E. Cooper and H. E. Kraft.

The balloons are competing for the Maj. Thomas Baldwin trophy, which is being offered for the first time.

SLAYS IN PRISON

Otto Malm, serving a life sentence in Joliet penitentiary for the murder of Edward Lehman, again is a killer. He slew John Mack, a colored convict, while the two were at work in the fiber factory of the prison.

BOTH TIMPONI AND HIS WIFE TO SURVIVE WOUNDS

An attempt to slay his wife and kill himself of Frank E. Timponi, 65 year old orchestra leader, failed, according to attaches of the Lake View hospital. Both Timponi and his 30 year old wife will live, they say.

Timponi shot his wife Friday night in her apartment at 914 Eastwood avenue. They had been separated since last February, and their meeting, according to the police, was an attempt at reconciliation. They met at the home of Charles P. Lloyd, 3826 Pine Grove avenue, where Timponi had been staying since the separation.

Mrs. Timponi was shot in the neck. Timponi's gun missed fire when he turned it on himself and he slashed his wrists, arms, and throat with a potato knife. But both are expected to live.

Carlstrom Aid Is Fined in Minnesota by Chief's Pal

Austin, Minn., July 18.—Cyrus Dietz, assistant attorney general for Illinois, was today fined in Municipal court for turning his auto around in the center of the block. Dietz violated the traffic ordinance while Attorney General Oscar Carlstrom of Illinois was renewing a boyhood acquaintance with R. P. Willis, justice of the peace. Willis levied the fine.

FLOOD ENGULFS COREAN CAPITAL; HUNDREDS DEAD

Dikes Break; Sleepers in Homes Carried Away.

[Copyright: 1925: By the New York Times.]

TOKIO, July 18.—Hundreds of Coreans have perished and thousands more are threatend with starvation as the result of floods at Seoul following torrential rains which started Thursday and continued intermittently for two days, according to a radio message from there tonight. Radio is the only means of communication left.

The Han and Asahi rivers rose thirty feet above normal and broke the dikes, inundating the city without warning and submerging 2,000 houses, many of which were washed away with their sleeping occupants.

Cut Off from Help.

Tokio island was cut off from communication with the mainland this morning and is completely submerged, only the roofs showing above the torrent, which is too turbulent to cross in a boat. Watchers, therefore, are powerless to save those of the island's 2,000 inhabitants still living marooned on the roofs without food.

Sirens warned people of the dikes' breaking last night and 300 persons rushed to a school building for safety, but the building's foundation was washed away and the structure collapsed, killing all.

300,000 Face Famine.

All railway tracks have been washed away and attempts to take relief supplies by boat failed because of the current. Japanese troops quartered at Seoul are attempting relief work, but food supplies are short and famine is imminent among the city's 300,000 inhabitants.

Official queries sent by the Japanese government elicited the information that it was impossible to estimate the total casualties at present, but it is believed the drowned will number more than a thousand and the material damage amount to several million yen.

The subject of her prize winning painting is the "Legend of Saint Ronan," based on an old Breton folklore tale. This picture had already won two medals in the salon, and other prizes.

DISABLED VETS' HEAD OUTLINES AID HE WILL ASK OF GOVERNMENT

Washington, D. C., July 18.—(AP)—John W. Mahan, newly elected national commander of the Disabled American Veterans, outlined in a statement tonight the aims of his organization in behalf of soldiers of the world war. Outstanding among them are:

Reinstatement of lapsed government insurance on two months' payments and the remaining figure held against the face value of the premium on death.

A permanent medical service in the Veterans' bureau, modeled generally after the army medical corps.

A "supreme effort" to have wounded veterans given vocational training.

A fight against proposed absorption of the veterans' bureau in the projected department of relief and education.

Support of "every reasonable movement for an adequate national security."

Arrested tuberculars to be compensated permanently in such a way that they can live while working in a manner to guard against a return of their disability.

Clothing Workers Seek Aid of New Injunction Law

In a petition filed yesterday before Judge Charles M. Foell, attorneys for the Amalgamated Clothing Workers' union invoked the aid of the anti-injunction bill recently passed by the Illinois legislature. The petition was filed in retaliation to an injunction secured by several garment manufacturers to prohibit the union clothing workers from picketing their work shops. Both sides, it was said, are prepared to carry the proceedings to the Supreme court.

WHY MRS. THORNE FAILED TO WRITE SOON EXPLAINED

New York, July 18.—(AP)—In reply to dispatches from Denver quoting John Wolfe Thorne, heir to $3,000,000, as saying that he had not heard from his mother, Mrs. Mary Casey Thorne, in seven years, her lawyer today said that her silence was due to the fact that the whereabouts of the boy had been concealed from her.

Mrs. Thorne obtained a decision in the court of appeals recently giving her custody of the boy. His father was killed in an automobile accident a few hours after his decree of divorce from Mrs. Thorne was sustained by the Supreme court on May 29, 1924.

"Ever since the boy was taken from her by stealth seven years ago," the lawyer said, "Mrs. Thorne has sought in vain to learn is whereabouts so she might communicate with him. Her efforts in this direction were always balked by the father in the latter's lifetime and since the father's death, by those having charge of the boy."

LEGISLATION MAY COME

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.

Washington, D. C., July 18.—(Spl.)—If there should be a coal mine strike this fall, resulting in another famine for the country, the passage of legislation providing for government control of the industry in some form of federal supervision would become a possibility by no means remote.

Many government officials in contact with the coal situation are of the opinion that one more serious strike would bring government control in its train as the only feasible means of putting an end to the recurrent fuel famine and fuel famine scares.

Vicious System Unrestrained.

Since the great strike in the bituminous coal fields during the summer of 1922 a group of government experts have been doing their utmost to stabilize the industry to bring about reforms in coal mining which would stabilize output and lessen the danger of labor troubles and strikes, which for twenty years or more have forced the public from time to time to pay premium prices for fuel, although the supply under normal conditions is more than adequate to meet demand.

As the situation now shapes itself, however, there apparently has been little or nothing accomplished with the bituminous or anthracite coal industries to break the "vicious cycle" of events, in the course of which a period peaceful relations has soon be followed by a period during which the mines have been closed by strike, artificial fuel famines created, and the public left "holding the bag."

Shrink from U. S. Control.

Government officials have, as a general proposition, been opposed to professional action in the direction of regulation of the coal industry or fixing of prices, and have urged that operators and miners in both the bituminous and anthracite fields to settle among themselves of bringing about definite reforms which would forestall outside interference. But the present threat of a strike in the anthracite fields and the demoralized conditions in the bituminous fields would seem to indicate that little has been accomplished in the way of reform.

Strike to Stir Industry's Foes.

The government is hopeful that the operators and miners will realize that another strike, or bitter negotiations which send prices mounting and threaten the public welfare and the public purse, will simply provide further evidence that no advancement toward more stable conditions has been reached by the industry itself, and that the cause of those persons and out of congress who have been active fighting for federal regulation of the coal industry.

One of the experts who have made careful investigation of the condition for many years have resulted in a series of strikes in the bituminous fields, with shut-downs and higher prices, either directly or because of increased cost of products of industries which have had to pay the toll, of a mental picture of the situation.

PRESIDENT IS DETERMINED TO HALT COAL TIEUP

Plans to Use Publicity Club on Both Sides.

Swampscott, Mass., July 18.—[Special.]—President Coolidge is determined to prevent a coal strike. It was confirmed in official circles today that he would not intervene between the operators and miners unless their negotiations result in a deadlock. But the moment it is seen that an impasse has been reached he will summon both sides to White Court and attempt to persuade them to adjust their differences so that the mining of coal will not be interrupted after Sept. 1.

He is in touch with the miners through John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers, and has let his views become known to the operators. He will exert all pressure possible to keep the hard coal mines operating. He is thoroughly advised as to the dispute and knows the weakness of both sides.

Parley Is First Step.

The first step proposed by President Coolidge is to bring the two sides together here. Then he intends telling them just what the government proposes to do if they cannot get together and a strike results.

If the negotiations do not show progress the President is expected to start a campaign of publicity through the government agencies, giving all the facts as to wage scales and prevailing coal prices. The report of the United States coal commission, made less than three years ago and not yet published, will be spread before the public, in the hope that the facts there set forth will give the consumers information that will form public opinion against a strike.

LEGISLATION MAY COME

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.

Washington, D. Government officials have, as a general proposition, been opposed to confessional action in the direction of regulation of the coal industry or the fixing of prices, and have urged the operators and miners in both the bituminous and anthracite fields to seek some means themselves of bringing about definite reforms which would forestall outside interference. But the present threat of a strike in the anthracite fields and the demoralized conditions in the bituminous fields would seem to indicate that little has been accomplished in the way of reform.

The government is hopeful that the operators and miners will realize that another strike, or bitter negotiations which send prices mounting and threaten the public welfare and the public purse, will simply provide further evidence that no advancement toward more stable conditions has been initiated by the industry itself, and thus promote the cause of those persons in and out of congress who have been and are fighting for federal regulation of the coal industry.

One of the experts who have made a careful investigation of the conditions which for many years have resulted in a series of strikes in the bituminous coal fields, with shut-downs and high prices, either directly or because of increased cost of products of industries which have had to pay the toll, outlined a mental picture of the situation.

Too Many Bituminous Mines.

It is generally recognized, he said in substance, that the fundamental cause of the instability of the bituminous industry is its great excess of production capacity above the actual needs of the market. The bituminous industry is carrying an excess burden of 30 per cent too many mines and 30 per cent too many men, with the majority of the workers unable to obtain annual earnings adequate for a reasonable standard of living. Overdevelopment means short running time at many operations during periods of normal demand; short time means inadequate returns to workers and owners; low earnings breed labor discontent, resulting in strikes, which in turn cause coal shortages and high prices and promote over-development, completing the vicious cycle.

Competition between fields with a fixed labor cost and other fields with a flexible labor cost makes the industry fundamentally unstable and tends to increase overdevelopment. Hence a permanent cure for overdevelopment must provide something like uniformity of labor standards.

Fire Officials Oppose New Jewelry Building in Loop

Construction of the forty-story Jewelers' building at Wabash avenue and Wacker drive, a combination garage and office building, may be delayed through opposition of fire officials, it appeared yesterday. Of each floor to the 23d, 27 per cent is to be devoted to garage space, and the prospective builders say there is no danger of fire, as cars will not run under their own power in the building. The ordinance authorizing the building is now before Mayor Dever for action.

QUESTIONING THE GIRL GENNA WAS TO HAVE WED

TONY GENNA'S FIANCEE QUIZZED; LITTLE LEARNED

Find Minister's Daughter in Lavish Suite.

BY GENEVIEVE FORBES HERRICK.

The girl whom Tony Genna was to have married if it had not been for gunmen was discovered yesterday afternoon with the locating of Gladys Bagwell. She was the small town minister's daughter who was to have become the big town bootlegger's wife next November. She was found yesterday in her suite at the Congress hotel by Chief of Detectives William Schoemacker, who has been looking for her since July 9 to learn what she knows of the murder, on that day, of Tony Genna, her sweetheart.

She cried a lot, but she didn't say much.

For she doesn't know much about bootlegging and black hands and murder and sawed off shot guns, she pointed out to Assistant State's Attorney Robert McMillan.

Just a Minister's Daughter.

Why, she explained, she's just the daughter of a Baptist minister from Chester, Ill., who grew weary of playing the piano for Sunday school, drifted down to Chicago 5 years ago, studied, went into vaudeville, and finally became the pianist at the Valentine Inn.

And it was at the Inn, about a year ago, that the manager introduced her to Tony Genna. His amiable ways, the gifts he gave her, the big automobile and the like, wooed and won her promise to marry him.

She recalled last night that she had met a few of Tony's friends, but then, "I'm Irish, and all Italian names sound alike to me," she maintained as she refused to say, definitely, whether she had ever heard of a "Cavallera," which Tony mumbled as she bent over him at the hospital the hour he was dying.

And with that she is back at her starting point, that "I don't know anything about Tony's death except that it was terrible."

Family Opposed Alliance.

Downstate, in Chester, Gladys' parents, the Rev. and Mrs. J. H. Bagwill, and her brother, Hubert, had a few more things to say. But they were mostly about Gladys.

"Our whole family was strongly opposed to Gladys going with Genna," Hubert admitted. "And my mother almost had a nervous breakdown when she left here July 6, after spending the Fourth with us."

The main difficulty with the match, as Mrs. Bagwill saw it, was that Genna was Italian. For she is convinced that he was never implicated in the liquor deals that were being negotiated around Taylor and Halsted streets.

"I don't believe Tony was mixed up in the bootlegging business," Mrs. Bagwill declared last night, "but, anyway, I didn't want Gladys to marry him. Mr. Genna was anxious to have the ceremony take place at once, but he told us he had to wait to get permission from the Italian consul before he could get a marriage license."

Entertained by Tony.

The mighty Genna was a gracious host, the minister's wife who might have been his mother-in-law reflects. For it was only a few short weeks ago that she and her daughter were entertained by Tony, and that right pleasantly, when Mrs. Bagwill was in Chicago.

But his generosity to Gladys disturbed the woman from Chester, apparently.

"Candy and flowers are all right," she said, "but a girl should not accept more valuable gifts. Gladys said they were to furnish their new home."

The gifts referred to are doubtless some of the lovely pieces of furniture and the ornaments that are part of the lavish fittings of suite M-50 at the Congress, where Miss Bagwill returned yesterday after an absence of several weeks.

Key Mystery Solved.

Miss Bagwill makes little of the apparently mysterious key which was found in Tony's pocket at the time of his death, and by which officials at last found her. The key, she explains, is the one to her apartment—M-50 at the Congress.

"I left my rooms June 29 to go down and see my parents at Chester, Ill. I have a lot of lovely things in the apartment, so I turned my key over to Mr. Genna, so that he might look in on them and see if everything was all right."

The Rev. Mr. Bagwill, who has been a minister in the Baptist church for 35 years, has been chaplain of the southern Illinois penitentiary for the last 15 years. It was he who said prophetically, when his daughter came home for the Fourth of July, "You had better stay away from the Gennas, for it might be Tony next."

"But," he reasons it out, "she loved Tony and she wanted to marry him."

EX-MERCHANT KILLS SELF.

Jacob Pietz, 56, a retired merchant, shot himself fatally in the head at his home, 2703 Austin avenue, Cicero, last night. He had been in ill health.

TENNESSEEAN POINTS WITH PRIDE TO PAST OF MOUNTAIN STATE

Dayton, Tenn., July 18.—(AP)—Calling attention to many prominent men who were natives of East Tennessee, Walter White, superintendent of Rhea county schools, said today that of forty governors of Tennessee these mountain counties have produced seventeen.

"As to Rhea county," he added, "I wish to say that more men and boys went from this county to the Confederate and Union armies than were voters at the time and they all volunteered.

"No citizen of Rhea county was arrested during the late war on a charge of disloyalty. No citizen of this county has become so highly educated that he feels it his duty to substitute the red flag for the American flag or dispose of his Bible.

"We are the descendants of the men who gathered at Sycamore Shoals and listened to the prayer of the Rev. Samuel Doak before fighting the battle of King's Mountain. We still believe in our God, our country, our flag, and prayer."

BLANTON USES FRANK TO GIVE KICK PUBLICITY

Washington, D. C., July 18.—[Special.]—Many people in Washington today received through the mails in congressional franked envelopes a 27-page printed pamphlet containing a voluminous letter written by Representative Thomas L. Blanton of Texas to Lieut. Col. Clarence O. Sherrill, U. S. A., superintendent of public buildings and parks.

In it the Texas congressman shows his resentment because of a newspaper interview quoting the army officer as accusing Mr. Blanton of being a "meddling busybody."

Representative Blanton tried to have the government printing office print his letter, presumably as a congressional document, but the printing office declined, so the congressman had it printed at a private plant.

Among the prominent lecturers this summer are Walter F. Dodd of the Chicago bar, Charles H. Judd, director of the school of education, University of Chicago; Dean C. M. Thompson of the college of commerce, University of Illinois, and Dr. H. A. Morgan, president of the University of Tennessee, who instead of talking about evolution will discuss "Economic Problems in Agriculture."

COLORADO KLAN LOCALS SECEDE IN MONEY ROW

Denver, Colo., July 18.—(AP)—Fifteen local organizations of the Ku Klux Klan in Colorado surrendered their charters to Dr. John Galen Locke, grand dragon of Colorado, and will follow the Denver klan, which last night voted to secede from the national organization, Dr. Locke announced here tonight. The grand dragon also announced he expected to submit his resignation.

The climax of friction came last night with a telegram from Imperial Wizard Evans directing all money and property of the Denver klan to be held subject to his order.

Roumania Bank Balks Harvester Co. Settlement

BUCHAREST, Roumania, July 18.—(AP)—The agreement between the International Harvester company and its Roumanian debtors, has collapsed, the Roumanian National bank categorically refusing to furnish foreign exchange to Americans' debtors on the same basis as given to debtors of British and Italian firms. The harvester company will probably refer the matter to the American state department. The debts, contracted before the war, amount to about $1,000,000.

Poisons Her 3 Babes, Then Ends Own Life with Potion

Windsor, Ont., July 18—(AP)—Mrs. Mary Haines, 31, died today after administering poison to her three children and swallowing a large quantity herself. The children, ranging in age from 2 to 6, are in a hospital in a serious condition. Two of them are not expected to recover. James J. Haines, the husband, said his wife had been acting queerly of late.

COOLIDGE CALLS SENATOR CURTIS TO WHITE COURT

Swampscott, Mass., July 18.—[Special.]—Senator Curtis of Kansas, Republican leader in the senate, has been invited to White Court. He will arrive Monday morning for a series of important conferences on congressional questions. Among the subjects to be discussed are the coal situation, taxation, farm legislation, the world court, and the bill for reorganization of the executive departments.

SENATOR CURTIS. [Harris & Ewing.]

Senator Curtis is expected to be house guest most of next week. It is believed that Senator Butler [Rep., Mass.], and Senator Gillet [Rep., Mass.], and possibly other senators will be invited to the summer White House during the next few days.

Because of recently announced wage cuts in the wool mills, President Coolidge was represented today as being concerned over some aspects of the business situation in Massachuetts. While told by eastern business men that business conditions are excellent and improving, the President is not receiving such good reports from his home state.

M'KINLEY BACKS DAWES VIEWS TO REVISE SENATE RULES

Hannibal, Mo., July 18.—(AP)—The Dawes proposal for revision of senate rules was endorsed by United States Senator William B. McKinley of Illinois in an address here today before the Southern Illinois Editorial association, aboard the steamer Alabama.

The senator said he was "heartily in favor" of the revision, although he realized the difficulty of bringing it about. Much important legislation, he said, was talked to death because of lack of a cloture rule.

Discussing the world court, Senator McKinley reminded the editors that the Elihu Root plan for a permanent court at The Hague, proposed in 1920, had been adopted by all civilized nations with the exception of United States, Russia, Germany, and a few others.

Of the three billion dollars appropriated by the last congress, he said, only 17 per cent was for actual government operation, while the remainder was for maintenance of army and navy and to pay for past wars.

POPE CLEARS WAY FOR MARRIAGE OF ITALY'S PRINCESS

Prince of Hesse Meets Church Demands.

BY GEORGE SELDES.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

[Copyright: 1925: By The Chicago Tribune.]

ROME, July 18.—After negotiations lasting more than two months, during the course of which many objections had to be removed, a dispensation has just been issued permitting the religious marriage of Princess Mafalda, King Victor Emmanuel's second daughter, with Prince Philip of Hesse.

PRINCESS MAFALDA

According to Vatican circles the negotiations were conducted by Mgr. Beccaria, the royal house chaplain, and Cardinal Merry Del Val, the prefect of the holy office, who though animated by the best of intentions often found themselves confronted with what appeared to be unsurmountable difficulties owing to Prince Philip's unique position.

This is the first time a Savoy princess has married into a Protestant family and the Vatican prelates were worried concerning the future domestic happiness of the princess.

Prince's House First Lutherans.

In Prince Philip's case the usual precautions required by the rules governing mixed marriage appeared practically valueless.

It was pointed out that the house of Hesse was one of the first ruling houses to embrace the reformation, becoming its supporter and defender and even founding the first Lutheran university. The prelates believed such a family would naturally bring up their offspring as Lutherans, while the Catholic church requires that they must be educated as Catholics.

Church Demands Written Guarantee.

The pope was several times called upon to intervene to modify the unrelaxing attitude of the prelates. Additional written guarantees were demanded of Prince Philip, who solemnly promised never to interfere with the princess' religious duties or the religious education of the children. Simultaneously King Victor Emmanuel and Princess Mafalda herself informed Mgr. Beccaria that the house of Savoy was proud of its religion and would never tolerate its children becoming Protestants.

The marriage will occur in September.

They Used to Strap On Spectacles

Old pictures and collections show grotesque shapes in early spectacles.

In the earliest styles the lenses were round, very large, and fashioned in a ring of black horn, half an inch wide.

They were strapped on with a leather thong over the nose and another about the head.

Small wonder wearers of spectacles were ridiculed in those days.

Obviously, the adjustment could not have been very good. Such crudeness would make those shudder who appreciate the scientific necessity of delicate, accurate adjustment as practiced in Almer Coe Stores.

COMMONER AND DARROW CLASH IN WORDY WAR

Hit Each Other and Each Other's Beliefs.

no idea that there was only one interpreter of religion in the world. Christianity has had in its ranks thousands of able and intelligent men in all of the countries of the world, but these are now all set aside, and Mr. Bryan is to be the one and only judge of what the Bible and Christianity mean."

Accepted by Science.

The theory of evolution as a scientific theory was only announced about seventy years ago, Mr. Darrow said, and since that time it has been accepted by almost every scientist in the world.

"The believers in evolution are by no means confined to heretics, for the realms of religion and science are entirely separate. Amongst the most prominent evolutionists of the world are multitudes of men in high standing in all the Christian churches. All of these are pronounced heretics by Mr. Bryan."

The scientific man is as kind and humane as the fundamentalist, he asserted, and "No one ever heard of a scientific man who ever sought to call the aid of the law to enforce belief in his theories."

Scoffs at Bryan's View.

"Men's religious views are involved in this prosecution," he insisted. "It is true than on the subject of God and immortality I am willing to confess that I am an agnostic; I do not know. I fancy that this is a much higher position than that of Mr. Bryan, who says that God was made in his image and is sure that this is true.

"It is hard to understand how an intelligent man can believe that a photograph of a human being needs only to be enlarged to give us a picture of God. On this subject I am not agnostic; I do not believe it. As to the first cause and the power that is at the heart of the universe, it seems to me that most men must confess that they do not know."

No Desire to Wreck Faith.

Mr. Darrow said he had "no desire to have the Christian world give up its belief in God or its Bible, but at least a very large portion of the Christian world does not regard the Bible as a book of science."

"The scientist," he added, "does not believe that man has ever fallen, but that he has gone steadily forward. It is the fundamentalists only that believe that man was once perfect and that he afterwards fell."

BRYAN GIVES VIEWS

William J. Bryan declared that the Tennessee evolution case has uncovered a conspiracy against Christianity. Declaring that multitudes have been deceived by the use of the term "evolution," he added that their eyes are now being opened. Evolution, as taught by scientists, he said, is an imaginary process, wholly unproved, that begins with life but does not attempt to explain life.

"If the evolutionary hypothesis is true," he said, "man has come up through the animals below him by a cruel law under which the strong kill off the weak."

Darwin's Early Christianity.

"The evolutionists bring their doctrine before the public in a jewelled case and praise it as if it were a sacred thing," he said. "They do not exhibit, as Darwin did, its bloody purpose; they do not boast that barbarism is its only true expression, they do not tell the public that Darwin, who studied for the ministry and in his youth believed in a personal God and in 'the strict and literal truth of every word in the Bible' was led away from Christianity by evolution and died an agnostic.

"The evolutionists have not been honest with the public. Even ministers who believe in evolution have assured their congregations that there is no inconsistency between Darwinism and Christianity. The ministers should tell their congregations that evolution leads logically to agnosticism.

"But this trial has had another important effect. The presence of Mr. Darrow here, an avowed agnostic both as to God and immortality—he has so stated in court before the judge—represents the most militant anti-Christian sentiment in the country.

"He protested against the opening of court with prayer and has lost no opportunity to slur the intelligence of those who believe in orthodox Christianity and to hurl the charge of bigotry against every one who objects to the teaching of evolution in the schools.

"Mr. Darrow, in the celebrated Loeb-Leopold trial, boldly argued that the boys were not responsible for what they did, laying the blame upon their ancestors and their environment and relieving them of all personality or power to decide between good and evil.

Robs Man of God.

"Mr. Darrow's connection with this case and his conduct during this case ought to inform the Christian world of the real animus that is back of those who are attempting to enforce upon the schools the views of a small minority, regardless of the fact that the philosophy of life based upon evolution robs the individual of a sense of responsibility to God and paralyzes the doctrine of brotherly love.

"Mr. Darrow shouts that truth is being excluded from the jury, merely because a few so-called 'experts' whom he has selected are not permitted to put their prejudiced opinions up against the honest convictions of the people of Tennessee.

Probe Darrow's Thoughts.

"From Mr. Darrow's point of view, no Christian would be worthy to be called an expert on the Bible until after scientists, also selected by him, had performed a surgical operation on these Bible experts and removed from them faith in the Bible as the revealed word of God.

"The Christian world is not going to give up its belief in God or its belief in the Bible as our only standard of morals, or in Christ as our only savior and wisest guide—the Christian world will not give up these sacred things at the demand of these intolerant champions—not of science but of an unproved guess — the logical tendency of which is to rob man of his moral standards in this world and of hope of immortal life in the world to come.

Indebted to Scopes.

"Yes, we are making progress and we can acknowledge our indebtedness to a number of unintentional aids. First, we are indebted to Mr. Scopes, whose devotion to the doctrine that gives him a jungle ancestry is so passionate that, though a school teacher, he was willing to become a violator of the law in order to test its constitutionality.

"But our indebtedness is much greater to Mr. Darrow, Mr. Scopes' chief attorney. Mr. Darrow was chosen by Mr. Scopes himself to represent his interests, if not his views.

"Mr. Darrow's hostility to Christianity, proclaimed for a generation, and his conduct in this case are now known to the world and will arouse the devout Christians of the nation whose prayers ascend in gratitude for the courage of the state of Tennessee and Mr. Darrow's attitude will compel the Christians who take sides with him to explain to their Christian brothers why they defend a doctrine that strikes at the root, not only of Christianity, but of civilization. Do they know what evolution means? If so, do they prefer it to the Bible?"

SCOPES TRIAL AND LAW THAT BRED IT CALLED TENNESSEE'S SHAME

Chattanooga, Tenn., July 18.—[Special.]—Vigorous opposition to the attitude of Judge Raulston toward the defense in the Scopes trial at Dayton were expressed in an editorial this morning in the Chattanooga Times, a newspaper owned by Adolph S. Ochs of New York.

"What a few Tennesseeans feared when this evolution question began to be agitated and what an ever-increasing number of them have been dreading has come to pass," the editorial says.

"Intelligent, educated, liberal-minded, progressive people of the state have at last, but sooner than they thought, been called upon to drink to the dregs a cup of humiliation and shame.

"They were called upon to taste the cup when William Jennings Bryan first inspired an anti-evolution movement in this state.

"They were given a sickening draft when Gov. Peay signed the bill and issued his now-famous apology for doing so, and yet more nauseating gulp when Prof. John T. Scopes was indicted.

"Yesterday, when Judge Raulston ruled that counsel for Scopes should not be allowed to place before the jury expert testimony designed to show that the theory of evolution does not conflict with the Bible account of the creation of man, a host of intelligent Tennesseeans were compelled to drink the full measure of their state's shame.

"Tennessee not only does not permit its children to be taught what the children of all enlightened communities are allowed to learn; the law of Tennessee does not even permit a jury, which has been sworn to pass upon a case involving the theory of evolution, to be informed about evolution by those most competent to explain its meaning."

BRYAN TO LEAD HOLY WAR INTO 7 LEGISLATURES

Young Tennessee Eating Forbidden Fruit.

BY PHILIP KINSLEY.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Dayton, Tenn., July 18.—[Special.]—With a legal victory in Tennessee to back them, the fundamentalists, led by William Jennings Bryan, expect to carry the war against evolution into the legislature of seven states in the next two years.

As the Scopes trial nears its end it is plain that any change of sentiment effected here has not been along the old lines. Young Tennessee has not been frightened by science. They have begun to think and talk freely. They have begun to ask about the secret doctrine denied them by law. This is the intangible victory of the Scopes defense, the result of which no man can tell.

The trial will enter its final court phase Monday morning when Judge John T. Raulston takes the composite statement of science and theology, the evidence of the harmony of evolution with the biblical narrative of creation, and places it against the statute of the Tennessee legislature.

Probable Course of Trial.

Here is the probable procedure during the last two days of this extraordinary case. Defense attorneys tonight said that most of Monday will be consumed in preparing the statements of the scientists for proper presentation to the court. Since the defense has been forbidden to introduce any spoken testimony, the submission of the evolutionary theses will conclude the hearing except for the arguments by both sides before the jurors, so notable heretofore by their absence from the court room.

Tonight it was stated that eight hours would be allotted to prosecution and defense to make their final arguments, four hours to each side. Since adjournment probably will come Monday afternoon before these are finished, Tuesday morning will undoubtedly see the windup of the speeches.

In the afternoon session it is expected, Judge Raulston will make his charge to the jury, and it will retire to deliberate, probably bringing in a verdict before closing hour.

What Worries Defense.

At this writing the defense is worried over a possible mistrial. Lawyers have to go through certain motions by habit, and some arguments made here by Clarence Darrow and others of the defense side might be considered dangerous from the acquittal standpoint. Darrow is such a good lawyer that he could not help but try to free his client. Slips of this kind have been made and it is possible that two or three of the jurors may not agree to ship Scopes out of the teaching business in Tennessee.

One juror does not belong to a church and another lets his wife do the church going for him. A third has been a teacher himself, has studied evolution and has reason to feel friendly to the defense for protecting him against the suspicion of the attorney general that he had been tainted with modern ideas, and was possibly not a fit occupant of the fundamentalist jury box.

One Juror is a Thinker.

The brother of one of the jurors came to town today.

"Jack has a mind of his own," he said.

There is no telling what may happen here. The jurors have not heard any evidence except the prosecution, and are expected to follow the instructions of the court, which will be along fundamentalist lines, according to his decisions in this case. He does not believe in the descent of man from animal life, but might in time be converted to the ascent of man as viewed by Drummond.

"What is this tree of life?"

"No use telling you; you can't see as I see."

This actual bit of street corner conversation in Dayton shows what a profound debating society this has become. Mysticism is strong here, and this is not to be displaced by any set of material facts.

Dayton has endured much, particularly from eastern critics and humorists. They have been called morons, half wits, imbeciles, yokels, peasants; and belabored with other bludgeons; but they have come through smilingly. They have handled the situation with as much tact and good nature as could be found in any town in the country.

As to the evidences of evolution which are to be offered for the enlightenment of the court tomorrow, there is not much need for secrecy. Most of the collaborators among the witnesses have written books and pamphlets. Shailer Mathews has written on "Contributions of Science to Religion" and Prof. Horatio Hackett Newman has written much on animal evolution. Their recent writings are on sale and cannot differ much from the testimony which the court has barred from the jury here.

Bryan Calls Darwin a Guesser.

The problem, it seems, has not changed much since Darwin published his book on evolution 65 years ago. Mr. Bryan claims that it is still a guess.

"Let us not mince maters," says Prof. Newman, expert in zoology at the University of Chicago, in one of his publications. "Plants, animals, and man are either fixed and immutable products of special creation or else they have undergone changes and are undergoing changes today. If we admit that species have changed and are changing at the present time, that is all that the principle of evolution implies.

"To appreciate the force of the evidences of evolution requires long and arduous study. The more intensively one pursues any given line of biological specialization the more necessary does it become to adopt an evolutionary point of view. The layman can obtain at best only a faint idea of the real strength of the factual basis of evolution.

What Interests Scientists.

"Strange as it may seem, biologists long ago ceased to concern themselves with the question of the fact of evolution, and for a long time have been devoting their energies to the solution of the extremely difficult problem of its causes.

"The evidence upon which the law of gravity is based is no less indirect than is that supporting the principle of evolution. The nebular hypothesis and its modern rival, the planetesimal hypothesis, are both deductions from facts. In the field of physical chemistry we had first the molecular theory, then the atomic theory, then the ionic theory, and now the electron theory; each of these has appeared in direct response to the necessity of explaining new sets of facts, and none is so well founded as is the theory of evolution.

Evolution an Established Law.

"The principle of evolution stands in the first rank among natural laws not only in its range of applicability but in the degree of its validity, the extent to which it may lay claim to rank as an established law. It is the one great law of life. It depends for its validity not upon conjecture or philosophy but upon exactly the same sort of evidence as do other laws of nature."

And Dr. Mathews takes this as fact and goes on with it into heights of religion. His testimony will be along these lines:

"The Christian theologian may move forward with the same central teaching of science in his representation of the values of the Christian religion. He can find new understanding of Jesus as a revealer of an infinite and immanent but self expressing personality.

True Picture of Deity.

"He gets a new sense of the participation of God in the sorrows and struggles of humanity with outgrown gods expressed so picturesquely but imperfectly in the various doctrines of the atonement.

"He will understand the Bible as an inestimably valuable product and record of man's response to his true environment expressed in his growing discovery of God and of God's gradual self-manifestation to man through personality and society.

"In a word, he will come to see that those fundamental values of the Christian religion, which lie behind the pattern ideas which have been expressed by theology, are not opposed by an interpretation of the universe which science is helping us gain.

"It can only be those who are ignorant either of the real nature of Christianity or of science or of both who will find antagonism between the two spheres of expressing the meaning of ultimate activity."

Dayton Becomes Calmer.

Today witnessed a calming down in the scenes surrounding this case. William Jennings Bryan Jr., returned to his home in Los Angeles, and William A. Thompson of the defense left for New York.

Bryan, the elder, and Mr. Darrow are in Chattanooga this evening, and the latter will speak there tomorrow. The Commoner has decided not to go through with his speaking engagements for the week end, but will be back here early Monday prepared to make the speech of his life to the jury in behalf of Tennessee's anti-evolution legislation.

ARSENAL OF WORDS BORES SHERIFF USED TO A DEADLIER SORT

Dayton, Tenn., July 18.—(AP)—The boredest man around the Rhea county court and the evolution trial is Sheriff "Blutch" Harris, a man who "remembers when."

He stands serenely day by day in the midst of the turmoil of the legal battle, unmindful of the verbal arrows and oral darts which contending lawyers sling across the crowded arena. His eyelids droop wearily above his rotund frame, for he was here when bullets, not words, were weapons of debate.

Forewarned of the coming trial and of the expected influx of trouble makers, the sheriff two weeks ago replenished his force of deputies and swept out his ancient jail. Today after eight days of the Scopes case, with hundreds of visitors of all types invading the town, he uttered this doleful summary:

"I have been sheriff here for three years. The present has been the quietest month of all my term of service. There's nothing doing at all."

HOPE WANES FOR SCOTT; TALE OF DETROITER UPSET

Brother Fails to Appear; "Witness" Discredited

Russell Scott's chances of a further reprieve from hanging grew fainter when his brother, Robert, failed to appear and when Mrs. J. M. Ball, wife of an itinerant Detroit telegrapher, flatly repudiated her husband's story that he saw Robert and not Russell Scott do the killing.

Scott was to have been hanged at daybreak last Friday, but was granted a week's reprieve shortly before the fatal hour when Gov. Small received a telegram purporting to come from Robert Scott in which the latter "confessed the killing" and promised to give himself up. The message is regarded as a fake.

Word from Springfield credited Gov. Small with holding the view that unless Robert Scott appears within the week he will decline to interfere further with the hanging.

Defense Attorneys Have Hope.

With the story of Ball to back up those of two new women witnesses they claim they have found, attorneys for Scott had begun to hope for a possible commutation to life imprisonment. But the statement of Ball's wife threw Scott's chances back again into the shadows, as Robert Scott still failed to put in an appearance.

Ball told a long detailed story of having been in the City Hall pharmacy at La Salle and Washington streets on the night of April 2, 1924, when Maurer was shot. The gist of this story was that Maurer was not shot by Russell Scott in a holdup, as the state charged at the trial, but that Robert Scott shot Maurer during a quarrel over some money the latter appeared to owe Robert.

"I am sure my husband doesn't know anything about Scott except what he has read in the newspapers," Mrs. Ball, the mother of six children, said. "It's all news to me. I didn't know a thing about it until I read in the newspapers about his story.

Scott Case Impresses Ball.

"Some men were here after my husband. Later he came home and said his picture would be in the papers. He didn't tell me much about it, so the first I really knew was when he brought the paper to me."

Ball had said his wife prayed most of Wednesday night for guidance as to what Ball should do. She explodes that story. Also Ball said he was employed as an operator for the Postal Telegraph company in Chicago on April 2, 1924, the day of the shooting of Maurer. This proved by the records of the company to be untrue.

Other flaws in Ball's statement were pointed out by Assistant State's Attorney Gorman.

Last night Ball resigned from his temporary job with the Western Union in Detroit and disappeared, leaving word that he was coming to Chicago to help Scott.

Who Sent Detroit Message.

Who were the men interested enough to get Ball to send the message Wednesday night to Gov. Small? Mrs. Ball said her husband was away from home the night the message was sent.

Sebastian Vermiglio, a 13 year old Detroit newsboy, told the police there of having delivered the telegram that got Scott his week's reprieve to the telegraph office on Thursday night.

"I had sold my papers and was sitting in a restaurant getting something to eat," Sebastian said. "Another newsboy came in and said a man wanted to send a message to the telegraph office. I said I would go."

Sebastian said the man who gave him the message was at Woodward and Jefferson avenues, Detroit.

"He was a young fellow pretty well dressed," the boy continued. "He handed me two pieces of folded paper. He said: 'Here's a message and the money to pay for it. Take it over to the telegraph office right away and send it. You can have the change.'

"He acted pretty nervous and started to walk away before he finished talking. The message cost 87 cents. I got a 13 cent tip."

The boy said he could identify the stranger again. He described him as being about 23 years old, clean shaven, wearing a blue suit and straw hat.

The Women's Affidavit.

Meantime the lawyers, Leslie Whelan and Walter T. Stanton, were busy in Scott's behalf here. They said they had obtained during the afternoon the affidavits of the two women, witnesses, and that these would testify to Gov. Small that it was a drinking party and not a holdup that preceded the killing of Maurer. They would not reveal the identity of the women.

Prosecutor Gorman, commenting on the telegram supposed to have come from Robert Scott, on the general efforts in behalf of Russell Scott, and the contributions of money from influential persons to help save him, said all this was either the work of cranks or of "good, well intentioned people who are against capital punishment and fighting it every chance they get."

DOOMED MAN'S MISSING BROTHER AND HIS FORMER HOME

[Copyright: Pacific and Atlantic.]

Several years ago this photo was taken of Robert Scott, missing brother of Russell Scott, under reprieve from hanging, and the youths' father, Thomas, who has worked unceasingly to save the life of his son. A telegram purporting to come from Robert on Thursday night saved Russell from being hanged Friday morning.

This is the luxurious home which Russell Scott occupied at Rosedale, a suburb of Toronto, Canada, three years ago. He was then rated as a millionaire.

And this is how Russell Scott appeared at the time of his wealth.

15,000 POLES TO MEET TODAY IN BIG CELEBRATION

Riverview amusement park will be transformed into a miniature Poland this afternoon when an army of Polish people, expected to number 15,000, gathers there for the annual summer celebration of the Polish-Balkan Alliance of Chicago.

All over the country similar celebrations will be held, but none will rival in size the one here, as Chicago, with a population of 400,000 Poles, is the heart of Polish strength in America. The local celebration this year will be bigger and better than ever before, say those in charge, especially because of the present prosperity of the home country, now a nation of forty millions stretching from the Baltic to the Carpathians.

The program wil include greetings from Mayor Dever, patriotic speeches, baseball and soccer games, acrobatic stunts and a band concert. It is scheduled to begin at 1:30 p. m., closing at 8:30. Proceeds from the celebration will go into a charity fund of the alliance for the benefit of Polish people in Chicago.

I. C. ASKS STATE O. K. ON TAKING OFF 18 TRAINS

Springfield, Ill., July 18.—(AP)—Requests for permission to abandon eighteen trains in Illinois, Wisconsin, and Indiana, because of the increasing competition of privately owned automobiles and motor busses, were filed with the Illinois commerce commission by the Illinois Central railroad today. The proposed changes, if authorized, will affect six divisions of the road, the Decatur-Champaign division being the hardest hit.

On this division it is proposed that four trains be removed from the schedule and their places taken by adding a passenger car and a baggage car to regular freight trains. Between Bloomington and Clinton the road would abandon the through service now offered by two trains.

Between Chicago and Rockford it is proposed to abandon trains 35 and 36 and adjust the local stops of trains 16, 28, and 29 to take care of the local stops made by the trains withdrawn.

Limits Soldier Owned Cars; Blow at Barracks Rum Seen

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

HONOLULU, July 18.—A new move in Maj. Gen. Smith's campaign to suppress liquor traffic at Schofield barracks is seen in an order he has just issued controlling ownership of automobiles by enlisted men. The order provides that soldiers must obtain permits before purchasing cars, must keep their cars at the post, and must show that they can afford them.

Socialists Run Newspaper Man for La Follette Seat

Milwaukee, Wis., July 18.—(AP)—John M. Work, editorial writer on a local newspaper, was indorsed by the executive committee of the Socialist party as candidate at the primary election, if called by Gov. J. J. Blaine, to fill the vacancy in the United States senate caused by the death of Senator La Follette.

FIND GIRL IN HOUSEBOAT.

Gladys Oliver, 16, 27 South Honore street, missing from her home since a week ago, was found yesterday by Shakespeare avenue police with Clarence E. Caldwell, 1108 West Van Buren street, in a houseboat near the Belmont avenue bridge. Caldwell was charged with contributing to juvenile delinquency.

WINONA LAKE'S WATER SUPPLY WINS STATE O.K.

Bulletins issued yesterday by the Indiana State board of health assert that the pollution believed to be responsible for an outbreak of typhoid fever among attendants at a recent religious conference at Winona Lake, Ind., has been eliminated from the resort's water supply.

More than 100 cases of the disease among the 30,000 delegates to the campmeeting from Pennsylvania, Michigan, Ohio, Indiana, and Illinois have been reported. These cases in Chicago, one of which resulted fatally a few days ago, caused Health Commissioner Herman Bundesen to warn of a possible epidemic.

"The condition which was responsible for an outbreak of typhoid fever at Winona Lake, Ind., has been eliminated," says W. F. King, Indiana state health commissioner. "Laboratory tests of water samples show the Winona lake water supply to be safe and satisfactory. There is now no danger of typhoid fever as far as the water supply is concerned."

PREACHER QUITS DAYTON TO STUDY AT GREENCASTLE

Dayton, Tenn., July 18.—(AP)—The Rev. Howard G. Byrd, who retired from the pastorate of the Dayton Methodist Episcopal church last Sunday as an indirect result of the agitation of the evolution issue, plans to continue his education by attending De Paul university, Greencastle, Ind., and to remain in the ministry, he said tonight.

The minister withdrew when a part of his congregation protested against his invitation to Dr. Charles Francis Potter of the West Side Unitarian church of New York to speak from his pulpit. Dr. Potter had announced his subject as "Evolution."

A letter reached Byrd today from Bishop Theodore S. Henderson of the Cincinnati area, who expressed regret at the minister's action and hoped that he would return to the pastoral work.

CHARGES FORGERS FAKE DOCUMENTS OF SOVIET PLOTS

[Copyright: 1925: By the New York Times.]

LONDON, July 18.—Foreign Minister Tchitcherin of Russia in an interview telegraphed here from Moscow today gives the identity of three alleged German expert forgers who are said to be engaged in the producing of falsified international documents, from fake communist papers to passports of all nationalities, including American.

According to M. Tchitcherin, the standard price is $150 plus 100 German marks ($25) demanded by the forgery factory for every job, irrespective of what is wanted. M. Tchitcherin names a Russian emigrant, Druzhelovsky, as the leading Berlin operative, with an assistant named Goumansky. He says the Vienna forger's name is Yakubovich. Druzhelovsky, who reached Berlin last May, has been arrested, but the other two are still working, according to M. Tchitcherin.

The Moscow communication says M. Rakovsky, the Russian representative in London, has sent the British government a collection of forged documents prepared to create diplomatic conflicts between Russia and Great Britain. The collection includes faked Shanghai instructions purporting to be from Moscow and others involving Bulgaria.

75 AUTOS BURNED.

Tulsa, Okla., July 18.—(AP)—Seventy-five automobiles were burned when fire of unknown origin partly destroyed the Thomas Motor company today. The loss is estimated at $200,000.

Thieves Get Her Wedding Dress While She Swims

Ludington, Mich., July 18.—[Special.]—Having her wedding dress stolen while in swimming was the experience last evening of a young bride-to-be, visiting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Roger Ewing. When the Ewings and their guest returned from the beach, they found the house had been ransacked.

Racing Auto Plunges Through Fence; 12 Hurt

Grand Forks, N. D., July 18.—(AP)—A dozen persons were hurt, two critically when a racing automobile driven by Ray Claypool, Chicago, crashed through a fence and into a crowd of spectators at the North Dakota State Fair grounds here late today. Claypool was among the injured.

FUNDAMENTALISTS ASK FOR SCOPES' POST IN SCHOOL AT DAYTON

Dayton, Tenn., July 18.—(AP)—Whatever fate jury and judge may measure out to John T. Scopes, the Dayton high school will not lack a science teacher for the coming session.

From many states applications for Scopes' position have been pouring in.

"All the applicants write that they are in harmony with our fundamentalist views and would like to live and teach in a community of this kind," Walter White, county superintendent of schools, said. "They protest that they will set a good example for our boys and girls."

Prof. O. P. Armstrong, in the faculty at Spring City and the only other science teacher in the county, has not been present at the Scopes trial. He is attending the Summer school of the University of Tennessee. He used the same text book as the one taught by Scopes, but the county superintendent said that Mr. Armstrong avoided the instruction in the evolution theory after the enactment of the legislative ban. He is from Decatur, Ill.

Mother Jones Stricken by Inflammatory Rheumatism

Washington, D. C., July 18.—(AP)—Mrs. Mary Jones, known throughout the industrial world as Mother Jones, vigorous advocate of the cause of labor, is ill here of inflammatory rheumatism. She is 92 years old.

SOUTH TURNS TO NEW IDEAS, BUT NOT SOCIALISM

Scrutator Sees No Room for Bizarre Cults.

BY SCRUTATOR.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Dayton, Tenn., July 18.—[Special.]—The courthouse in which the issues of the sixteenth century have been thrashed out again is situated a few miles from long distance power transmission lines, which already link this region to the second greatest superpower development in North America.

It is just a few miles from the Tennessee river, which is now being surveyed by engineers in order that the development of the power in its headwaters will insure a maximum continuous flow at Muscle Shoals.

Great Increase in Wealth.

The wealth of the south increased probably fifty billion dollars from 1910 to the present time. Manufactured output, which was less than a billion in 1880, rose to three billions in 1910, and is probably around nine billions now. An industrial society of that nature will not remain subject to the kind of clerical political influence that precipitated the anti-evolution law.

The old theologians were right when they guessed that the more interesting this life becomes the less men will think of the other world. They were suspicious of wealth and sought the cloister. Much as we may regret the weakness of the flesh, it is here. Yes, the south is going to think more realistically, as the intellectuals who attack the old ideology so devoutly hope. But I wonder whether some of the liberals will be altogether pleased at the results they will help produce.

No Room for Cults.

The south is going to think realistically, and in terms of evolution, but it is not going to adopt any of the weird social cults which aliens have brought into some of our slums, nor is it going to fall for social reorganization. As the south becomes less ideological, it will be increasingly difficult for its politicians to deliver its vote for programs framed by urban politicians in the north who promise bread and circuses to the masses.

The spectacle of a section which is naturally militant and contributed most to the territorial expansion of this nation being led by the nose in support of such utopist and pacifist proposals as the Wilsonian league will become impossible.

As the south thinks in terms of evolution it will probably conclude that the real implications of the doctrine as applied to human society are opposed to the socialistic tendency and equalitarian doctrines with which the school of Bryan and the school of Darrow are alike imbued.

Those who know the associations of the American Civil Liberties union and the psychology of most of its backers have been inclined to chuckle over its intervention in the present case.

BRYAN SHUTS EYES TO EVOLUTION PROOFS, SAYS KIN OF HUXLEY

Julian Huxley, grandson of Charles Darwin's contemporary, Thomas H. Huxley, new senior demonstrator of zoology in Oxford university, England, and former assistant professor in Rice institute, Houston, Tex., has written exclusively for the United Press an answer to William Jennings Bryan's position as outlined at Dayton. In the following article Huxley pays bitter respects to fundamentalists.

BY JULIAN HUXLEY, M. A.
[Fellow of New College and senior demonstrator in zoology, Oxford University, England.]
[Copyright: 1925: By United Press.]

OXFORD, England, July 18.—William Jennings Bryan makes capital out of the disagreement of evolutionists. He seems to forget that there are three branches and scores of sects of Christianity with far more bitter differences.

There is no disagreement whatever among biologists that evolution has occurred and that it applies to man equally with other organisms. Bryan's own body contains far more circumstantial evidence for evolution than would be needed to convict a dozen men of murder.

Human development is even more striking. Do the fundamentalists realize that each of them before birth passed through a phase with a tail, and through an earlier phase with gill slits like a fish and started from one primitive cell? Evolution is obvious in the development of every human being.

I see that Bryan is threatening to "write the Bible into the United States constitution." [Bryan has denied he meant this literally.] Let us hope he remembers that this involves the belief in a flat earth, in demons, witchcraft, condonation of polygamy and wars of extermination.

Most important, it involves a conception of the Deity which is self-contradictory, since it is impossible to reconcile the warlike and jealous Jehovah with the God of the prophets or the loving father of the new testament.

But it deserves the credit for making the fight while others failed to come forward, and in this case it has wrought well for the American people. But in seeking a place in the southern sun for the doctrines of Darwin, Galton, Mendel, and other students of the life process it will probably, in the long run, revive much of the bias toward aristocratic modes of thought once so characteristic of the alluvial parts of the south.

Twilight of Old Beliefs.

The ferment has started history will tell what will be brewed. But my guess is that the future intellectual development of the south will be toward the right and not toward the left as regards social thinking and political doctrine. After all, Bryan has been rather consistent. If the currency ought to be regulated by popular vote, why not science? But the twilight of the old-fashioned democracy approaches as biology advances into the realm of politics and racial betterment.

YOUTH SHOT SIX TIMES BY 3 MEN—ALL BY MISTAKE

Tragedy of Errors May Kill Detective's Brother.

"I didn't do anything wrong, Mike—honest I didn't," protested Patrick O'Grady, 20 years old, yesterday after he had been shot six times. He was talking to his brother, Lieut. Michael Grady of the Detective bureau, and another brother, State Representative Thomas J. O'Grady.

And it seemed that the boy who may die from his wounds was telling the truth—he had done nothing wrong. And yet three men had shot at him. A taxi chauffeur with whom he had an argument over payment of the bill, a passing stranger who wore a tin star and carried a gun, and finally a colored householder who thought young O'Grady was a burglar. All of the shooters are under arrest.

Two Hire Taxi.

According to the statements to the police the facts were these: O'Grady and a friend, Joseph Burns, 5611 South Green street, hired the Premier cab driven by Sam Skidmore, 6348 Ellis avenue, early yesterday. Burns was taken home and then the chauffeur was told to take O'Grady to his home at 835 West Fifty-fourth place.

At 52d street and Wabash avenue the cab stopped and O'Grady alighted. He and the driver had a row and Skidmore shot him three times. O'Grady then started running away. Walter Haines, who says he obtained his special deputy sheriff's star because he was a friend of Judge John H. Lyle, saw O'Grady running and Skidmore shooting, so he followed Skidmore's example and fired several shots at the fleeing youth.

Darts Up on Porch.

O'Grady ran up on a porch at 5208 South Wabash avenue and when the bullets kept coming he jumped through a window into the house. Adolph L. Burns, colored, and his son, Rupert, who reside in the flat, came into the room and fired at O'Grady's prostrate form. A police squad heard the shooting and arrived to stop it.

At the Mercy hospital six bullets were found in O'Grady's body. The wounded youth said the row with Skidmore was over changing his $20 bill. He said Skidmore tore the bill in half, and half of the bill later was found in the chauffeur's pocket. Skidmore's first story was that O'Grady had a revolver. Later he said the youth appeared to be drunk. Haines, the special deputy sheriff, could only assert that he had made a terrible mistake.

PAY ROLL BANDITS GET $2,000.

St. Louis, Mo., July 18.—(AP)—Pay roll robbers in two holdups here today obtained $2,000 and an automobile.

HELD FOR SHOOTING

Samuel Skidmore, taxi driver, is held because he started the shooting in which Patrick O'Grady was the victim. He and O'Grady had an altercation over payment of a fare.

Walter Haines, wearing a deputy sheriff's star, is held for shooting Patrick O'Grady. He saw O'Grady fleeing from bullets fired by another man and joined in the affray.

DR. M. NIVEN'S WIDOW NOW IS SUING HIS SISTER

The late Dr. Maxim Niven, manufacturing perfumer of Chicago and a man of mystery, had a posthumous chapter started in his life yesterday, when his widow, who was formerly Countess Zicha of Poland, swore out a warrant for Mrs. Elizabeth Niven Volbers, said to be a sister of Dr. Niven, charging her with larceny of $2,000 rent money by bailee and also theft of a Louis Quinz bedroom set valued at $2,500.

Mrs. Volbers' address is given as 1137 East 72d street, which is an apartment house in which Mrs. Niven also lives and which was owned by Dr. Niven. The allegations of theft declare that Mrs. Volbers took the rent money and sold the furniture while the doctor and his wife were on their honeymoon in Europe two years ago.

The swearing out of the warrant is regarded as another step in the contest for the doctor's $100,000 estate now pending in the Circuit court.

One Child Dies from Scald, One of Burns

Two children died yesterday, one from burns and the other from scalds. Florence De Vore, 3 years old, 1429 South Ashland avenue, fell into a tub of scalding water. A bonfire near the home of Agnes Hirshman, 5 years old, 5548 South Winchester avenue, set fire to her clothes Friday night, and she died at the Auburn Park hospital.

Steal Karolyi's Trunk and $3,000 Garb in Paris Hotel

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, July 18. — Count Karolyi, former provisional president of Hungary and his wife today reported to the police that their trunk, containing $3,000 worth of clothing, had been mysteriously stolen from their hotel.

CONFESS FIFTY ROBBERIES, WITH LOOT OF $20,000

Frank Peters, 23 years old, 1708 South Morgan street, and Peter Urban, 2939 North 75th avenue, Elmwood, confessed to Lieut. John Ryan of the detective bureau at Desplaines street station late yesterday that since last March they had staged more than fifty robberies, gaining more than $20,000 loot.

Lieut. Ryan and his squad spying Peters and Urban in a doorman at 207 South Peoria street yesterday morning, arrested them when they found they had three guns. The men admitted they were waiting to hold up the carrier of the $8,000 pay roll of the American Tailors, 204 South Peoria street.

Hunts Stepfather, Missing After 10 Days' Wedded Life

Albert Long, 2136 West Congress street, appealed to the police at Cedar Rapids, Ia., yesterday for aid in the search for his stepfather, James Jackson, who disappeared mysteriously after ten days of wedded life. Long said that his mother met Jackson through the Chicago Friendship club at 2828 Broadway and that he represented himself as a Cedar Rapids contractor. He disappeared about a week ago.

POISON MOTHER ON STAND DENIES HER CONFESSION

Mrs. Cunningham Sane, Alienist Reports.

Speaking in a flat but steady tone, Mrs. Anna Cunningham, on trial at Crown Point, Ind., for the murder of her son Walter, at their home in Gary, by giving him arsenic, yesterday repudiated the confession which was obtained from her following her arrest. In the confession she said she murdered two others of her children with poison.

Her denial of knowledge of the confession came when she was called to the stand by the state, which sprang a surprise by asking and obtaining a mental examination of the woman.

Jury Excluded During Test.

The jury was excluded at this phase of the trial, and Mrs. Cunningham was declared sane by Dr. Julius Grinker of Chicago, an alienist called by the state.

Tomorrow the defense alienists will examine her and report to the court.

The judge then will make his decision on her mental condition, and this will determine whether the disputed confession shall be admitted in evidence.

Questioned by Prosecutor.

Mrs. Cunningham, dressed in the black widow's weeds she has worn in court since the trial began, was questioned by Assistant State's Attorney James McNess.

A handkerchief pressed to her face, she answered his first question by denying that she knew she made the admission as to her son's death. Quietly then she answered with a plain "No" as the prosecutor questioned her as to each detail of the confession.

TILE INQUIRY IS NEAR END; NO GRAFT FOUND

Only the questioning of Ald. Patrick J. Ryan now stands in the way of a report by Assistant State's Attorneys Joseph P. Savage and Robert McMillan that the tile ordinance investigation has been a flat failure as a search for evidence of graft.

W. D. Allen, an official of the Portland Cement association, on whom depended to a large extent the result of the inquiry, returned from his vacation yesterday, went to the state's attorney's office, and submitted to questioning.

COOLIDGE CALLS ON WEEKS; FINDS HIM IMPROVING

Swampscott, Mass., July 18.—[Special.]—President Coolidge called on Secretary of War Weeks at West Gloucester this afternoon, and was greatly encouraged by the rapid progress the secretary has made in his fight to regain his health.

SECRETARY WEEKS.

Slipping away from White Court with Secretary Everett Sanders and secret service men, the President motored to West Gloucester, arriving there about 3 o'clock. At Coles Island the President was met on the front porch by Secretary Weeks. According to Secretary Sanders, Mr. Weeks, while still walking with a cane, looked fine.

"He welcomed us enthusiastically and seemed in excellent spirits," Mr. Sanders said. "His color was good and he apparently is rapidly regaining his health."

Secretary Weeks feels that his return to Washington is a matter his physicians must first pass on, and he has stated that he will do what they advise.

DEVER WARNS TAXI DRIVERS WAR MUST END

Cab Burned and Two Are Damaged by Bricks.

Mayor Dever stepped into the warfare between two rival taxicab companies yesterday and issued a warning that unless a truce is agreed upon immediately drastic measures would be taken to quell the outbreaks.

"The present taxi drivers' war must stop, and stop immediately," asserted the mayor, after he had been informed that one taxicab had been destroyed by fire and two others partly wrecked by a bombardment of bricks at Robey street and Armitage avenue.

"We will see whether the taximen control and own the streets or the people. I intend to confer with Chief Collins on the situation. The latest incident, the burning of a cab on the northwest side, is about the limit. This lawlessness spells defiance of constituted authority."

Later Chief Collins directed Chief of Detectives Schoemaker to station two squads in the loop district, with instructions to arrest all cab drivers engaging in disputes. The orders from the chief's office stated that all belligerent taxicab drivers are to be held all night. Captains in the outlying districts were instructed to take steps to prevent outbreaks between the chauffeurs of the two rival companies.

Wild West Display of Guns.

The burning of the taxicab on the northwest side early yesterday was attended by a wild west display of revolvers, the police were informed by witnesses.

Three Premier cabs, carrying four and five men each, and a supply of bricks and gasoline, the police were informed, drove up alongside three Yellow cabs at Robey street and Armitage avenue.

At pistol point the Yellow cab drivers were held to one side while their cabs became a target for a bombardment of bricks. In parting the wrecking crews poured gasoline over one of the partially demolished cabs and set it afire.

The police and fire departments were called, but before the arrival of the former the attacking party had fled. The cabs used by the sluggers bore no license plates, the police were informed by the Yellow drivers.

Linked With Hotel Battle.

Revival of the taxicab warfare is believed to be a second chapter to the battle which broke out in front of Hotel La Salle and Hotel Sherman on Thursday night. The trouble on that occasion arose from a dispute over rights for those stands, the De Luxe cab organization, which held rights to the stands, having gone temporarily out of business.

For several years a dispute has existed among various taxicab companies over the exclusive right to the Hotel La Salle stand. A few years ago the Hotel La Salle company operated its own fleet of taxicabs. Outbreaks between the hotel company's drivers and those employed by the Yellow Cab company were frequent and at times tied up the traffic in La Salle street between Washington and Madison streets.

Hotel Sells Cabs; Rows Go On.

To keep peace between the warring factions of taxicab drivers it was decided to detail two policemen in plain clothes from the Central station and a mounted policeman at the hotel's taxi stand. The Hotel La Salle company sold its cars to the Diamond Cab company and with the cabs went the privilege of handling the hotel's passenger traffic. Outbreaks occurred between the Diamond drivers and Yellow chauffeurs. The Diamond company disbanded and the newly organized De Luxe Cab company began to handle passengers at the Hotel La Salle stand. When the latter went out of business the hotel stand became a battleground between Premier Cab company and Yellow Cab company drivers.

The Premier was organized shortly after officials of the chauffeurs' union were ousted from control of the Checker Cab company. The Checker company was then placed on the unfair list of the Chicago Federation of Labor through the efforts, it is said, of Tim Neary, the head of the chauffeurs' union.

It has been said that leaders of organized labor in Chicago are financially interested in the Premier Cab company, of which Peter A. Mortenson, former superintendent of city schools, is president.

TICKLED; OBJECTS

MISS GERTRUDE SISSONS.
[TRIBUNE Photo.]

Jacob Weisels, wealthy St. Louis coffee dealer, was enjoying Chicago sights on top of a Michigan avenue bus yesterday morning. Miss Gertrude Sissens, 17 years old, a bookkeeper for Bernhard's clothing house, 162 North State street, told police later he even went so far as to tickle her knees. Then she arose and planted two husky rights on Weisels' jaw. Traffic Policeman James Barron took Weisels to the central police station where Miss Sissons charged him with disorderly conduct. Weisels said he was married.

BUSINESS AGENT OF UNION SOUGHT AS WIFE BEATER

Roy Tagney, 35 years old, business agent of the Machinery, Safe Movers and Riggers' union, is being sought by police for beating and seriously injuring his wife, Irene, 29 years old, in their home, 1237 Ardmore avenue, Friday.

The beating took place, according to Mrs. Tagney's mother, Mrs. Annie Blizt, when Tagney went home and accused his son, Roy, 6 years old, of lying to him. She said he choked Roy, Mrs. Tagney interfered, and then Tagney struck his wife over the head with a revolver and kicked her when she fell.

Tagney fled. Mrs. Tagney is in Ravenswood hospital with two broken ribs and a probable skull fracture.

The Tagneys have been married eleven years. There are two children, Roy and Lorraine, 2 years old.

LORADO TAFT YET HOPES TO SAVE GERMAN BUILDING

Rosenwald Offers a Big Part of Money.

A plea to save the German building, relic of the World's Fair, in Jackson Park, which the South Park commissioners plan to raze, was made yesterday by Lorado Taft, Chicago sculptor.

Funds may yet be raised to pay for the restoration of the building, Mr. Taft said. Julius Rosenwald has offered to defray a large part of the expenses of restoration, he said. Mr. Taft himself has offered to subscribe $1,000.

Waited for Practical Plan.

The commissioners decided to destroy the building after delaying action in order that a citizens' committee might furnish a plan to save the structure. No practical plan was advanced by the committee so the board decided to raze the building.

"We must not sit passively by and allow the German building to be reduced to a memory when the city needs beauty—old, historic beauty—so badly," said Mr. Taft.

Committee Named 3 Months Ago.

Three months ago a committee, composed of Ernest Kruetgen, Mrs. F. W. Blocki, Judge Oscar Hebel, Henry Stuckart, Mrs. David MacLean, Mrs. Albion L. Headburg, and Paul F. O. Mueller, the architect who built the building in 1892, was appointed to seek means of restoring the building.

BEG YOUR PARDON!

On July 11 a story appeared in THE TRIBUNE stating that Cooney Brothers (National Theatres Corporation) and other motion picture theater owners had been merged with Ascher Brothers. J. J. Cooney, president of the National Theatres corporation, denies that and says that his corporation has not been merged or consolidated with any other firm, nor was any such action contemplated.

Recently THE TRIBUNE printed a story stating H. A. Thompson, 1835 South 49th court, Cicero, was robbed of $10 by a woman in a loop drug store. This statement is denied by Mr. Thompson, who says the $10 bill was taken from his companion, George Kerby of Milwaukee.

GERMANY PLANS TO LEAVE PARTY AT POLE 6 MOS.

[Copyright: 1925: By the New York Times.]

BERLIN, July 18.—Germany has announced the plan to have a Zeppelin land a party at the north pole early in the autumn and pick them up the following spring.

Proctor Adrian Mohr, polar authority, with the Norwegian pilot, Majf Tryggne Gran, who has had experience in expeditions to the south polar regions, have volunteered to take charge of a party of eight and to pass six months in the darkness on the polar ice cap. This projected expedition is not connected with the one planned by Dr. Nansen, to which Dr. Eckener has promised his support.

To modernize the expedition, the leaders plan to take a radio sender, which will enable them to broadcast from the pole to the entire northern hemisphere by intermediate stations placed near the arctic circle.

The latest weather reports at the pole, as well as living conditions, descriptions of the aurora borealis, polar blizzards and scientific findings of the expedition will be broadcast nightly.

CHICAGO'S SHARE OF THE TAXES.

A month ago one of the farm journals said Chicago was not justified in raising the cry of taxation without representation. Chicago should have only a third of the legislature, though it has half the population, so the argument ran, because through tax dodging it pays less than its share of the state's total income.

To support this argument, a number of instances of the bearing of the direct property tax were cited. Thus it was shown that there were 287,000 automobiles in Cook county in 1923, but only 18,000 were assessed as property. Similarly, there was $19,000,000 worth of grain in storage in Chicago, but only $400,000 worth of it was directly taxed. Downstate the proportion of automobiles and granaries which dodged taxation was much smaller.

The fallacy in this argument, we had supposed, was so apparent as to need no reply, but the argument has been so widely copied in downstate newspapers that we fear there may be many voters who may have been taken in by it.

The answer was contained in a series of articles sent to THE TRIBUNE from Springfield by Oscar Hewitt several months ago. Mr. Hewitt analyzed the sources of the state's revenues. He showed that Cook county in 1923 paid 44 per cent of the direct property taxes in the state, and so large a proportion of the inheritance and corporation taxes and other sources of revenue that the total share paid by Cook county was about 60 per cent of the state's total income.

The answer to the farm journal's case, then, is that if automobiles, grain and clocks were assessed in Cook County as rigorously as they are downstate, Chicago would pay not 60 per cent but 75 per cent of the state's total revenues. Paying 60 per cent of the taxes and having half the population, Chicago nevertheless has only a third of the legislature. To call that situation taxation without representation is not to overstate the case.

PROSPECTS OF SOUND TAX REVISION.

A Washington dispatch reports that another controversy on tax revision between congress and the administration is pending. That goes without saying. Congressmen who insist that taxation shall be used primarily as a means to achieve social results they deem desirable will not alter their opinions at the behest of Mr. Coolidge or Mr. Mellon. The fact that their theories of taxation, in so far as they affected legislation last year, have worked badly will not take the edge off their ardor. Also there will be the usual political concessions to the plausible appeals of prejudice and sentiment.

But it is reasonable to hope that experience with the present law and the set of public sentiment will have a wholesome effect upon the new legislation. Sound tax principles are in a better light than they were a year ago and will have more influence in shaping the much needed revision than in the late congress. In what degree, depends chiefly upon the general agricultural and business situation next winter, but also upon the carrying on of an effective campaign of education in sound taxation policy. That is the responsibility of the press, of public men, and of business and civic associations. Taxes are nowadays a serious problem and a policy which shall meet our fiscal needs without unnecessary check upon agricultural, industrial, and commercial enterprise is greatly needed. Europe is regaining productive and commercial efficiency and we must be in condition to meet competitors on fair terms as well as to provide for our own varied needs. We cannot be if we have to cope with unreasonable and unnecessary exactions.

THE CITY OF THE FUTURE.

Chicago's congested districts—the loop is not intended—are decreasing in density, says Municipal Librarian Frederick Rex. He finds of the twelve most congested districts of the city two-thirds have diminishing population. The most thickly populated district now has 21 per cent fewer inhabitants than the most thickly populated district of 1910. The densest square mile of 1900 had 24 per cent more denizens than the densest square mile of today.

We hope this reveals a deliberate tendency which will persist and spread. Mr. Oscar Hewitt, commenting on Mr. Rex's survey, remarks that higher wages have permitted many to move to better housing. It is probable that social influences are at work. There is a minority they do not reach but probably wherever economic conditions permit, the tendency of our people is to get out of packed quarters. The prairie invites expansion, and means of transportation, in spite of politics, increase. The automobile has got people away from their own neighborhood mentally as well as physically. It has brought them knowledge of suburban living conditions, of the charm of tree lined roads and grass and shrubs and bungalows. And automobiles are now within the reach of men who though they did not live in slums, lived in overcrowded districts. These are carried, it seems probable, in the current which is moving those of more means into outlying districts and into the suburbs and farther and farther from the center.

This centrifugal tendency is going to transform urban organization and create a different kind of city. It is going to mean higher sanitary standards and better living. Municipal policy as well as unofficial civic activity ought to do all possible to encourage it. The recent real estate convention's project for a "buy a home" campaign may not be altruistic in its motive, but it will have highly altruistic results if the individual is safeguarded and directed to sound investment.

NORTH AMERICANS.

South Americans object to the designation of the people of the United States as Americans. It is a point of considerable importance with them that if a citizen of the United States wishes to call himself an American he should be careful to say that he is a North American. They also are Americans, South Americans.

Regard for the amenities, even small, makes international good will, and that is what we have been trying to establish between this country and South American countries. But hasn't the Latin sensibility developed an unnecessary and unreasonable point? A Brazilian is a South American, but we presume that he is conscious as a Brazilian more than as a South American. So with the Chilean, Argentinian, etc. The general term of South American does not realize their nationalism.

North American does not define the nationalism of the United States. It is as applicable to the Canadian and to the Mexican. If the American were designated as a citizen of the United States the designation would lack completeness. There are other united states. The complete appellation must be "citizen of the United States of North America." Then we might have everybody's susceptibilities guarded, but the American could not carry the tag.

"American" is not an arrogation. It is not an assumption of inherent superiority, or of overlordship in a hemisphere. It is older than the nation. Americans were so known in Europe when a Virginian probably preferred to be known as a Virginian. Some of them, we regret to say, do now.

If our Latin friends insist that we are not Americans, we are completely out of luck and have no name at all.

PERSECUTION OR PROSECUTION.

To the several issues raised in public discussion of the Tennessee law under which the teacher Scopes is now being tried, we wish to add one we think is of importance.

Let us concede, at least for the sake of this argument, that the curriculum of the public school is a lawful and even a proper subject of regulation by the legislature. That is, let us concede that the Tennessee legislature has the authority to say what subjects shall be taught in the public schools of the state and that it was wise for it to forbid the teaching of evolution.

Neither of these propositions are absurd. Both may be supported by arguments or considerations which are neither irrational nor unworthy of examination by intelligent minds.

But we suggest that when the Tennessee legislature not only forbid the teaching of evolution, but imposed a penalty which for a teacher is by no means a light one, it was exercising authority in form and manner obnoxious to the spirit of American liberty and savoring of persecution rather than of impersonal policy.

It will be argued that a prohibition without a penalty is a farce. That depends upon the nature of the prohibition and it does not apply, in our judgment, in this case. We have no doubt that if this prohibition has the support of the public opinion of the people of Tennessee, that is, of the consensus of the people, it needs no penalty, for as a mere solemn assertion of policy and direction to the public school authorities of Tennessee it would be obeyed.

Of course, if the Tennessee law is one of the familiar kind which is the imposition upon the timorous mind of politicians of an organized and vociferous minority, it probably would not be respected and needs what force it can derive from a penalty. But if it does express the deliberate judgment of the community, the addition of the penalty is rather the expression of the will to persecute than a safeguard to insure obedience by the school authorities.

We do not think Americans can be too watchful of the spirit of intolerance and persecution, which has generally justified itself by lofty motives, and this aspect of the Tennessee law should not be ignored. The school authorities of Dayton have not been directed by law to remove evolution from the curriculum, but the individual who teaches it is to be punished.

THE NEWER SCRAWLING.

Generally speaking, we are sympathetic with the young folks of the land. That is to say, neither in their dress nor manners do they cause us undue alarm. Their penmanship, however, is something quite different and altogether blameworthy. It's not entirely their fault, but rather, we suspect, the fault of a system of writing which was introduced into the schools some eight or ten years ago.

Penmanship can have only two virtues: Legibility and beauty. On a scale of 100, the newer scrawling rates 34 in legibility and something less than zero esthetically. We might bear with the youngsters, however, were there any improvement as they advance toward maturity. There is none.

Something shapeless in the shaping of their letters appears to be at the root of the matter. The hand of a young lady old enough to vote and smoke is as immature as that of a third grader. She can't conceal her deficiency behind a screen of unnecessary strokes.

At its copybook best, the new writing is rococo; at its very general worst, it is rococo-in-ruins. It looks to us like a conspiracy on the part of the typewriter manufacturers.

WHY NOT TO SPARTA?

The 122d Field artillery has been ordered to Camp Grant with the infantry of the 33d division, National Guards. There is no artillery range at Camp Grant, therefore there will be no shooting for the 122d during this, its annual camp.

Yet the one function of artillery is to shoot. Artillery does not charge the enemy. Artillerymen are not called on to perform difficult evolutions. They are still required to ride horses and to care for them. At Camp Grant the 122d will get a little experience in camping, but in the main it will get what it has at its armory, no more.

In France the British artillery was spick and span. The French artillery seemed not. But the French artillery could shoot rings round the British. When the American artillery reached France its men could ride, but they had to go to the French to learn to shoot. This statement is at least a rough approximation of conditions there in essentials.

A pleasant outing at Camp Grant, we are sure, will not console the fine young soldiers of the 122d for missing a fortnight of real practice on the range. As artillerymen they know that the thing expected of them is to shoot, and shoot straight. As artillerymen they will want to excel in the sole essential function of artillery, to shoot. They drill all the year without firing, except an occasional salute. Now they have this two weeks, which for many of the 122d is all the vacation they will get, and they are giving it patriotically to the service. We think they should be given the training they cannot get at home in armory or drill field, and which they can only get on an artillery range.

We do not know why the 122d is sent to Camp Grant, an infantry camp, instead of to Sparta, Wis., the artillery range. Is it a reversion to the old militia stuff or evidence that the reactionaries of the regular army are getting back in the saddle at Washington? Can't something be done about it?

THE COMMUTER'S TICKET.

There are yellow snapdragons and yellow dalsies. The breeze waves the fox grass across the fields. The hedges of Illinois roses are gay with bloom and bud. Petals are dropping, larkspur and phlox. The flowers of the hollyhocks are mounting higher and higher on the tall stalks. The cottager walks in the fullness of things. The corn is in tassel and the garden fills the gathering basket. Late phlox has pink tipped buds. The thrush still sings to the candle lights in the west of the woods but the cricket has begun in the fence corner. The cicada will begin in the oaks. The thickets are full of wild sunflowers and early goldenrod ready to weave a cloth of gold. Petals are falling and the goldfinch will be in the seeds. Summer begins to hum.

INSULLIZING THE DUNES.

Samuel Insull and his associates have formally taken possession of the Chicago, South Shore and South Bend railroad. This line runs over the Illinois Central tracks to Kensington, and thence electrically over its own tracks through the dune country to South Bend, Ind.

Already alluring posters advertising Mr. Insull's new line are to be found on his elevated platforms. His organizing genius is at work on a scheme for improving the passenger and freight services. People who want to go to the dunes won't have to worry about a shortage of trains.

Lovers of the dunes will accept the new management with mixed feelings. In the last ten years they have seen their playground changed from a place where you could wander all day without seeing a soul to one where you can scarcely get out of sight and hearing of picnickers. If Mr. Insull makes it easier for the veterans to reach their favorite haunts, it will be easier for other folks to get there, too.

There isn't anything to be done about it. The only thing the old-timers can do is to stay away in summer if they don't fancy crowds and go out at other times of the year when fear of the cold keeps the crowds away. There should be consolation in the thought that the dunes are superb in winter and at their best in the first days of spring.

OUTDOORS.

Bob Becker is writing these days on trout fishing in the high Sierras of California. He tells of pack trails through the wildnerness and of forests of magnificent pines, some of them high as an eight story building.

That's our American outdoors. It has a breadth about it and a sense of the primitive that the older countries don't know anything about. We still have mountains without tourist hotels perched on their sides and forests that are not pruned like apple orchards.

Becker says the native sons call their high Sierras the "California Alps." That shows the native sons don't know much about the Alps except that they are mountains, and still less about the poetic values of names. Why mention the Alps at all? Are they better than the "High Sierras."

Some day this country will be as thickly settled as Europe. The wilderness will be dotted with golf courses and every mountain will have its inclined railway to the summit. We're glad we're going to miss that.

Editorials of the Day

THE TRIBUNE TOWER.
[Illinois State Journal, Springfield.]

THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE has occupied its magnificent new home, an architectural pile that takes its place among the classics of all time. The State Journal wishes to be included among those who offer their felicitations to THE TRIBUNE and to the people of Chicago and even to the world that has acquired this treasure in art. It is fortunate for the local community and for the world at large that industry recognizes a deeper obligation than the mere necessity to provide quarters for itself. THE TRIBUNE might have erected a warehouse. It could conduct its operations within four plain walls with economy and efficiency. It chose the other course—to build that which would serve its purposes and also be a joy forever to millions who will gain from the beauties of its tower an inspiration and hope.

WE LEARN HOW TO PLAY.
[New York World.]

It is interesting, this trend toward the five-day week, as indicated by the World's survey. Up to a few years ago we were proverbially the busiest nation on earth. We hurried, bustled, counted minutes. Now, however, there are signs of a change.

We have not exactly slowed up, for the pace of American life is still terrific, heaven knows. But we seem to have taken thought where all this commotion leads to. We play more, take longer week ends, as foreigners are quick to tell us. We had almost drained dry the cup of satisfaction that comes from material achievement, and there has been, apparently a general casting about for something else. The elusive satisfaction that comes from broader living is still a little strange to us. Since it does not lend itself to production statistics, we have had our doubts about it. But we have had a taste of it and fallen under its glamour.

We are still a little shy, but unless signs fail we shall continue to golf and dream in the sunlight, with increasing shamelessness, regardless how the efficiency experts tear their hair. A few more years and we may have the reputation of being—many of us—the most charming and cultured loafers in the world. Well, there is much to be said for a charming and cultured loafer.

ONCE A POMPOUS SENIOR.

"Where's that confounded office boy?" stormed the manager.

"When he went out for lunch," ventured the stenographer, "he said he'd be late because he had to buy a new dress suit for his college reunion."—Epworth Herald.

DANGERS IN WATER.

VACATIONISTS should be interested in the water they drink. Of those who came to grief as the result of their vacations, a certain proportion suffer from water borne infections.

If the vacation is taken in an automobile, there is a fair chance of getting water from certified wells. In Pennsylvania, Ohio, Illinois and probably in other states, the state health departments have the policy of certifying wells located on the state highways. In most instances these certified wells are marked with a state health department seal, or some similar device.

When this policy does not prevail, E. D. Rich advises tourists to carry drinking water with them. In the middle west automobiles are equipped with a type of water jar furnished to keep the water cool. Elsewhere, cool water can be carried in thermos bottles. The bottles should be filled from some municipal water supply known to be good.

Possibly before long state health departments may adopt the custom of certifying municipal water supplies as they do wells along highways and as the federal government does with railway water supplies.

If a tourist must have water and none can be had from a certified supply, Dr. Rich has some advice for him to follow.

First, let him look around the well. How far off is the privy? The stable? The manure pile? Are these placed between the well and the main lake or main river, draining the under soil of the neighborhood? Is the well a bored or dug well? How is it covered? Is there a bucket or a pump?

The wash of the soil, leaves and all other kinds of trash and pollution are liable to get into an open top dug well. Any one who has ever seen an old fashioned well cleaned out, who has seen the buckets of dirt, slime and decaying vegetable matter and occasional rats, come up, will appreciate how much an open top well is befouled. If a bucket is operated, the water may be polluted by typhoid bacilli on the hands of the man who pulls on the rope.

Mr. Rich advises people to pay no attention to the commendation of the owners of the well. "My family have drunk this water for 30 years, and none of them have had typhoid fever" may be true, or the speaker may have forgotten. But, in the event that it is true, it does not follow that a stranger using the well may not become infected. People can get used to anything, by drinking it daily for over thirty years!

People are advised not to drink from springs about which they know nothing. The water in a spring is nothing but seep water. In most cases it has seeped through nearby ground. Our forefathers located their homes near springs. That policy may have been all right in their day, because the country was an almost uninhabited wilderness. Now man has polluted most of the soil and the case is different.

It is always risky to drink water from a stream. The chances are that a badly polluted stream is less dangerous than a clearer one. Drinking from the first may cause a diarrhoea, which will save one from having typhoid fever. When one is not certain about the water, let him drink tea or cambric tea. Or water that has been heated and then cooled.

Water can be sterilized by adding 9 drops of iodine to each glassful, or by treating it with halazone or hypochlorite.

TO ERADICATE WARTS.

B. J. C. writes: I have a big wart on my finger and if you could tell me of a way to get rid of it I would be grateful.

REPLY:

Burn it well. Use a hot needle or pin, acid or nitrate of silver. A physician might use an electric spark to burn with.

PAVING PROMISED SOON.

Chicago, July 11.—[Friend of the People.]—The property owners approved the project for paving North Austin avenue between Grace and Diversey, and on Belmont between Central and Narragansett. We were notified by the city that our sidewalks would be laid between Roscoe and Belmont on Austin. These have been laid for some time, but there has been no indication of the paving being done. B. J.

Austin avenue, between Diversey and Grace, and Belmont avenue, between Central and Narragansett avenues, were ordered paved at public hearings recently held, but we cannot state at this time if the improvements will be made this year. The ordinances for these improvements have not yet been passed by the city council.

As to the sidewalk on Austin avenue, between Roscoe and Belmont avenues, which is included in our proceeding for a system of sidewalks, Austin avenue, etc., as soon as the assessment roll for this sidewalk is filed in court and confirmed, we will be ready to advertise for bids on the work. We hope to have this sidewalk laid this year.
EDWARD J. GLACKIN, Secretary,
Board of Local Improvements.

MORTGAGEE DIES.

McHenry, Ill., July 15.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—A buys a house and lot from B, subject to a mortgage of $800. There has been no demand for interest on it, although due six months ago. I since learned the mortgagee is deceased, having died some months previous to the date of the note. Will A have to be notified of mortgage or interest being due, as there are no heirs living, it seems? S. K.

The mortgage will remain enforcible by the heirs or beneficiaries under the will TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

FROM THE TRIBUNE'S COLUMNS

60 YEARS AGO TODAY

JULY 19, 1865.

NEW YORK.—A special to the Post from Washington says President Johnson changed the place of imprisonment for Dr. Mudd, Arnold, O'Laughlin, and Spangler, convicted as conspirators in the assassination of President Lincoln, and they were sent to the Dry Tortugas instead of the Albany penitentiary.

SPRINGFIELD.—Gov. Oglesby appointed the following as a board of trustees of the Home for Children of Deceased Soldiers: Thomas B. Bryan, Chicago; John L. Lincher, Danville; Alfred Kitchell, Olney; J. W. King, Jacksonville; A. Babcock, Canton; George W. Aiken, Benton; Anson Miller, Rockford; John P. Reynolds, Springfield, and Gustavus Koerner, Belleville.

SPRINGFIELD. — The city council adopted an ordinance donating six acres in Oak Ridge cemetery for the National Lincoln monument.

NEW YORK.—G. W. Gayle, the man who offered $1,000,000 for the murder of President Lincoln, the then Vice President Johnson and Secretary Seward, arrived at Hilton Head, S. C., from Washington under heavy guard and was sent to Fort Pulaski.

CINCINNATI.—Blind Tom, the musical slave prodigy of Columbus, Ga., who created such a sensation four or five years ago, is in this city. He is now but sixteen years old, but his rendition of the most difficult pieces of music is marvelous, especially in view of the fact that he has been blind from birth, is more than half idiotic and learns to play everything from hearing it once or twice played by others.

CHICAGO.—The cornerstone of the new Plymouth Congregational church was laid with simple and impressive ceremonies. The exercises were in charge of the pastor, the Rev. Dr. H. D. Kitchell. The cost of the new structure will be $60,000.

CHICAGO.—The board of education elected the following high school teachers: George Howland, principal; Edward C. Delano, James R. Dewey, George P. Welles, Edward C. Porter, Oscar Faulhaber, and Gertrude Van Patten.

25 YEARS AGO TODAY

JULY 19, 1900.

CHICAGO.—Senator M. A. Hanna, chairman of the executive committee of the Republican national committee, leased sixteen flats—in all forty rooms—in the building to the south of the Auditorium Annex, which has been used as an adjunct to the hotel, for national headquarters. Secretary Perry Heath and Committeemen Payne of Wisconsin, New of Indiana, Kerens of Missouri, and Stewart of Illinois will be at headquarters from now on.

LONDON.—Following China's declaration of war against Russia, the latter, which now has 40,000 soldiers in Siberia, is sending 30,000 reinforcements. So far as Russia is concerned its war will be against the Boxers only and not against the Chinese government.

GEORGETOWN, Ky.—The prosecution in the Goebel murder trial scored heavily when William H. Culton, one of the indicted men, took the stand and testified to a plot to kill Goebel. Culton told of a talk with Henry Youtsey, in which Youtsey explained how Goebel could be shot from the window of the secretary of state's office without danger of detection. Gov. Taylor, now a refugee in Indiana, was accredited with furnishing the money to bring the mountain men to Frankfort at the time of the assassination.

ST. PAUL, Minn.—Isaac M. Hamilton of Chicago was elected president of the National Republican league.

BLOOMINGTON, Ill.—John W. Baker of Chicago and Miss Retta Cora Reeve of this city were married at the home of the bride's father, S. D. Reeve, superintendent of the eastern division of the Chicago and Alton.

WASHINGTON.—Gov. Gen. Leonard Wood of Cuba is in the capital. He reports that the Cubans are anxious for autonomy. He believes, however, that some troops should be maintained in the island for some time yet, but is not in favor of native levies.

CHICAGO.—Frank O. Lowden was elected president of the board of trustees of the Pullman Free School of Manual Training, provided for by the will of the late George M. Pullman. Mr. Lowden said plans for the building will be pushed, but a definite site in Pullman has not yet been selected.

10 YEARS AGO TODAY

JULY 19, 1915.

LONDON.—A Times correspondent with the Russian forces after having visited all the Grand Duke's armies from Bukowina to Warsaw says: "It is figured that from 6,000,000 to 7,000,000 men are engaged from the Baltic to Bessarabia. The Russians never were in better shape to meet an attack. But in view of the incredible strength of the enemy, a terrible battle is to be expected, the outcome of which it is impossible to foretell."

LONDON.—Terrific fighting, which marked the beginning several days ago of Field Marshal von Hindenburg's drive against the Russians on a 1,000 mile front, continues. With Warsaw and Riga the immediate objectives, the Germans have massed enormous numbers of soldiers on the eastern front and violent fighting is reported from the Baltic to Bessarabia.

CHICAGO. — Casimir Arelszewski confessed that he murdered Jacob Mislich, Mislich's wife, daughter, and granddaughter with an ax in their Blue Island home for a small hoard he knew Mislich had hidden in a bed. He said he was frightened away by the barking of a dog after the murders and did not get the money.

CHICAGO.—Max Palenske, assistant cashier of the Drovers' National bank, is being sought in connection with alleged shortages in his accounts said to approximate $30,000. He disappeared suddenly from Lake Geneva, where he had gone for a vacation. It was reported he has spent money lavishly for gifts for a stenographer in a large loop bank.

CHICAGO.—Miss Marie Dwyer, 3611 Wilton avenue; Miss Nora May, 1438 Fulton street; Frank J. Kelley, 3929 North Spaulding avenue; Gustave H. Vetter, 1646 Irving Park boulevard, and Stanley Cokesky, 2314 North Hamilton avenue, all good swimmers, were caught by the undertow at Cornelis beach and drowned.

POSTAL RATES.

Chicago, July 14.—I have noticed R. A. Levin's letter regarding the increased postal rate, which, he says, spells ruin for himself as well as other small business men. I certainly do not agree with him on this matter.

I have been a secretary for twelve years and in touch with all the inside dope. My employer says, and I am in a position to vouch for the truth of this statement, that the increased postage cost has not affected his earnings to any great extent.

I was an interested follower of the recent fight by the postal employés for a decent living wage and the President's determination to have a higher postal rate included in this bill. They both won their battle.

Statistics show that the cost to the government of distributing advertising matter is more than their revenue. It stands to reason that if the postage was lowered, more people would send out advertising material, increasing the operating costs to the government, but not affecting their revenue to any extent.
E. WILSON.

THE $40,000,000 DEFICIT.

Chicago, July 14.—Economy in the postoffice is a matter of elimination. That is, eliminate about ninety-five per cent of the political jobholders, men appointed for the votes they can get, and substitute in their place competent men fit for the job.

The political jobholders mentioned are the inspection force. That is known in the postal service as a "snap" job. To get such a job it is necessary to know the postmaster or somebody connected with him. These jobs pay $4,000 and up, according to grade, while the clerks and carriers, who do twice to three times as much revenue producing labor, receive $1,700.

Congress should abolish all political appointments in the postal service and fill the jobs with civil service men. The bureaucratic methods used by the postoffice department will never effect any economy, nor will they wipe out the enormous deficit mentioned in the article in this morning's TRIBUNE. I, myself, think that the $40,000,000 deficit is a bunch of propaganda by the department to get the publishers aroused against the raise of rates and wages.

There is something grossly wrong in the management when any business goes $40,000,000 into the hole in three months and then has to allbi it by saying the increased wages caused it. The increase in wages is more than provided by the increase in postal rates. There has been since the new rate went into effect up until the middle of June an increase in business such as never before was handled at this office, and I believe the same condition has prevailed the country over.

The real way to economize in the postoffice is to remove Harry New and put in a man such as Will Hays was; one who can agree with the help.
WILLIAM GROVE.

DESERTED DOGS.

Palos Park, Ill., July 13.—Every summer it falls to my lot to hunt homes for deserted dogs. Yesterday some one left one in the forest preserve across the road from me and up to now I have been unable to find its owner. How can any one be so cruel as to raise an animal and desert it like that?

This poor animal acts more like a human than an animal. It lies around my place and watches every car that passes, and if one stops and drives off again the dog looks at it and cries. Two or three times the dog actually tried to be run over by deliberately stretching out across the road, causing the automobiles to be driven around it, as if it wished to be killed.

Why don't people kill their animals when they are small if they feel they are not in a position to keep them rather than raise them to maturity and then cast them aside? MRS. H. A. RANKIN.

TILE.

Chicago, July 13.—THE TRIBUNE deserves credit for the interest it is taking in regard to hollow tile.

Any one familiar with building knows that common brick absorbs rain and moisture like a sponge and without an air chamber between outside wall and inside plaster it would be almost impossible to keep a house comfortable in winter or summer.

Hollow tile has the air chamber and can be made with glazed outside surface, and if laid flat two courses to break joints would make a far better wall than common brick and stand any ordinary weight required in a 2 story building.

Most people get their idea of tile from the tile used in fireproofing office buildings.

Give the tile men a chance and they will get up a tile that will make a cheap comfortable house any color desired.
R. B. C.

BASEBALL IN JACKSON PARK.

Chicago, July 14.—I am a patron of Jackson park and my particular outdoor sport is amateur baseball. I can't help but give my views of the conditions under which the youngsters are encouraged to play the game. Jackson park, being one of the largest in the city, has the poorest ball grounds. Why this is so I can't say. It may be for the reason that the mild tempered, good natured players and fans have never complained, but now it is about time that some action be taken.

In watching a team practice for thirty minutes the other day I noticed two players hit in the eye by balls deflected from large stones which are scattered over the entire playing field. Saturday it rained and the grounds are so laid out that after every heavy rain a small lake covers the field. Two drains are in the center of the field and the water tries to escape that way and would if the sewer ever functioned. The highest point of a ball ground should be in the center, and the slope to the sides, but in Jackson park the engineers got the elevations twisted. After one of these heavy rains the kids do not want to wait a couple of days for the water to get off. I noticed a gang of kids, some bare footed, some with rubber boots, all having rakes, buckets, shovels, and one was even carrying a hose, and believe me, they were putting the grounds in shape. Of course, their parents pay taxes for this kind of work. A. FAN.

ANIMALS IN THE ZOO.

Chicago, July 13.—There is no sense in having animals in captivity if they are not given proper care. I walked through Lincoln park Sunday and here is what I saw: Polar bears, sore on back; grizzly she-bear, sore on side; foxes, coyotes and wolves always have sores on ears in summer time. I didn't see all the buffaloes, but of those I saw, two yearlings had sores. The poor animals were just covered with flies.

The sick animals should either be killed or cured and the whole batch shipped to the forest preserve where they could have room to turn around.

There seems to be a row on between the politicians as who should have control of Lincoln park; but they shouldn't take it out on the animals. C. S.

CHICAGO WOMAN DIES WHEN AUTO UPSETS ON BEND

Contractor Is Hurt in Milwaukee Clash.

Mrs. Nellie Daly, 62 years old, was instantly killed yesterday in Greenwood township, McHenry county, when the automobile which her husband, John, was driving, overturned at a curve which he was unable to see owing to dust caused by preceding cars. Daly escaped with a bruised hand. They were returning from Powers lake to their home in West Chicago. He is an engineer with the Chicago and Northwestern railroad.

There were no auto deaths in Cook county yesterday, the year's toll remaining 398.

A. C. Larsen, Chicago contractor, living at 7339 South Shore drive, is in a Milwaukee hospital with a fractured knee cap and other injuries, and his wife and son, George, are less seriously injured as a result of their car crashing into a tree there yesterday as the party was passing through the city en route to North Dakota. Two younger boys were unhurt.

Dorothy Coates, 7 years old, 1257 South Crawford avenue, is in a serious condition in Mount Sinai hospital as a result of injuries she suffered yesterday afternoon when she was struck by an automobile driven by William Grabon, 4652 West Jackson boulevard.

MRS. FARWELL SR. WINS A POINT IN $900,000 BATTLE

Mrs. Ava W. Farwell, wealthy Evanston widow, won the first point in her fight to break the $900,000 trust she created in 1918, when Judge Dennis E. Sullivan overruled a demurrer filed by her daughter-in-law, Mrs. Loretta Farwell.

Mrs. Farwell declared that she had created the trust fund while in poor health without knowing that she was releasing the entire control of her property. She asks that she be permitted to withdraw $250,000 from the fund and be allowed to change certain provisions in the trust.

The younger Mrs. Farwell charged that her mother-in-law's motive for asking a change in the provisions of the trust was to prevent her from receiving a $5,000 annuity. The daughter-in-law won a separate maintenance suit against John Arthur Farwell, sportsman, some years ago.

MARTINELLI WINS WAY TO TRIUMPH IN EPIC 'SAMSON'

Thrills Ravinia Listeners from Start.

BY MARTIN STEVERS.

While the ability of outstanding artists to dominate performances is well known, one seldom hears a demonstration such as was afforded by Giovanni Martinelli in last night's performance of Samson and Delilah at Ravinia.

From the moment he appeared to deliver Samson's fiery rebuke to his despairing countrymen, he let it be known that the Saint-Saëns score was to be interpreted in the Epic spirit due the story's source—and from that opening he kept the performance upon that plane making the opus yield all that could be drawn from it.

Above all, he did it, not merely by taking advantage of his high spots in the score, but by sheer power of personality. Even the opening served to demonstrate his mastery. It came after a rather conventional delivery of the lament, and his opening moved the entire performance to another plane. From that he rose in power until his final tremendous scene, which was a masterpiece of vocal and dramatic power.

Bourskaya Shines as Delilah.

For Delilah, choice fell upon the radiant Bourskaya, with felicitous results, after she had adjusted herself to the spirit of the rendition. In the second act she revealed her full powers with a brilliant culmination in the duet which results in Samson's downfall. The remaining rôles were carried with equal success by Giuseppe Danise as the high priest, Leon Rothier as Samson's aged mentor, and Paola Ananian as Abimilech. Hasselmans contributed a masterful and powerful reading of the orchestral score.

Orchestra Concert Today.

This afternoon features an orchestra program at 3 o'clock with Jacques Gordon, soloist, Eric Delamarter, conducting. The evening's offering is Romeo and Juliet with Lucrezia Bori and Armand Tokatyan in the name parts, Leon Rothier as Friar Laurent and Desire Defrere as Mercutio. Paola Ananian, Louis D'Angelo, Giordano Paltrinieri, Anna Correnti, and Louis Derman complete the cast.

REJECTED SUITOR SHOOTS SELF.

Cherokee, Ia., July 18.—[Special.]—Because Miss Ina Ramer refused to marry him, Harry Wenchell, Ida Grove, farm hand, shot himself through the body. He is in a critical condition in an Aurelia hospital.

CORINTH, GREATEST OF GERMAN MODERN PAINTERS, IS DEAD

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, July 18.—Louis Corinth, Germany's greatest modern painter, died from pneumonia today in the little town of Zandvoort, Holland. The artist, who is described by critics as a leading light impressionist, had left his home a few days ago to recuperate after a severe illness. Death was caused by pneumonia. Herr Corinth was approaching his sixty-eighth birthday. He began his career as a student of Koenigsburg Academy of Painting in 1876.

LOUIS CORINTH.

Within a few years Herr Corinth's talent was recognized not alone in Germany but also in New York, London, and Paris, and he has since occupied a leading position in the world of art.

The finest of his great works are "The Descent from the Cross," which hangs in Leipzig gallery, and "Perseus and Andromeda." He is also well represented in German churches, for which he painted numerous altar pieces.

3. Thou shalt not take the name of the Lord thy God in vain.
4. Remember that thou keep holy the Sabbath day.
5. Honor thy father and thy mother.
6. Thou shalt do no murder.
7. Thou shalt not commit adultry.
8. Thou shalt not steal.
9. Thou shalt not bear false witness against thy neighbor.

When You Step Into a "Hursen" Funeral Auto

Instantly you realize that here is just one more reason why "Hursen" funerals have acquired their fame for quality and elegance not only in Chicago but all over America.

It is another proof that in every feature of funeral direction Hursen always leads. "Hursen" funeral automobiles surpass anything heretofore known or used in the nature of conveyances at funerals.

Each "Hursen" limousine was designed by Hursen himself. Each represents a fortune to produce. Each is the "last word" in interior and exterior beauty, in roominess, in seat-comfort, and in riding-comfort. Each is so built that passengers may avoid being seen from the outside without interference with their view from the inside.

Hursen limousine-hearses, also, are a revolution in funeral equipment. They do away with the gloomy-looking hearses one usually sees. These limousine-hearses are recognized as the most beautiful hearses in America. They have been built especially for Hursen along the same beautiful lines as the celebrated Hursen passenger-limousines.

The charge for the use of "Hursen" funeral-automobiles is never any greater than the usual auto hire made elsewhere for conveyances far less desirable and less comfortable.

The elegance of "Hursen" funerals to the last detail is unsurpassed. Yet the charge for "Hursen" funerals is from one-third to one-half the charges usually exacted elsewhere. It is this policy that has made "Hursen's" the largest undertaking establishment in America. Call Hursen, of course!

FEDERAL, STATE, CITY DRY AGENTS HAILED GRAFTERS

Startling Report Tells of Vast Corruption.

tempting to land a cargo on the beach within 300 yards of White Court brought out the Swampscott police on the run early today. They found two automobiles on the shore, but no liquor. A caretaker on one of the estates on Little's island first saw the cars and turned in the alarm. The spot where the autos were found is only a short distance from the landing place used by Swampscott bootleggers last winter.

Coolidge Shows Interest.

President Coolidge has taken a personal interest in seeing that the government activities were concentrated here. Two British schooners, the Grace and Ruby, sighted twenty miles off Cape Ann yesterday, were driven to sea by four destroyers, McCall, Beale, Patterson, and Cummings, which, with two cutters of the coast guard, have vigilantly combed the so-called rum row. Reports here say the British schooners have gone in the direction of the Grand Banks.

Acting on his own initiative, but with the knowledge of President Coolidge, Chief of Police William Callahan yesterday made a trip along rum row and today reported it entirely dry.

The activities of the government agencies are being carefully watched by William M. Forgrave, superintendent of the Massachusetts Anti-Saloon league.

Uncle Knows Wet Nephews.

New York, July 18.—[United Press.]—A sweeping investigation of the activities of an alleged maid order bootlegging establishment, whose offices were raided here late yesterday, was ordered today by United States Attorney Buckner.

A list of 20,000 orders received from 29 states and the District of Columbia is said to be in the hands of Mr. Buckner, while many other states are expected to be represented in the orders after further perusal.

Prosecutions are in line for all concerned, Mr. Buckner declared.

Some of the Damp Towns.

Among the cities and towns in the list are:

Omaha, and Lincoln, Neb., Sioux City, Cedar Rapids, and Des Moines, Ia., Peoria, Galesburg, Chicago, Freeport, and Chicago Heights, Ill., Kenosha, Eau Claire, La Crosse, Oshkosh, Madison, and Milwaukee, Wis., Indianapolis, and Elkhart, Ind., Denver, and Colorado Springs, Colo., Cincinnati, Cleveland, Columbus, and Toledo, O., St. Louis, St. Joseph, Kansas City, and Joplin, Mo., Topeka, and Wichita, Kas., Oklahoma City, Tulsa, and Guthrie, Okla., Dallas, and Fort Worth, Tex., Los Angeles, and San Francisco, Cal., Casper, and Sheridan, Wyoming, Detroit, and Ishpeming, Mich., and Wheeling, W. Canada's 1924 Gold Output of $31,532,402 Sets Record

Ottawa, Ont., July 18.—Gold production of Canada in 1924 was announced officially today as 1,525,380 fine ounces, valued at $31,532,402, an increase of 2.4 per cent over the previous year, and the largest in the history of Canada. In 1900, when production was at its height in the Yukon, Canadian production was 1,350,057 ounces, valued at $27,908,153.

FALLING SLATE KILLS MINER.

LIFE THREATENED

DOROTHY BROWNING.

YOUTH, NABBED, ADMITS PLOT TO EXTORT $50,000

New York, July 18.—[Special.]—Philip Siegel, 21, employed in the press room of a New York newspaper, was arrested today on the charge of attempting to extort $50,000 from Edward W. Browning, real estate broker, who advertised recently his desire to adopt a girl child. In these letters to the wealthy broker Siegel threatened death to Mr. Browning and to Dorothy Sunshine Browning, adopted several years ago, if the demands of "the gang of fifty" were not met.

Young Siegel admitted the charge to police. He was trapped by detectives when he met Mr. Browning at an appointed rendezvous and took from him a bag containing paper instead of the sum demanded.

The transfer was arranged through an advertisement placed in a newspaper by the real estate man, as directed in the first letter received. The second letter threatened Browning's life and that of his adopted daughter. The third, delivered this morning, appointed the place of meeting.

FOREST FLAMES RAGE IN CANADA; MANY HOMELESS

Winnipeg, Man., July 18.—[Special.]—Three great forest fires are raging in West Kootenay, in the Rocky Mountain section of western Canada, in addition to twenty less severe ones. Passenger and freight trains are held up. Small sawmills and larage quantities of poles and ties have been destroyed.

Fire fighters in many sections have been driven back by fury of flames and have had to run for their lives at top speed as the flames leaped from tree top to tree top. Trains are picking up many refugees who have lost all their property in their small clearings. Many have sought refuge on islands in mountain lakes. The flames are within five miles of the flourishing town of Kaslo. The Utica mine buildings also are threatened by this blaze, which covers 75 square miles, and is being spread by high winds.

A northwest gale fanned a small fire into conflagration today, destroying Bowden, in central Alberta. The fire started in a livery barn and made 300 persons homeless. Two hotels, one church, and two lumber yards were saved out of thirty business concerns. The loss is estimated at $500,000.

$8,000,000 Plant Growth for Dodge Brothers, Inc.

Detroit, Mich., July 18.—(AP)—The largest expansion program in the history of Dodge Brothers, Inc., was announced today by F. J. Haynes, president of the corporation. The present plans call for an expenditure of $8,000,000, erection of eight new buildings, and the expansion of the capacity from 1,100 to 1,500 automobiles daily

DRY RAIDERS SEIZE BOOZE ON INDIANA LINE

For the third time within a week prohibition agents under Chief Enforcement Officer Charles W. Vursell swooped down upon the bootleg gentry of Calumet City to demonstrate that while Illinois hasn't a duplicate of Indiana's drastic Wright law, the Volstead act still is in force. As on the previous visits, large stores of miscellaneous booze were seized.

The Wright law is effective to the middle of State Line avenue, which separates Hammond, Ind., from Calumet City, Ill.

As a result the Indiana side of the avenue is occupied by scores of imbibing Hoosiers, while the Illinois side has been crowded with many gents equipped to care for the liquid needs of these Indianans, who can't be provided for on the home side.

Thirty groggery keepers have been arrested in Chief Vursell's latest onslaught on State Line avenue and adjoining thoroughfares.

Among those whose places were visited yesterday were those conducted by Joseph Rorin, 708 State Line street; Walter Koster, 722 State Line street, and Frank and Ben Kulczyk, 574 State Line street.

Prohibition officials yesterday held Max Stern, said to be one of the owners of the New Southern hotel, 1250 South Michigan avenue, on charges that he sold six gallons of alcohol to a prohibition agent for $75. Stern was arrested at his home, 747 Montrose avenue. His bond was fixed at $10,000.

FOWLER M'CORMICK DESERTS SHOVEL FOR EXPEDITION TO AFRICA

Milwaukee, Wis., July 18.—(AP)—Fowler McCormick, son of Harold McCormick of the International Harvester company, in an interview in the Milwaukee Journal today announced he will leave shortly after Aug. 1 for Africa as a member of an expedition headed by Carl G. Jung, Swiss psychologist.

FOWLER McCORMICK.
[U. & U. Photo.]

McCormick accompanied Dr. Jung on a trip through the southern sections of United States last winter, and is looking forward to the coming trip to Africa with keen interest, he said. Dr. Jung intends completing extensive research in psychology which he began with the study of the southern Negro last winter.

McCormick recently graduated from the day labor department of the branch of the International Harvester company here, where he worked for several months. He was transferred to Chicago a short time ago.

HOME INFLUENCE

There is a favorite thought of ancient writers which can well be used in regard to the American home. It is:

"Give the world the best that you have and the best will return to you."

Give the home the best that you have. Make it beautiful. Make it comfortable. Make it an attractive gathering place that will outshine the interest of commercialized entertainment.

Then the best will be returned in the guise of happiness, satisfaction and success.

NEW ALIEN ACT SUCCESS; HORDE CUT OVER HALF

U. S. Getting Fewer and Better Immigrants.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., July 18.—[Special.]—Immigration has been cut down to less than half the total for last year, under the immigration restriction law, which became effective last July. In the first twelve months of its operation the law has proved a success greater than was predicted by its most optimistic advocates.

According to reports already compiled for the first eleven months of the fiscal year which ended June 30, and assuming that the arrivals during June were slightly in excess of those reported for May, the total admitted under the new law amounts to about 295,000, as against 700,000 in 1924, a decrease of 405,000. The exact number admitted from July 1, 1924, to May 31, 1925, was 269,010.

Fewer and Better Aliens.

The composite objective of the new law, fewer and better immigrants, has been attained, according to immigration officials.

Immigration from Canada, Mexico, and other non-quota countries has been effectually checked by the provision under which only the native born are exempt from the quota limitation. As a result, about 105,000 immigrants were admitted from Canada and Newfoundland, as against 200,000 in 1924 and 117,000 in 1923, and less than 50,000 from Mexico, as against 89,000 in 1924 and 63,000 in 1923.

That the new law is being vigilantly enforced is shown by the fact that up to May 31, 22,989 immigrants were debarred, 14,465 at land ports and 2,322 at sea ports, for lack of proper visa certificates and 9,901 undesirables who succeeded in entering the country were deported.

Nonimmigrant Arrivals Less.

Nonimmigrant arrivals increased over last year, but the grand total of all arrivals, immigrant and nonimmigrant and nonquota, was less than 475,000, a decrease of 400,000 below the total number of arrivals last year amounting to 879,000, and smaller by 25,000 than the total of immigrant aliens admitted last year.

For the first time in years the number of laborers departing exceeded the number arriving within the same period, the immigrants numbering 31,206 and the emigrants 48,378 as against 29,000 and 37,259, respectively, last year. The reduction in admissions is explained by immigration officials as due to the restrictive features of the new law, and the increase in departures as a composite effect of the active demand for labor at high wages and the more stabilized conditions now generally prevailing everywhere.

"The demand for labor isn't quite as great here now; conditions abroad are improved; they have made their pile and they are going home to enjoy it," was the way one immigration official summed up the situation.

Scout Bootlegging of Aliens.

Farm laborers and farmers, though in reduced numbers, ran true to form, 14,884 and 12,001, respectively, coming in up to May 31, and only 1,243 of the former and 242 of the latter going out. Servants arriving numbered 24,426 and departing only 2,402.

Reports of the bootlegging of aliens into this country and fraudulent entry under the exemptions provided in the law for returning residents and other specified classes to which the quota does not apply, have been greatly exaggerated, according to immigration officials. When the returns are all in, it is believed a cutting down of illegal entries even greater than the reduction in permitted immigration will be revealed.

REVEALS FINDING OF BETTER MODE OF VACCINATION

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, July 18.—Medical science has won another victory over disease. Following the remarkable discoveries of Dr. W. E. Gye and J. W. Barnard in their search for a cancer cure, comes the unofficial announcement of Dr. Mervyn Gordon that after three years of research at St. Bartholomew's hospital he has found a way toward a new and more nearly perfect method of small pox vaccination.

Dr. Gordon will probably read a paper before the British medical association Wednesday, showing the results of his intensive study of small pox and cow pox germs.

With the unofficial announcement of the discovery of the small pox bacillus it is believed that eventually a new small pox vaccine may be evolved which will almost certainly prove more efficacious than the lymph now prepared from calves. Optimistic investigators believe that the recent great steps in the realm of cancer and small pox will lead to the conquering of kindred diseases.

TOKIO, July 18.—(AP)—Edgar A. Bancroft, of Chicago, American ambassador to Japan, is suffering from a small duodenal ulcer. His ailment requires absolute quiet and rest at present.

Attorney Fights Tax Sale; Calls Legislature Illegal

Objections to the sale of his property for delinquent taxes on the ground that the last legislature was illegal have been made to County Judge Edmund K. Jarecki by Attorney Newell McCartney, 160 North La Salle street. The attorney's 1924 state tax amounted to $119.97, which he refused to pay, according to his petition, because Cook county was not properly represented in the legislature.

Confesses Poisoning

Joseph R. Effert, adopted nineteen years ago by Mr. and Mrs. Harry Effert of Chicago, repays them by attempting to poison their two young nieces. He is held at Fort Wayne, Ind.

EFFERT POISON CONFESSION LIE, HE NOW CLAIMS

Fort Wayne, Ind., July 18.—[Special.]—Joseph R. Effert, 21, who at first admitted giving poison to his two nieces, Beatrice and Rosemary Clinton, said tonight that he would repudiate his entire confession to police and would stand trial on the charge of attempted murder.

"I can tell a lie, but I can't tell you why I tell it," Effert said this afternoon.

Police redoubled their efforts to locate another young Chicagoan who came here with Effert, on the strength of rumors that he and not Effert, was responsible for the poisoning in an effort to excel the "perfect crime" attempted by Leopold and Loeb in Chicago several months ago.

Claim Austria Must Join Germany to Save Business

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

VIENNA, July 18.—A memorandum which the board of economics of the Austro-German alliance gave to Chancellor Ramek, Dr. Zimmerman, league of nations commissioner, and Messrs. Layton and Rist, league of nations experts, contains twelve points which emphasize that the only possible solution of the Austrian economic problem is through union with Germany. The paper shows that Germany could absorb the Austrian unemployed who now purpose to emigrate to America as soon as the quota permits.

BUNDESEN SEEKS FURTHER CUT IN INFANT DEATHS

Figures Show City Leads Nation in Field.

Encouraged by recent government reports citing Chicago's leadership among twenty-two large cities in the reduction of the infant mortality rate, Health Commissioner Herman N. Bundesen and Dr. R. R. Ferguson, president-elect of the Chicago Medical society, joined yesterday in a plea to physicians for closer cooperation during the coming year.

Their joint letter to every doctor in the city urges that birth reports be telephoned to the health department within twenty-four hours and promises the assistance of a department nurse in the instruction of the young mothers whenever desired.

Death Rate Decreases.

The letter is Dr. Bundesen's latest step in a campaign to emphasize the wisdom of breast feeding.

Reports compiled by the American Child Health association, with the assistance of the federal census bureau, indicate that in Chicago since 1920, when 113 of every thousand babies died during their first year, there has been a steady reduction of the rate until 1924 when only 76.9 of every thousand babies died in their first year.

"The 1924 record represents a saving of 36.1 babies' lives per 1,000 born," declared Dr. Bundesen, "or an actual saving of 2,106 babies in 1924 over what would have occurred if the 1920 rate prevailed. Statistics show that in the six years, 1919-1924, inclusive, among the 22 cities with populations of more than 250,000, Chicago heads the list with the greatest saving in babies' lives.

Better Results Possible.

"This is a record to be proud of, but we are sure that with teamwork and the universal feeding of babies in Chicago on the mother's breast, this record can be improved. To this end the department is conducting a campaign to see that every baby born is breast fed. Every mother can nurse her baby, and the doctors and the health department are going to show the mothers how to do it."

ROME WORRIED AS MUSSOLINI AWAITS KNIFE

[Copyright: 1925: By the New York Times.]

LONDON, July 18.—The impending operation on Premier Mussolini for an affection of the liver is causing considerable anxiety in Rome, according to a special dispatch to the Sunday Times.

The ever present element of risk in these operations, coupled with the fact that the premier's health is not of the best, due to overwork, is the reason for alarm. It is also thought that the internal agitation against the Fascist régime, which has greatly worried Premier Mussolini, may have weakened him.

The dispatch adds that big sums of money have been expended for the opposition by certain international banking groups.

BRITAIN VISIONS WHITE LEAGUE TO STOP COLOR TIDE

Security Parley First Move in Big Scheme.

BY JOHN STEELE.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]
(Copyright: 1925: By The Chicago Tribune.)

LONDON, July 18.—The German ambassador to London has received orders to deliver an official copy of the German answer to the French security note to the foreign office Monday and at the same time hand copies to all the ambassadors in London.

The outline of the note's contents is now pretty well known, and it is believed the German proposals form the basis of a prolonged discussion which must end in a conference.

The first step, however, will be for the French to send experts to London to discuss the various legal points raised by the German reply.

Opens New Diplomatic Phase.

A new phase of diplomatic history opens with the delivery of this note, the chief feature of which is that for the first time in recent years France and Great Britain are in complete agreement. This renewal of the entente represents a triumph of Austen Chamberlain's policy. The present foreign secretary, instead of violently opposing the French policies, which are unpopular in England, as his predecessors did, patiently set himself to win the French confidence and bring France over to the British viewpoint. To do so he has had to make some concessions, but he has received large concessions in return.

It is most important that the French have accepted the British view that Germany must be admitted as an equal into the family of European nations and the bitterness of war must be forgotten. The first fruits of this is the evacuation of Cologne and other areas by the allies and the speeding up of the settlement of other problems which act as an irritant to the relations between France and Germany.

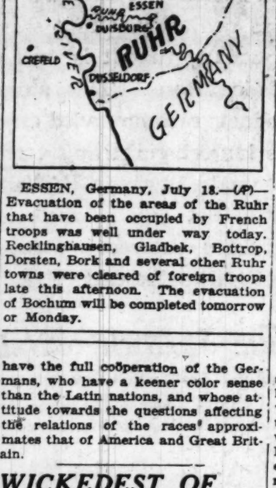
Mr. Chamberlain has also induced the French to agree that security must be accomplished by a pact freely entered into by Germany and maintained by friendly relations.

Plans League of Whites.

His next task is to complete the work by bringing Germany into the league of nations and then organize what he visualizes as a league of white nations of the world to protect the white man's heritage against the rising tide of color. In this tide of color he includes the Russian soviets, who have betrayed their white heritage by turning toward Asiatic ideas and seeking Asiatic allies in the war with western civilization. The recent events in both Morocco and China have helped him in securing France's adhesion to this general policy.

In order to complete the white bloc, however, it is absolutely necessary to have the full cooperation of the Germans, who have a keener color sense than the Latin nations, and whose attitude towards the questions affecting the relations of the races approximates that of America and Great Britain.

OUT OF THE RUHR



ESSEN, Germany, July 18.—(AP)—Evacuation of the areas of the Ruhr that have been occupied by French troops was well under way today. Recklinghausen, Gladbek, Bottrop, Dorsten, Bork and several other Ruhr towns were cleared of foreign troops late this afternoon. The evacuation of Bochum will be completed tomorrow or Monday.

POOR FAMILIES FIND HAPPINESS NEAR FOX RIVER

Algonquin Camp's Work Better than Ever.

The midsummer season is in full swing now, out at Algonquin, on the banks of the Fox river. The camp is running full blast, with every available room occupied.

The kids are there, and so are their mothers—some of them. Others should be there, but there isn't room. Yet never in the history of Algonquin were conditions so favorable nor life so enjoyable for its guests.

Many Improvements Made.

With the fine new water system installed by THE TRIBUNE eliminating last year's grief over faulty pipes, providing sufficient quantities of water under sanitary conditions at all times; with the new refectory built by the Board of Trade, accommodating the entire personnel of the camp at one meal; with the recreation hall evolved out of the former dining hall, and its new stage, built by E. J. Weekes, director of recreation, and his assistants; and with other numerous improvements, life at Algonquin is a dream come true.

WICKEDEST OF HORSES ENTERED IN RODEO HERE

Yellow Fever and Kiss Yourself Goodby, reputedly the wickedest broncbos in the west, will be among the attractions at the world's championship rodeo exhibition to be held next month in Grant park stadium under the sponsorship of the Association of Commerce.

To ride them, and incidentally to risk the titles they have already won, will come Mabel Strickland, trick riding champion and the best all round cowgirl at the Cheyenne frontier days rodeos in 1922 and 1923; Florence Fenton, Bee Kirnan, Mamie Stroud, Marie Gibson and Tad Lucas, whose riding reputations are almost on a par with Miss Strickland's.

Among the men riders will be Nowata Slim, Paddy Ryan, Leonard Stroud, Bryan Roach and Dave Whyte, all noted performers. Mike Hastings, the world's champion steer thrower, and a dozen others will take their chances of wrestling down the longhorns. The foremost ropers of the country also will take part in the exhibition.

ARREST ALLEGED GEM ROBBER.

Sydney Goldborth, wanted for the robbery of $30,000 of diamonds from Paul N. Lacritz, owner of a jewelry store at 29 East Madison street last November, was arrested yesterday by police of Toledo, O.

High Blood Pressure

Before taking the Witter Water Treatment, she wrote us:

"I am 52 years old, blood pressure 200. Have kidney trouble, dropsy, dizzy spells and fearful headaches. My trouble has been coming on for years and getting worse all the time."

4 Months Later

After taking the Witter Water Treatment, she wrote:

"I saw my doctor yesterday and he found my blood pressure normal and my other troules all gone. I danced for the first time in years on my last birthday."

Look Out for these Symptoms

as listed by Dr. Francis Faught. They may indicate High Blood Pressure:

1. Headache. 2. Nervousness
3. Dizziness. 4. Sleep unrefreshing
5. Sleep disturbed by noises
6. Feeling of fullness in head
7. Slight momentary dizziness
8. Gastric disturbances (heartburn, sour stomach, gas, distress after eating)
9. Weakness and lessened vitality
10. Cold hands and cold feet

High Blood Pressure is caused by acid poisons and impurities in the blood. The famous Witter Water Treatment positively gives lasting relief by neutralizing and throwing off these acid poisons and impurities. It has reduced thousands of cases of dangerous High Blood Pressure to normal, after all other forms of treatment had failed.

A well-known Chicago physician writes:

"My blood pressure was so high that I suffered three severe strokes. I tried every treatment known to the medical profession without obtaining relief. The Witter Water Treatment reduced my pressure 70 points in 45 days and so saved my life." (Name and address on request.)

AMERICAN SAVES SHANGHAI FROM DIPLOMATS' YOKE

Firm Stand Expected to Speed Riot Settlement.

BY JOHN POWELL.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]
[Copyright: 1925: By The Chicago Tribune.]

SHANGHAI, July 18.—Sterling Fessenden, a native of Maine, now a Shanghai lawyer and chairman of the Shanghai municipal council, was responsible for the complete victory in establishing an autonomous legal status for the Shanghai foreign settlement, according to reports from London tonight.

The diplomatic body at Peking, which is dominated by the French, Latin and Scandinavian powers, attempted to establish that Shanghai was directly responsible to the Peking diplomatic corps and that this body had the power to coerce the Shanghai municipal council, which was elected by foreign property owners and voters in Shanghai.

When the diplomatic note, which leaked out a few days ago, ordered the suspension of the Shanghai municipal authorities charged with the responsibility for the Shanghai student shootings, Mr. Fessenden wrote the council's reply. The reply caused the resignation of the French and Italian ministers from the diplomatic commission and a split in the diplomatic body, with America, Great Britain and Japan on one side and the French, Italians and Scandinavians on the other.

Uphold American's Stand.

According to the reports from London tonight an important conference was held in London, attended by the Americans, French and Japanese ambassadors and Austen Chamberlain, the British foreign minister, at which it was decided to uphold Mr. Fessenden's opinion establishing the supremacy of the Shanghai municipality's position and ordering a new judicial inquiry into the whole Shanghai trouble. This reversed the French viewpoint that Shanghai is subject to diplomatic control and coercion.

Mr. Fessenden's argument is that Shanghai obtains its charter from treaties, and that neither the diplomatic body nor the Chinese government has a right to interfere without a treaty revision.

The victory is hailed with gratification in the Shanghai foreign community tonight, as it is thought it will result in an early solution of the troubles, opening the way for conferences on revision of the Chinese treaties.

FRENCH SEND DEMANDS

BY RAYMOND FENDRICK.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]
[Copyright: 1925: By The Chicago Tribune.]

PARIS, July 18.—France's reply to the Chinese note demanding abolition of all special rights and privileges held in China by foreigners was cabled today by Foreign Minister Aristide Briand to Count de Martel, French ambassador to Peking.

In this reply, which the French government states is identical with the American, British, and Japanese replies, M. Briand emphasizes that the special committee, which is to meet three months after the ratification of the Washington treaty, to study customs duties, could also be given special powers to investigate the possibility of the gradual restoration of economic independence to China. Another committee, created under the Washington treaty, could also study the question of extraterritoriality and the situation in the foreign settlements in China.

Insist China Restore Order.

The big powers, the note says, are of the opinion, however, that extraterritorial rights could not be surrendered before China fulfills the following conditions:

1. Order must be restored in the foreign settlements and neighboring areas.
2. The central government must give proof that its authority is recognized in the whole Chinese territory.
3. A guarantee of reform in the laws and penitentiary administration must be made according to western ideas.
4. China must give a declaration that it is open to foreign trade, the big powers being unable to recognize the complete sovereignty of a country which does not accept a common commercial standard.

Seek to Speed Parley.

PEKING, July 18.—[U. P.]—The Chinese foreign office has sent a note to the powers urging them to expedite negotiations over the Shanghai killings of strikers and students. Meanwhile, Shanghai reports indicate the possibility of a clash of native forces for control of the city. Gen. Chang Tso Lin, Manchurian war lord, was reported massing Fengtien troops in the vicinity of the city to ward off a possible drive by the Suan Chuan troops.

CRITICALLY ILL

FRANCE ANSWERS CRITICS OF NEW GOLD BASIS LOAN

Experts Deny Danger to Money Mart.

PARIS, July 18.—(AP)—Prospects for the gold coupon loan, which is intended to absorb France's floating debt and which will be issued Monday, continued good in the opinion of financial experts. Some pessimism was shown around the bourse, however, by those who apprehend that the floating of such an enormous loan will likely have a disastrous reaction on the stock market.

These critics point out that the loan is open to persons holding between sixty billion and seventy billion francs in national defense bonds, that the aim of the government is to transform the bulk of this vast amount into a perpetual loan and that operations on such a scale could hardly be effected without causing a dangerous stringency.

See No Danger to Market.

The experts of the finance ministry reply that persons who hold national defense bonds are always unlikely to use their money in transactions affecting the stock market. The bulk of these bonds is in the hands of conservative people, who look for something safe for investment, and the fact that they change these bonds for a permanent loan giving equal guarantees will, in the opinion of government experts, in no wise affect the money market, since it is simply the exchange of one form of paper for another.

Fear Capital Exodus.

The exodus of capital from France is considered far more dangerous to the money market, and the loan is believed to be one means of reassuring people who are afraid of seeing the value of their money diminished from turning it into foreign currency.

Elaborate arrangements have been made to register subscriptions, which will be received by every bank, tax collector's office and post office. Officials look for separate subscriptions running well toward ten million francs [$500,000].

SURVEY STARTS TO CLINCH NEW TERMINAL PLAN

Railways Likely to Make Realty Transfers.

Adjustment of land titles in the near south side terminal district in accordance with a program suggested by Attorney Silas H. Strawn and his committee of prominent citizens to hasten development of the area is being favorably considered by the affected railroads, it became known yesterday.

The Strawn plan outlines a series of real estate sales transfers and exchanges to be negotiated by the railroads contemplating the erection of a $300,000,000 consolidated passenger station in the district. Under the plan the railroads would finance the straightening of the river and the opening of needed streets, with a net profit to themselves of $1,204,890, the committee asserted.

Survey to Start at Once.

Agreement to the scheme by the railroads, according to Mr. Strawn, hinges only upon verification, in a joint survey, of the valuations fixed for the involved property, by the citizens' committee engineers. The latter, Hugh E. Young, engineer-expert for the Chicago plan commission, and E. H. Noonan, consultant for the council railway terminals committee, will meet with the railroads' engineers at once to undertake the new survey.

Mr. Strawn's optimistic report, however, is not expected to interfere with the preparation of plans by city engineers for the straightening of the river and the opening of streets by special assessment. With the federal government's permit for the river straightening expiring in less than two years, the city must be prepared to undertake the project at once, if the compromise efforts fail to harmonize the railroads.

Involves Sale of Properties.

Under the scheme worked out by Mr. Strawn and his associates at the request of Commissioner of Public Works A. A. Sprague, railroads housed in the new Union station and the Northwestern terminal will sell their holdings east of the new river channel to those railroads whose terminals—the Grand Central, the Dearborn street and the La Salle street—are located east of the new channel.

"The railroads represented in the conference yesterday displayed a friendly spirit toward our suggestions and exhibited a desire to coöperate with us and each other toward solution of this problem," declared Mr. Strawn. "The only point of serious difference was found in the valuations used by our committee in the plan and these are to be the subject of an intensive study by our engineers and those of the railroads.

Stress Advantage to Lines.

"We have attempted to convince the railroads that the city has not sufficient funds to undertake the river straightening and that it is economically wise, for the railroads to straighten the river and open the streets too."

If the railroads fail to agree quickly, it is the intention of John J. Sloan, president of the board of local improvements, to call public hearings within thirty days on plans for the opening and widening of streets in the terminal district.

ROBBER BEATS WOMAN WITH GUN IN LOBBY

A bandit lurking in the vestibule of the apartment building at 720 Grace street, yesterday beat Mrs. Orville H. Warwick unconscious when she resisted his attempt to rob her.

Instead of putting up her hands, Mrs. Warwick screamed. The robber reversed his gun and with the butt inflicted severe wounds. He fled when she stumped to the floor, escaping residents attracted by her screams.

ROOSEVELT ASIA PARTY REPORTED TO BE RETURNING

CALCUTTA, July 18.—[United Press.]—It was reported here today that the members of the James Simpson-Roosevelt-Field museum expedition to the heart of Asia in quest of the sheep's ancestor, the ovis poli, had indicated they were returning soon. Authorities, perplexed and without definite news, say an early return would mean either that the expedition had succeeded or was obliged to replenish equipment.

Dispatches from Leh and Karachi yesterday indicated that the Roosevelts were due at Yarkand, western Turkestan, tomorrow. They had evidently mastered the mighty Karakoram pass in northern Kashmir, and were said to be only five caravan stations from Yarkand.

Buy Now—Tire Prices Jumping

Ford Tires Must Soon Sell for $25

Here's a simple problem in arithmetic: Crude rubber that sold last year for 16c a pound has jumped today to $1.19 (and it's still soaring). The smallest 3½-inch tire weighs 16 pounds, which means as soon as tires made at the present price of rubber are put on the market they will have to sell at $25 or more. Roy still has them at the old last year's price, because he was shrewd enough to buy before the big advance started. They can't last forever—the wise boys are following the crowds to Roy's and buying while the buying is good. Get yours now.

AREA HONORS CARDINAL; NAME NOW MUNDELEIN

Churchman Gives Village New Fire Truck.

Paying a debt of gratitude because George Cardinal Mundelein, through the establishment of a great theological seminary, brought prosperity to the town, the people of Area, Ill., overwhelmingly Protestant in religious faith, yesterday feted the prelate and celebrated the public proclamation of the changing of the name of the village from Area to Mundelein.

In return for the unsought recognition of his benefit to the town, Cardinal Mundelein presented to the village a modern fire engine and fire extinguishing apparatus, at a cost of $7,500. And in accepting the gift in the name of the village, R. J. Lyon, head of the voluntary fire fighters, presented the cardinal with a gold badge designating him the honorary fire marshal of Mundelein. Rigid tests by Chicago firemen had previously demonstrated the efficiency of the equipment in protecting the village.

Another gold badge was given Father Wolfe, procurator of the seminary, who assisted the townspeople in the selection of the apparatus, making him honorary fire captain of the town.

Hold Elaborate Celebration.

The celebration began at 1 p. m. with the reading of the proclamation by Ralph Rouse, president of the town, and his brief speech of appreciation for the activities of the Catholic prelate. A band of 200 pieces gave a concert. Chicago firemen and fire fighters from Mundelein, Libertyville, and other nearby places put on a fire drill. Races, games, and an old fashioned barbecue were also on the program.

Senator Charles S. Deneen was the guest of honor at a luncheon given by the cardinal preceding the celebration and was also the orator of the day.

"This community," he said, "not only honors most appropriately the man who has made this town known throughout this land and throughout the world as the seat of this great educational institution, but this community honors itself. It is proper as time goes on that the name of the great man who planted this great institution here should always be linked with this community and this place."

Cardinal Makes Response.

Cardinal Mundelein responded with thanks for the honor conferred upon him, and in a short talk expressed his hopes for the future of St. Mary-of-the-Lake seminary, and for the town itself, and its people, closing with an informal presentation of his gift, the fire fighting apparatus.

Nearly eight million dollars was expended in the erection of the seminary, and another four million will be necessary before it is completed.

FREIGHT BOOST NEEDED TO SAVE WEST, DUNN SAYS

I. C. C. Hearings Open in Chicago Sept. 1.

Western railroads are suffering from a loss of traffic due to competition of the Panama canal and unless they get relief within a short time the agricultural and business interests of the west will suffer seriously.

That finding is contained in a financial survey completed yesterday by Samuel O. Dunn, editor of the Railway Age. As a step toward its solution the managements of the western railroads have asked the Interstate commerce commission to grant them a general advance of freight rates. The hearings before the commerce commission will be held at the Edgewater Beach hotel on Sept. 1, and it is expected they will last several weeks.

"It is obvious to any student of transportation problems that if the western railroads as a group are to be able to continue to provide good and adequate service the net return earned by them must be increased," asserted Mr. Dunn.

Sees Two Peculiar Problems.

"Considering the western roads as a group, their need of an increased net return is due to a combination of two causes by which the southern and eastern railways are not affected.

"First, they are suffering from the Panama canal competition; and second, they are suffering because their rates have not been advanced as much as those of railways in other territories. Taking 1913 as a basis, the year before the war in Europe began, the average freight rate per ton per mile of the eastern roads has been increased almost 80 per cent, that of the southern roads 41 per cent and that of the western roads less than 37 per cent. The average passenger rate of eastern roads has been increased 57 per cent, that of the southern roads 41 per cent and that of western roads 46 per cent."

Mr. Dunn then avers that the result of this combination of conditions has been that ever since they were returned to private operation five years ago the western group, as a whole, has been earning poor financial returns.

Returns Drop $85,000,000.

"It is true a few roads have done well, but in spite of a large increase in the investment represented by them the net return earned by the entire western group in 1924 was 85 million dollars less than in 1917," the editor asserted.

"The net return earned by them in the four years since the Transportation act has been in full effect has averaged 125 million dollars a year less than in 1916 and 1917, the last two years before government operation was begun.

"The net return of the western railroads in 1921 gave them only 3.59 per cent on their tentative valuation; in 1922 4 per cent, in 1923 4.66 per cent, and in 1924 4.54 per cent," asserted Mr. Dunn.

Returns Even Lower This Year.

"With five months of this year gone the railroads of the central west and northwest show worse financial results than in the same period of either 1923 or 1924.

"The principal cause of the present situation is that large reductions of freight rates were made in 1922. These were made chiefly to aid the farmers and were based mainly on the ground that the farmers could not pay the rates because of the severe decline in the prices of their products that occurred in 1921. Since that time there have been large advances in the prices of farm products upon which the rates were reduced."

Louise B. Dunbar to Be Kemper Hall Studies Head

Kenosha, Wis., July 18.—[Special.]—Announcement was made today by Kemper hall, girls' school here, that Louise Burnham Dunbar, formerly of the faculty of the University of Illinois, had accepted the position of director of studies, to succeed Miss Florence Wells, who resigned last June.

FLOCK WILL SOON DESERT DR. CASE, LELAND CLAIMS

Elated Over Victory in Slander Suit.

Disapproval of the attitude of the wealthy leaders of the First Baptist church of Oak Park in shielding their accused minister, Dr. Carl D. Case, was seen by Albert R. Leland and his counsel yesterday in the verdict of the jury which on Friday granted Leland $10,000 damages from Ernest L. Hartig, one of the church deacons.

"The house of Case, shaken by the Appellate court's decision holding him guilty of leading astray his parishioner, Mrs. Leland, is tottering under this new verdict for Leland," declared Attorney Milford H. Olds for Leland.

Says Pastor's Following Wanes.

"Before long now," he continued, "the rich members of Case's church will find some way to retire gracefully Already a minority of the congregation does not suport the pastor."

Something of a personal victory for Attorney William R. Moss, attorney in the Leland divorce case for the wife, and in the Hartig damage suit for Leland, was won by him in the $10,000 verdict for his client. Since the divorce trial Attorney Moss has been under attack from Dr. Case's friends and counsel.

Mr. Moss was reticent, though, and yesterday he contented himself with saying only that the verdict satisfied him.

Loser Prepares Appeal.

That the fight is not yet won was the position of attorneys for Hartig, who prepared to take an appeal from Judge Hugo Pam's court to the Appellate court if the judge denies the motion for a new trial that is to be made next week.

Defense counsel denied even that the balance has swung in Leland's favor, and declared that Dr. Case and his deacons will emerge, victorious and honored, at the end of the battle.

YANKEE CONSUL IN MEXICO SHOT; U. S. ASKS ACTION

Washington, D. C., July 18.—[United Press.]—The American vice consul at Aguascallentes, Mexico, Harold G. Bretherton, has been shot but not seriously injured, it was learned at the state department here today. The report received of the shooting, which occurred on July 16, stated that the cause is unknown and it is believed the shot was not intended for Bretherton.

The Mexican foreign office has been requested by this government to start an investigation and to punish the guilty person. Though the report does not specify, it is assumed that the culprit was a Mexican and that he escaped.

Bretherton, a native of Canada, is a noncareer officer in the American consular service and was appointed to his present position in 1910.

Modern Chicago homes are insulated!

Celotex Insulating Lumber gives summer coolness —winter warmth—at no extra building cost

THE day of the old style, heat-leaking house is past! Home builders no longer put up with houses that are chilly and draughty in winter (in spite of big fuel bills) and hot and stuffy during the summer.

They don't have to. Modern homes are insulated with Celotex Insulating Lumber at no extra building cost.

Uninsulated homes waste ⅔ heat

Tests show that only one-third of the heat generated to warm old style houses, houses without insulation, really does its work. Another third escapes, naturally, through doors and windows. But the last third of the heat you pay for is wasted. It passes right through ordinary walls and roof—just as radio waves do.

Celotex stops heat

Celotex Insulating Lumber stops this unnecessary loss; saves the wasted fuel cost. In addition, a smaller, less expensive heating plant is required. Fewer radiators are needed. In summer, it keeps heat out, so your home doesn't get heated up like an oven on hot days. And always, Celotex houses are more comfortable; they are healthful, even in temperature, free from draughts, and quieter.

No extra cost

Best of all, you can have Celotex comfort at no extra building cost.

Because, wherever used, Celotex Insulating Lumber replaces and saves the cost of wood lumber or some other material and insulation. As sheathing it is stronger in wall sections than wood lumber. Inside the house, plaster is applied directly to the surface of Celotex. Plaster bonds with Celotex and makes a much stronger wall than plaster and lath.

Used in these ways, Celotex gives insulation at no more than the cost of ordinary construction.

Ask your Architect, Contractor or Lumber Dealer

Investigate Celotex before you build or buy a home. Celotex insulation will insure its future sales value.

If you are going to build, use Celotex. It is everywhere available. Your architect, contractor or lumber dealer will explain its uses fully—ask them.

If you are going to buy a completed home, insist upon one built with Celotex.

How this One-Profit Coach is built by Studebaker on the sturdy STANDARD SIX CHASSIS

SUPERFICIALLY other coaches may resemble this Studebaker Standard Six, but the resemblance will not stand analysis.

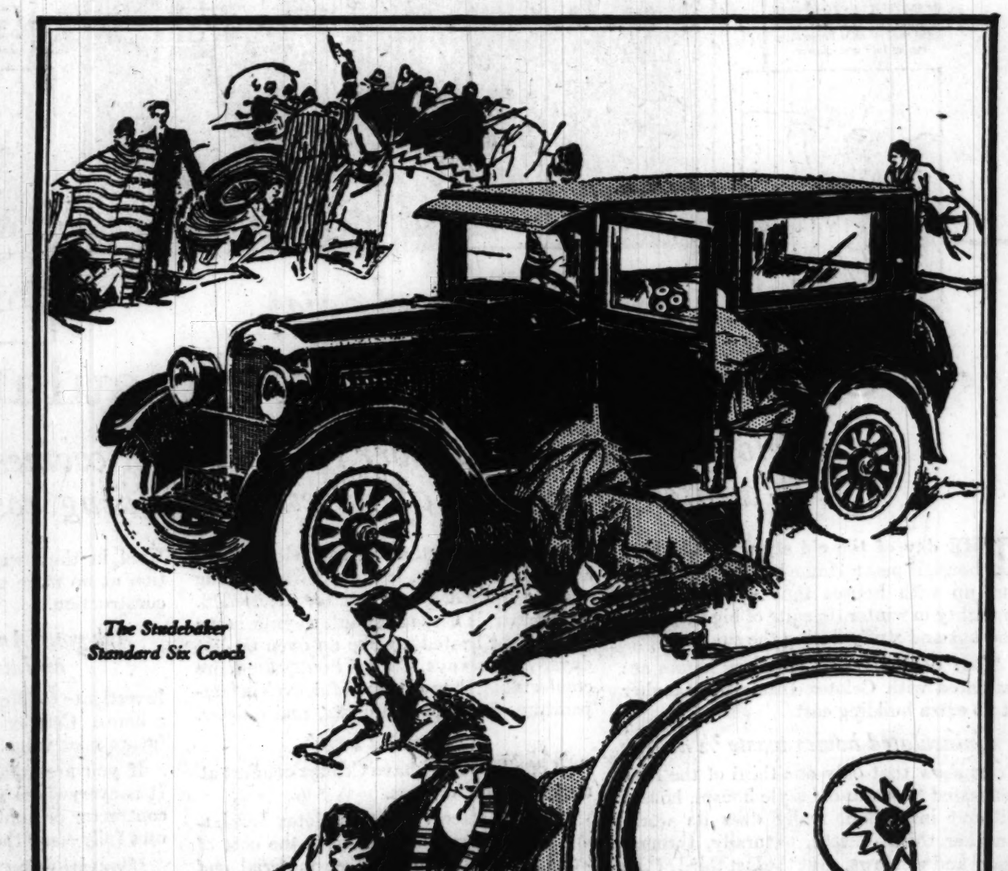
Only two cars are made on a one-profit basis—Ford in the lowest price field and Studebaker in the fine car field. Only in these two cases are all bodies, engines, clutches, gearsets, springs, differentials, steering gear and axles designed, engineered and manufactured by one company.

Contrast this with the average car, where the extra profits of many outside parts and body makers must be included in the purchase price to you.

These profits are part of the production cost of the car—the same as the steel and wood of the body. They do not buy materials nor workmanship—they do not make any car one whit better.

Studebaker has achieved one-profit manufacture through years of far-sighted management and through sacrifice on the part of stockholders. Earnings which might have been distributed have been retained in the business to build one of the largest gray iron foundries in the world, to erect stamping mills, forges, etc., to purchase the finest labor-saving machinery, to construct enormous body-building plants.

As a result, resources totaling one hundred million dollars are concentrated upon the production of one-profit automobiles such as this Standard Six Coach.



The Studebaker Standard Six Coach

This is a Studebaker Year

What does it mean to you?

To you as an automobile buyer, this means two things:

1. A Lower Price.
2. A Better Car.

A LOWER PRICE, because Studebaker does not need to pile its profit upon the profits of outside parts manufacturers and body builders.

A BETTER CAR, because it is a thoroughly co-ordinated, harmonious unit. Every part designed, engineered and manufactured under one management, to work more efficiently with every other part.

A better car because Studebaker can afford to use finer upholstery, better steel, higher grades of lumber, more painstaking workmanship in hundreds of unseen places.

Scores of thousands of miles of excess transportation are built into every Studebaker. When the car which looked like an equal value while it was new, is breaking up, the Studebaker is breaking in.

That is why in Arizona—out where desert heat and rugged mountain trails test automobiles to the utmost—Studebaker sells double its normal proportion of cars. Every county in Arizona which has bought an automobile for its sheriff has bought a Studebaker.

In the city of Detroit 103 Studebaker cars used in jitney service have traveled over 100,000 miles each. In Fort Madison, Iowa, one Studebaker has given 340,000 miles of dependable, satisfactory service.

In Joplin, Mo., two Studebakers have each passed the 150,000 mark. Ashland, Ohio, reports three that have traveled over 100,000 miles. In Pasadena, California, there are four.

And still another Studebaker, in South Bend, Ind., has given 214,140 miles of service in the hands of five different owners.

Examples of "reserve mileage"—stupendous mileage. But it simply proves the stamina and rugged dependability that is built into all Studebaker cars.

This coach is not a one year car

As a splendid example of the facts stated above, we offer the Standard Six Coach. To appreciate this car you must see it and ride in it. We urge you to do so immediately. It is called a coach, but is in reality a roomy five-passenger coupe.

It is a car that will give you faithful economical service. It is built to yield dependable, comfortable transportation for years and years.

$445 Down

The Studebaker Corporation of America has made it possible for any Studebaker dealer to sell you any car in his stock (new or used) on a fair and liberal budget payment plan.

For instance, the delivered price of the Standard Six Coach in Chicago is $445 down and $78.75 per month for 12 months. This includes freight and war tax.

Buy now—no more "yearly models"

This is the time of the year when men have hesitated to purchase an automobile, fearing that the car they bought in July would be made obsolete artificially by the announcement of new yearly models in August or September. Studebaker has discontinued the custom of presenting yearly models. Instead, Studebakers will be kept up to the minute in body styles and chassis design regardless of the calendar.

Go now—to any of the dealers listed below—and see this sturdy, dependable, one-profit Coach.

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

With Ted Blankenship hurling very quietly and with the White Sox hitting the ball freely and Johnny Mostil running the bases with the boldness of a pardoned burglar, yesterday's toil was a mere formality for the Collins crowd, and they pushed over their friends from Boston by 10 to 2 in the first part of a five game series.

Due to the ease with which Blankenship hurled, the Red Sox were able to get together only six hits in the first eight chapters, but in the ninth Ted sort of eased up under his big lead and thereby denied himself the honors of a shutout, which would have been his second in a row. However, in these days of the "rabbit" ball it is even something to get by for seventeen innings without having a run scored against you. Evidently Ted is profiting by some intensive training under a couple of masters of the slabbing art—"Red" Faber and "Chief" Bender.

Mostil Steals at Will.

The tussle was so one sided and so lacking in fireworks that Mostil's burglaries were about the only things that stirred up the customers. John first gave them something to howl about when he worked a double steal of third, with Collins on the other end, in the fifth. In the eighth he got to first base again and when the patrons called for a steal John obligingly went to second by that method. That seemed so easy of accomplishment that John decided to go even farther, so on the next pitch he pilfered third, thus raising his season's total to 33.

Collins' batters had a chance to bat over a couple hostile hurlers and neither was the source of much annoyance. The first was Ruffing, who was roughed up for eleven hits and seven runs in eight innings. His pitching, however, was no worse than the fielding of his mates. The other moundsman was one Neubauer, who permitted only one hit in his one round workout but the hit was a healthy affair, Blankenship popping the ball into the left field bleacher, after Kamm had walked.

How the Run Making Began.

The Sox started picking up runs in the second frame. Sheely counted in this session on his own double, a single by Falk, and Hooper's fly. Another went home in the third, Mostil doing the trick on a single, a similar hit by Davis on a hit and run play, and Ross Collins' infield out.

In the fourth the Boston defense started to go sour. Falk opened the inning with a single and rode to third on Hooper's hit to right. Falk scored on Kamm's fly to right, and when Ruel perpetrated a wild return throw Hooper legged it for second. Schalk was out a scratch hit to third and Mostil tried to catch him napping off first, but the peg went wild, so Hooper scored and Schalk went to third, but died there when a leaping stab of Blankenship's liner by Lee precipitated a double play.

Due to two passes, the aforementioned double steal of Mostil and Collins and a hit by Sheely, two more runs were added in the fifth. Collins and Sheely also were mixed up with another run in the seventh, and after Blankenship had driven two across on a homer in the eighth Mostil made the circuit on an error, his two steals, and another boot.

Two games today, starting at 1:30 p.m.

King's Shooting Prize Is Won by Sapper Smith

BISLEY CAMP, England, July 18.—(AP)—The king's prize for rifle shooting has been won this year by Sapper A. Smith, late of the Royal Engineers.

Private D. Burke of Canada won the prize last year and in 1923 the winner was Capt. E. K. Robinson, formerly of the Royal Air force.

In the Wake of the News

"EXPENSE ACCOUNTS."

THE WAKE never has been able to become properly indignant over charges of padded expense accounts such as are now made against Paddock and Murchison, the Yankee runners touring abroad. Our indignation was equally lean when similar charges were launched against Paavo Nurmi on his American tour.

From many years' newspaper experience, we know that it is impossible to break even on trips. It is not a firm's fault, of course, that its representative spends more than "necessary" expenses, but you simply do, that's all.

Such conditions obtain, only more so, with touring athletes. Practically every trip, no matter how seriously undertaken or supervised, is in some measure a junket. Even when football elevens, under strict eyes of coaches and maintaining training, take transcontinental tours for post-season games, the argument for faculty permission is that "the boys have earned a reward."

Can you imagine any one going to Europe and getting by with only "necessary" expenses? Can you imagine Paavo Nurmi, or any one else, living in the big cities of this country on the generous authorized allowance of $7 per day? Possibly Finland and Sweden resent our questioning Nurmi. We don't blame them. We thought he was shabbily treated.

If promoters of sporting events wish noted athletes to cause congestion at their turnstiles, they should wear distance glasses when scanning statements of necessary expenses. And safe to say, even then the competitors will quit losers financially.

When Work Is Done.

When work is done and I lase in my reveries,
Resting from the toil the day has brought,
The flickering fire brings back to me my memories
Of the many loves that I had known—and sought.

They cross my vision dancing all so sprightly;
Mocking me with arms outstretched for love,

And when I reach out, just to touch them lightly,
My fingers clutch the smoke curling above.

I vainly try to bring them back to vision,
So that their trembling bodies I may gripe;
But I find them fading—fading—with derision,
Like the smoke fades into nothing, from my pipe.

"Strongheart."

Harve, I know about fifteen people in this burg who own German police dogs and each one of them claims that his dog is a son or daughter of "Strongheart," the movie dog. Now that isn't so bad, but along comes a letter from a friend in Detroit who claims his dog is of the same breed. Seeing as both towns are on the lake, I was just wondering if this "Strongheart" is a sailor dog with a wife in every port. Hercules.

"Stalling" in Baseball.

Mr. Crusinberry recently made a suggestion which I have always thought should be adopted by the baseball leagues. He suggests that in the play-off of a game interrupted by storm, the game and score be resumed at the point where play was stopped.

This would put an end to the practice of stalling which has become a regular part of baseball tactics with a storm impending and which is bum sportsmanship.

Liquor in Lockers.

Several Volstead pros recently started a movement in a prominent local golf club to enforce, in letter and not in spirits, the club rule against members having liquor on the premises. The antis rallied behind the banner of one member who asserted emphatically, "If this rule is enforced, I will have to resign unless I can afford to join another club. When I entertain customers and we come in from playing golf, they want a DRINK, not an EXCUSE." That settled it.

GEORGE FORCES BIG BILL TO FIVE SETS TO KEEP CUP

Once Within Two Points of Winning Match.

St. Louis, Mo., July 18.—(AP)—William T. Tilden II. of Philadelphia, four times before winner of the National Clay Courts tournament, successfully defended his title here today, defeating George H. Lott Jr., sensational Chicago youth, in the final round of the singles event at Triple A club.

The match required the limit of five sets before the champion emerged the victor. The score was 3—6, 6—3, 2—6, 6—2, 8—5.

Tilden at one stage was within two points of losing his title to the youthful Chicagoan, but consistent playing eventually enabled him to retain his crown, and gave him a second leg on the singles challenge trophy presented by the United States Lawn Tennis association.

Lott, playing perhaps the most brilliant game of his career, gave the champion a battle all through the match. His steadiness and his ability to return Tilden's hardest strokes won the approval of the spectators and added to the champion's discomfiture.

Lott Wins First Set.

Lott's steadiness gave him the first set. Tilden, however, gradually became more accurate in placements as the second set progressed and finally won it. The Chicago youth began a net attack which won him the third set easily, the score of which was 6—2. Tilden broke up Lott's play in the fourth set.

The fifth set was a battle from start to finish. Tilden ran up a lead of 4 to 2 in games but the Chicagoan won the next three games, to take the lead, 5 to 4. Lott won the first two points of the tenth game, but Tilden finally saved the match by winning the game and the set, 8 to 6.

The closeness as well as the tenseness of the Tilden-Lott match is indicated by the total point score, which gives Lott 161 and Tilden 153. The match was marred by many interruptions, the champion frequently becoming annoyed at the behavior of the spectators, who frequently applauded a stroke while a rally was in progress.

Coast Pair Victors.

Harvey Snodgrass and Walter Westbrook of Los Angeles reached the final round of the men's doubles by eliminating Brian Norton and Wray Brown, St. Louis entrants, in the semi-final round contests. The first two sets were hard fought, but the Californians ran out the third set with the loss of only two games.

Norton showed streaks of brilliancy against Snodgrass and Westbrook, while Brown appeared to be tired, due to the morning match in which he and Norton defeated Thalheimer and White of Dallas, Tex. Snodgrass and Norton won by scores of 8—6, 6—4, 6—2.

The other semi-final round match in the doubles between Tilden and Al "Sandy" Wiener of Philadelphia, and Robert and Howard Kinsey of San Francisco was not completed, darkness halting the play after the Kinseys had won the first two sets, and Tilden and Wiener the third set.

The match will be resumed early Sunday afternoon and will be followed by the final round in which the winning team will oppose Snodgrass and Wesbrook for the doubles championship.

TRIS SPEAKER SIGNS TO MANAGE INDIANS IN 1926

Cleveland, O., July 18.—(AP)—Tris Speaker today signed a contract to manage the Cleveland American league team for 1926.

Speaker was made manager of the team in the middle of the 1919 season.

In announcing that Speaker had been signed for the coming season, E. S. Barnard, president of the club, issued a statement in which he said that "the recent slump of the Indians cannot be laid at the door of Manager Speaker."

"Tris cannot pitch, catch or play the infield, and he cannot bat for any but himself," Barnard added. "He has to depend on the players that are provided for him by the club officials."

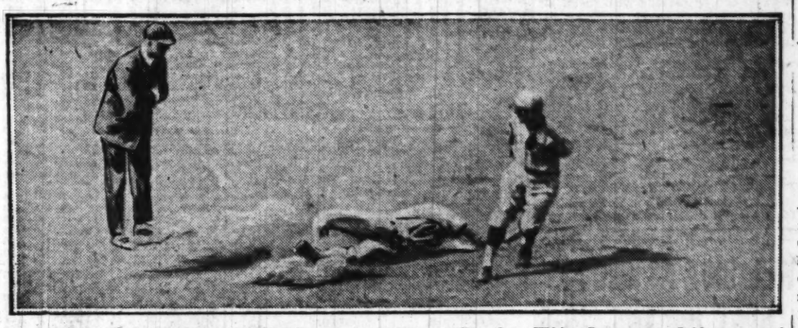
DE PALMA WINS RACE IN DENVER

Denver Colo., July 18.—(AP)—Ralph De Palma won the 100 mile automobile race here late today, which climaxed a two day program sponsored by the Denver Auto Racing association, taking $4,000 in prize money. Leon Duray was second and Fred Comer was third. De Palma negotiated the 100 miles over the one mile dirt track in 1:21:26 3-5.

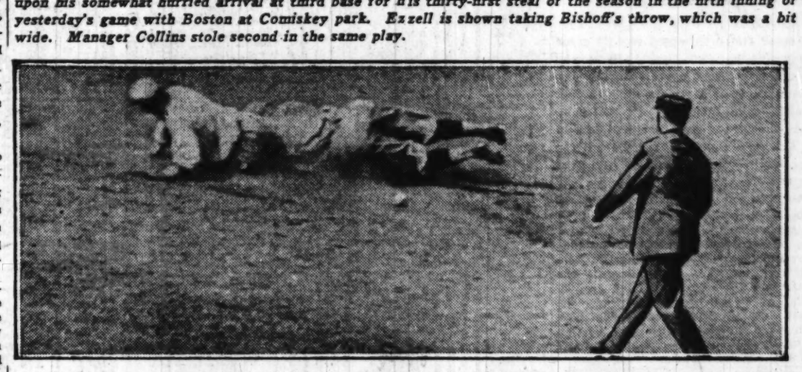
HANLEY DIES OF FRACTURED SKULL

Jersey City, N. J., July 18.—(AP)—Thomas Hanley, 33, died from a fractured skull received yesterday when hit by a pitched ball during a ball game here. William Donlon, the pitcher, was held on a technical charge of manslaughter.

MOSTIL CAN'T KEEP STILL



Johnny Mostil is here seen starting on a rampage. The fleet White Sox center fielder snapped upon his somewhat hurried arrival at third base for his thirty-first steal of the season in the fifth inning of yesterday's game with Boston at Comiskey park. Ezzell is shown taking Bishoff's throw, which was a bit wide. Manager Collins stole second in the same play.



Johnny raises his total of steals to 32. In the eighth chapter he reached base on an error by Rogell and immediately legged it for second. The camera caught him ripping into the keystone bag just ahead of the ball.

Now it's thirty-three burglaries for the Pale Hose star. After stealing second in the eighth he raced to third on the next pitch, and the picture shows him hooking into third behind the Boston third sacker.

PATTERSON AND WILLS WINNERS AT BROOKLINE

Brookline, Mass., July 18.—(AP)—Australia's colors floated high in victory today when Gerald L. Patterson of Melbourne became the first foreigner to win the Longwood bowl singles, and later, with John B. Hawkes, his Davis cup teammate, to win the Longwood doubles. In the singles Patterson outlasted Takeichi Harada of Japan in a five-set final, 5—7, 7—5, 3—6, 6—3, 6—1.

Miss Helen Wills, 19 year old national champion, defeated Mrs. Jessup, a former Boston girl, 7—5, 6—2, in the women's singles finals.

The Longwood men's doubles was a straight set affair, for Patterson and Hawkes are jealous of their doubles reputations and were unwilling to lose a set to a pair of 17 year olds if they could help it. Malcolm Hill and Henry Johnson, the Boston youngsters who upset three seeded teams to reach the final, found the Australians' shots had too much sting, and they had to be content with seven games, the scores reading 6—2, 6—2, 6—3.

HELEN FILKEY BREAKS BROAD JUMP RECORD

San Francisco, Cal., July 18.—(AP)—Three women's world's track records went by the boards today, including a new mark in the broad jump set by Helen Filkey, versatile Chicago star, in the national track meet for women in Kezar Memorial stadium here. Miss Filkey leaped 17 feet and ½ inch.

The former 220 yard dash time was eclipsed when Elizabeth Nelson of Pasadena covered the stretch in :27 1-5.

A third mark to fall was the 440 yard relay, a picked team consisting of Helen Filkey, Alta Cartwright, Eureka Cal.; Maybelle Gilliland, New York, and Frances Ruppert, Philadelphia, negotiating the distance in :51 2-5.

Miss Filkey proved to be the individual star of the meet, taking three firsts, the 100 yard dash; sixty yard hurdles, and the broad jump, and running the anchor heat on the winning relay team. Her time in the century was :11 3-5, while she cleared the sticks in the fast time of :08 2-5.

Former Giant Infielder Bought by Fort Smith

Springfield, Mo., July 13.—[Special.]—Bill Patterson, former infielder with the New York Giants and with the San Antonio club of the Texas league this year, has been purchased by the Fort Smith Twins of the Western association and reported here today. Patterson will replace Shelton at second base.

MURCHISON TROPHIES WITHHELD BY BRITISH ON GERMAN CHARGES

LONDON, July 18.—(AP)—Loren Murchison, Newark A. C., who won the 100 and 220 yard dashes at the track meet concluded today at Stamford Bridge under the auspices of the British Amateur Athletic association, is under a ban, temporarily, at least, so far as receiving the rewards of his victory.

At the presentation of the trophies and medals this afternoon, Honorary Secretary Barcelay of the association, with the approval of the chairman, Sir Montague Shearman, said a question has been raised about the amateur status of Murchison and the medals and the Harvey Memorial cup to which his double victory entitled him as the meet's best performer, must be withheld pending an investigation.

The question is understood to concern charages made by the Berlin Zwoelf-Uhr Blatt yesterday, which asserted both Murchison and Charles Paddock were guilty of "gross professionalism," alleging they demanded excessive sums at Berlin, Hamburg and elsewhere before consenting to race.

U. S. TURFMAN PAYS $17,000 FOR GERMAN COLT

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

HARZBURG, July 18.—The pick of German yearlings at the famous Harzburg thoroughbred auction today was purchased by I. W. Treacy, American sportsman, for the record price of $17,000. The colt, which was named Herodot, is the son of the famous Dark Ronald. The American had to go above the $16,000 bid of an Irish syndicate, which wished to take the horse to England as a Derby candidate.

Pitcher Sold by Senators Starring for New Orleans

New Orleans, La., July 18.—[Special.]—The Southern league has developed some good players this season, but none stands out as prominently as Herb Kelly, the pitcher who was sent to New Orleans by the Washington Senators. He has won nine games in a row since he joined New Orleans and is responsible more than any other player for the Pelicans being out in front in the league race.

WRIGLEY SPIKES REPORT 'RABBIT' IS TO GET 'GATE'

A report that had all the earmarks of containing a lot of truth came out of Louisville last night stated that Joe McCarthy, manager of the Louisville club, would succeed Rabbit Maranville as manager of the Cubs at the end of the year or possibly sooner. McCarthy was to come to the Cubs along with Ty Tyson, the story ran, so William Wrigley Jr. was dug from his bed and asked "how about it?"

Mr. Wrigley, over the phone from Lake Geneva, said that he knew nothing about the reported agreement that would bring McCarthy to the Cubs as manager. He admitted that such a move had been discussed about a year ago, but nothing came of it.

"I think the Rabbit is doing pretty well," Mr. Wrigley said, "and he'll do better if we have any luck purchasing players."

William Veeck, president of the Cubs, is on his way home from the east and will arrive in Chicago this morning. It isn't likely he will dispute the statement of Mr. Wrigley.

Another report that drifted into Chicago has it that Wade "Red" Killefer, brother of Bill, who has made a big success as a manager in the coast league, would be offered the Cub job next season.

WILLS IN EUROPE FOR REST; SPURNS OFFER FOR BOUT

PARIS, July 18.—(AP)—Harry Wills, American heavyweight and contender for Jack Dempsey's title, is in Europe only to rest.

He made this plain today in commenting on a challenge issued by Francois Deschamps, French boxing manager, on behalf of his latest protégé, a Spanish heavyweight named Paolino. Deschamps challenged Wills to a twelve round bout, to be held Sept. 6, for a purse of about $10,000.

Wills is still waiting for a cable message in regard to his projected fight with Dempsey and has postponed his departure for Warsaw and Calrsbad until tomorrow.

Spain Puts Mexico Out of Davis Cup Competition

KEEFE CARTER, THREE DOWN TO MARTIN AT 18TH, WINS, 3 AND 2

Youth Betters Par on Second Round.

BY MORROW KRUM.

Detroit, Mich., July 18.—[Special.]—Keefe Carter, nineteen-year-old boy from Oklahoma City won the Western Golf Association's amateur championship at the Lochmoor club here today. Carter defeated Russell Martin, Flossmoor, 3 and 2, in a thrilling thirty-six holes of golf.

Carter is a freshman with the State University of Oklahoma. He's skinny, serious-minded, uncommunicative and of unquestionabale courage. At noon today, after the morning eighteen holes, young Carter was three down to the huskier Martin.

After a luncheon, during which his mother, Mrs. Dorset Carter, and a friend or two from Oklahoma talked to the lad, sometimes mentioning the three-hole handicap he had to face, Carter started out to beat Martin.

The match ended on the sixteenth green. As the huge gallery and the two players turned towards Lochmoor's delightful club house a band struck up "The Victor," that good old Michigan song and the applause echoed over the countryside.

Carter Wins 19th.

With Carter three down, the afternoon started. Both had tee shots that would be a credit to Jim Barnes or any other long driver. Then came the approach shots, and here is the department of the game that Carter has mastered. He took a full mashie and dropped his ball two feet from the pin. He got a birdie three. Martin needed four strokes to sink his ball and was only two up.

They halved the second hole, and young Carter stepped out again with his approach shot and got another birdie. The Flossmoor boy got a par 5 and was only one up. The gallery gave a cheer for the precision and the courage of the Oklahoma boy.

The next two holes were halved, and on the sixth Martin sank a long putt, while Carter had trouble, getting a five, and Martin was two up. On the seventh Martin played well, but the freshman played one stroke better. Carter was one down. The eighth and ninth were halved.

Halve Three in Par.

For three holes, the tenth, eleventh, and twelfth, they were even with par scores and halved them all. Carter was still one down.

On the thirteenth Martin's tee shot went to a trap. He made a good out, but missed a short putt, while Carter sank a long one, and the thrilling match was even. The gallery rearranged their bets, and Mrs. Carter, ever following in the wake of her spectacular son, smiled.

The rest of the story is simple. The Oklahoma freshman won the next three holes. His tee shots, his second shots, were perfect, and his putter worked like magic. Martin had some trouble, not much, but enough to allow Carter to win. The match ended on the sixteenth, and the band struck up that old football song. Carter finished one under par.

Carter Off in Morning.

In the morning round Carter was slightly off his game. For the first time in this week of unusually heavy tournament play he dubbed a shot or two. Once he was thoroughly angry. His iron shots, usually so brilliant, were not good, and those who have followed him all week said the strain of the tournament was at last beginning to take its toll.

Martin, on the other hand, was the same courageous stalwart youth who downed Dexter Cummings in his first match of the tournament and who had sent three other cracking good golfers to the shade. He bore up well under the strain, showing no mental or physical fatigue.

Both players got fours on the first hole. Then Martin became superhuman for four holes. He won the second, third, fourth, and fifth holes, with three birdies in a row. Carter won the sixth, the seventh, and eighth were halved and Martin won the ninth.

Martin Four Up.

The turn was made with the Flossmoor boy four holes up. Young Carter was shaking his head at times. They halved the tenth and Carter put his tee shot next to the pin on the eleventh and sank the putt. On the twelfth Martin looked up on an approach shot and Carter won the hole. Martin was two up. On the thirteenth and fourteenth Martin was again the perfect golfer. He won both holes.

The fifteenth was halved and so were the sixteenth and seventeenth. Both had good drives from the eighteenth tee and their approach shots were both over the green. Both chipped to positions about ten feet from the pin and then Martin, who was away, laid a three-quarter stymie for the Oklahoma boy. The gallery became silent as the youngster sighted for his putt. The club swung. The ball rolled straight for Martin's ball, which was on the lip of the cup. Carter's ball just pushed the other out of the way and dropped into the hole. It was a beautiful shot and won the hole, putting him 3 down.

Tonight there is no more picturesque figure in golf than young Carter. He's young and he's got the nerve. Besides these two virtues he has a golf game that is of the first water. He's the boy who came up and won, 3 and 2, after he was 3 down on the first eighteen holes.

CARTER EXAMPLE OF CRADLE GOLFER; DAD STARTED HIM AS BABY

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla., July 18.—(AP)—When Keefe Carter, who today won the western amateur golf title, was a small lad his father, an Oklahoma City oil man, gave him a miniature golf set and told him that if he would learn the game, it would pay him dividends both in health and pleasure.

Seven years ago when Keefe was 12, he graduated into a full sized set of clubs with a considerable knowledge of how to handle them. It was then Sandy Baxter, Oklahoma City professional, took the boy in charge and became his intensive tutor. Last year young Carter won the Oklahoma state championship.

During the last six years, he has been on the courses here winter and summer and although slight of build, he developed a powerful drive which elicited enthusiastic comment from Walter Hagen as early as two years ago.

Carter's state laurels were wrested from him this year at Tulsa in the Oklahoma tournament in the semi-finals by William Nickols, of Muskogee.

NOTES OF THE TOURNEY

DETROIT, Mich., July 18.—[Special.]—The most beautiful shot of the day took place on the eighteenth green this morning when Carter was stymied with Martin's ball on the edge of the cup. The Oklahoma boy's putt pushed Martin's ball away and dropped into the cup.

The two caddies almost had a battle today. Martin's boy told Carter's caddy the Oklahoma boy was pretty lucky. Carter's caddy put down his bag and said, "Put up your dukes, kid; I'll knock you over." Several men stopped them before the blows came.

On the thirteenth fairway, just before the match was squared, a woman gave Thurard Becker, a marshal, four four-leaf clovers and asked him to give them to Mrs. Dorset Carter. He did and Carter squared the match on that hole.

Carter is entering the national amateur tournament and the western open tournament.

Carter received 43 telegrams today from friends, including one from "Ma" Ferguson, governor of Texas.

A gallery of 3,400 followed the players today, according to the official count.

BLOOD POISONING CAUSED DEATH OF FLYWEIGHT KING

San Francisco, Cal., July 18.—(AP)—A coroner's jury found here today that Pancho Villa, flyweight champion of the world, who died here last Monday, "came to his death through personal neglect of an ulcerated tooth, resulting in blood poisoning, and not as a result of his recent bout with Jimmy McLarnin or the unskillful administration of the anesthetic."

The body of the little fighter was taken aboard the liner President Harrison today for shipment to Manila. Villa's brother-in-law, Jose Conception, will accompany the body to the island capital.

HITS SAFELY IN 6 TIMES AT BAT

Salt Lake City, Utah, July 18.—(AP)—What is believed to be a world's record for major league or class double A league baseball was established here today when Frank O'Doul, right fielder for the Salt Lake Pacific Coast league club, made six hits in six times up, duplicating his performance of Thursday, when he also made six hits in six times up.

He has made 19 hits in his last 21 times at bat, in the last four games. According to unofficial records, O'Doul now has a batting average of .431 in 100 games.

BY JAMES CRUSINBERRY.

Philadelphia, Pa., July 13.—[Special.]—After a great exhibition of bombing in the tenth inning, our struggling Cubs came out with another victory over the Phillies in the final game of the series here today. The count was tied by the Maranville men in the ninth and then they bombed the Phils for five runs in the tenth, after which the Phils bombed them for four. The final count was 7 to 6.

It was the tenth inning before the score board showed any results of the game between the Browns and the A's, and the first posting showed the A's had scored two runs which caused tremendous cheers among the 15,000 fans assembled. Up to that time, the Phils hadn't given them any thrills and it was plain that something had to be done.

Cubs Knock in 5 Runs.

So the bombing exhibition was staged with great effect. After the Cubs had put on their show for five runs and the Phils got into the midst of theirs the crowd actually forgot for a moment to watch the score board. The high spot of the Phils bombing came with the bases filled, two men out and old Cy Williams at bat. Old Cy poled one of his heroic hooks over the short right wall sending in his three mates ahead of him, and pandimonium or something broke loose.

Of course the four runs didn't knot the count but they did cause intense excitement because only one more was needed to tie. A moment later, the next batter boosted an easy fly ball to Tom Griffith and the rioting ceased.

A big share of the credit for the Cub's victory must go to John Blake who curved 'em over from the slab. He was a whale of a pitcher except when he gave one to old Cy where he liked it.

Decatur Hurls Well.

As usual, Art Fletcher pulled almost everything he had on the bench into the ball game, especially in the tenth inning. He had Arthur Decatur on the rubber and for eight innings he was superb. The Cubs made only four blows off him in that time and wouldn't have scored at all without the help of an error or two. In the ninth, needing one run to tie, the Cubs went out and knocked it home in clean cut style on singles by Freigau and Grigsby and a sacrifice fly by Grifith.

There was some luck that helped the Cubs in the tenth or they wouldn't have scored a single run. Blake led off and died on a grounder, after which Adams singled and Maranville walked. Decatur raised Ned with Umpire Hart on the ball that let the Rabbit walk. Freigau filed out for the second out, and then Grigsby slapped one down to Sand for what should have retired the side, but honest Mr. Heinie cut loose with a wild throw to first which let Adams scoot home while the Rabbit went to third and Grigsby to second.

Decatur "Blows Up."

Mr. Decatur was sore and had cause to be. He lost control of the ball along with his temper, and after purposely walking Griffith, also passed Weis, compelling the Rabbit to score. Charley Grimm socked the ball against the right wall for a single that sent Grigsby and Griffith home, and then Gonzales poled a hit that scored Weis. Decatur was excused for the day, and Ray Pierce, once one of us, came in and finished.

Wrightstone, acting as pinch hitter, started the bombing in the tenth for the Phils with a single. Betts went out and ran for him. Henline batted for Huber, and fanned. Friberg poled against the right wall for two sacks. Betts stopping at third. Fonseca batted for Pierce, and walked, filling the bases. Mitchell batted for Sand, and fanned, and then up came old Cy feeling fine and spry and combed his homer over the wall, sending all mates home. Kimmick batted for Burns and raised a simple fly to Griffith.

The Cubs left tonight for Boston, where they will rest tomorrow.

Every Day He Asks Five Persons, Picked at Random, a Question

THE QUESTION.

In baseball do you think the playing manager is of more value to the team than a bench manager?

Where Asked.

Broadway at Sheridan road.

The Answers.

Louis Cavalli, 4031 Broadway, plasterer—A baseball manager can direct plays better on the field than from the bench. He can signal to his players more easily and if he himself is a good ball player he can give his team more than he can from a bench.

Fred Hobeck, 5321 Maryland avenue, waiter—Playing managers are a great asset to teams. This has been shown both in the American and National leagues, which today have playing managers at the helm of several teams.

P. E. Brickey, 4021 Broadway, electrical contractor—The playing manager is the coming thing. A good example of this is shown by the work of Bucky Harris, Ty Cobb, and Rogers Hornsby. We Cub fans hope that Maranville will prove as good as these. A manager playing on the field with his teammates has a tighter grip on them and makes them play better ball.

J. Hortense McGuire, 3930 Irving Park boulevard, realtor—The bench manager can devote more time and can give more concentration to the game and to the players than the playing manager. He can watch the mistakes and errors made by his team better from the side lines than he can by playing with them. It is like a fight manager watching his fighter in the ring. He can tell him the mistakes he has made.

John Malik, 3823 Rokeby street, building agent—The bench manager should be able to handle his team better than the playing manager. The man who sits on a bench or in a box watching his team, picking out weak and strong points, should see more readily his team's bad and good plays.

The Tribune will pay $5 for each question accepted for the Inquiring Reporter to ask. Send name and address with your question to "Inquiring Reporter," Chicago Tribune. For today's question, Jack O'Connell, 534 N. Dearborn st., Chicago, was awarded $5.

CHICAGO WOMAN GOLF TOURNEY TO OPEN TOMORROW

Mrs. Melvin Jones Chicago woman golf champion, faces rugged competition in the defense of her title at Evanston Golf club this week where the annual Chicago championship tournament opens tomorrow.

If her work in the North and South meet last spring and in matches around Chicago this summer counts for anything, Mrs. Jones has a good chance to defend her title successfully.

The entry list at Evanston, however, bulges with experienced campaigners, several of whom are capable of giving the Olympia Fields star a fight for titular honors. Few young players will compete. Miss Virginia Van Wie, 16 year old sensation of the Beverly club who was rated a title contender, will not enter as she is on a vacation in Michigan.

Leading Contenders.

Among the "old guard" expected to give Mrs. Jones strong competition for the title are Mrs. E. E. Harwood of Olympia Fields, who defeated Mrs. Jones last year in the club title event; Mrs. Lee W. Mida of Butterfield, one of the best medal round players in the association; Mrs. Miriam Burns Horn of Westmoreland, formerly western champion; Miss Ernestine Pearce of Skokie, city champion in 1912; Miss Dorothy Klotz of Indian Hill; Mrs. Jay S. Casseriel of Aurora, recent winner of the women's public parks title; Miss Vera Gariner of Glen Oak; and Mrs. Fred C. Letts Jr. of Onwentsia, twice holder of the city and the association titles.

Owing to lack of membership in a club in the Chicago district, Mrs. S. L. Reinhart of Dallas, Tex., western medal play champion, will be ineligible to compete.

The Evanston course is a fine test of a golfer's game. Par, under the new edict of the association, is 83. The women's record is held by Mrs. Reinhart, who last year established an 81.

Prelims Tomorrow.

The qualifying round tomorrow will be at eighteen holes and the sixteen players making best score will qualify for the championship flight. Three other flights of sixteen each will also qualify for the subordinate trophies. The medalist in the elimination round will receive a prize.

On Tuesday all flights will play the first match round. There will be a consolation handicap event for those failing to qualify and all classes will compete in a driving contest.

Second round matches will be played Wednesday and semi-final rounds Thursday.

The finals in all flights will be played Friday, after which there will be a number of open day events and the annual competition against par.

Tomorrow's Pairings.

Following are the pairings:

SARAZEN WINS METROPOLITAN GOLF TOURNEY

Bronxville, N. Y., July 18.—[Special.]—Thanks to Gene Sarazen, there will be no play-off for the Metropolitan open championship of 1925.

Gene's Endurance Wins.

Gene won simply because he stood up when others fell down, for four contenders began their last round with brighter prospects than himself and three others with chances that were at least equal to his. But one after another they faded away and when the field was all in Sarazen had won with a total of 295.

One shot out of a tie for the honor came Joe Turnesa of Fairview, while the defending champion, M. J. Brady of Winged Foot, and Tommy Kerrigan, of Siwanoy finished in a tie for third with like totals of 297.

MacDonald Shoots 299.

BRITONS WRECK RECORDS AND WIN ATHLETIC MEET

Atlantic City, N. J., July 18.—[Special.]—The Oxford-Cambridge track and field team overwhelmed the combined Princeton-Cornell squad here this afternoon in their international athletic meet before a crowd of about 8,000.

When the program was completed, with a deadlock among R. L. Hyatt of Oxford, Steve Bradley of Princeton, and R. V. Bontecou of Cornell, at 12 feet six inches, in the struggle for victory in the pole vault, the event was declared a tie among the three athletes and the meet went to the Britons by a score of 9 and 1-3 to 2 and 1-3.

Britons Win Nine Events.

The lads from across the sea previously had won nine events against America's two. The deadlock in the pole vault necessitated a distribution of the points for this test, since the meet was determined on the basis of events won. All three athletes failed at 13 feet, making a hopeless deadlock in the closing event.

Douglas Lowe of Cambridge, led the English team to victory which witnessed the shattering of five meet records and the establishment of three more. Lowe and the titled Burghley each won two events and were the outstanding members of a British team which was stronger in every respect than the American outfit.

Victory Evens Up Score.

In their victory, the British collegians had a measure of revenge for the setback they suffered last week at Cambridge at the hands of the combined Harvard-Yale team. The triumph further gave the English lads the advantage in their series of international meets against Princeton and Cornell which were with the only meet previously held back in 1921. In that met, at Travers Island, the teams tied, each winning five events.

Lowe came through here this afternoon with an exhibition of running ability which impressed the fashionably dressed crowd which attended the meet. He won the half mile, his specialty, in hollow manner and then came back to the track to score an even easier victory later in the mile event.

Lord Burchley Tops Hurdles.

Lord Burchley, in an exhibition of hurdling which surpassed anything the American collegians could offer, captured the 120 yard test over the high fences in :15 2-5, and raced to victory later in the 220 yard event over the low hurdles in :24 7-10. The titled English collegian's time in the shorter race shattered the old record of :15 4-5. In winning the 220 yard hurdles, Lord Burchley established a record for an event not run before.

A. E. Porritt, Oxford, shattered the record of :10 2-5 for the 100 yard dash when he breezed to victory in :10, showing the way to Harry Russell, Cornell's star, who holds the intercollegiate championship. In the 16 pound shot put Ralph Hills, Princeton's giant who holds the intercollegiate title and record, made a winning heave of 48 feet 1 inch, which was also a meet record, the old mark being 44 feet 5½ inches.

The fourth record to be shattered was the mark for the running broad jump. This standard fell before C. E. W. Mackintosh of Cambridge, who won with a leap of 23 feet 5¼ inches. The old mark for the meet was 21 feet 8 inches. In the high jump, G. T. Van Gezzel of Cambridge set a meet mark of 6 feet 1½ inches.

In the two mile run V. E. Morgan of Oxford, scoring a victory for the visitors, established a meet record of 9:52 1-5 since the event was being run for the first time, and when Russell turned the tables on Porritt in the 220 yard dash, the Cornell sprinter established a record of 21 2-5 seconds.

Kewanee, Ill., July 18.—(AP)—In the Kewanee district tennis tournament here today, Holt of Monmouth defeated Talcott of Tiskilwa, 6—3, 6—2, in the final singles. Holland and Brown of Galesburg defeated Demmler and Enis of Kewanee, 6—2, 6—4, in the final doubles. Both winners and runners-up will represent the district in the state finals at Decatur, Aug. 10.

BERLENBACH TO GET ONLY PART OF FIGHT PURSE

Trenton, N. J., July 18.—(AP)—Paul Berlenbach, world's light heavyweight champion, will get only two-thirds of the purse he was to have received for his fight in Newark last Monday night with Young Marullo of New Orleans. Marullo will receive the full amount.

In making this announcement, State Boxing Commissioner Newton A. K. Bugbee today said that he was inclined to hold Berlenbach responsible for the unsatisfactory fight, which was stopped in the ninth round upon suspicion of "stalling." Mr. Bugbee said it was true that an examination of Berlenbach's hand after the bout disclosed a broken bone but he contended that the champion should have stopped as soon as he received the injury.

The money withheld from Berlenbach will go to charity.

BRITISH TENNIS TEAM WINS IN COLLEGE GAMES

Sea Bright, N. J., July 18.—(AP)—The Oxford-Cambridge tennis team won the intercollegiate from the Princeton-Williams combination, 9 matches to 3, winning four doubles today. These victories added to the five singles triumphs of yesterday, showed conclusively how much the Britishers have improved since their defeat at the hands of the Californians.

On the main court a thrilling battle was staged between Capt. J. J. Lezard and Jimmie Van Alen of Cambridge, and the Williams pair, Capt. Mills, P. Baker, and C. B. Marsh. It was only after they had played their limit that the invaders were able to win, 6—3, 3—6, 8—6. Baker's service was the main factor in forcing the match to three sets.

John Van Ryn and Weller B. Evans of Princeton lost to D. J. R. Sumner and E. M. Jonklass of Oxford, 6—3, 6—2, while John Carleton, former Dartmouth ace, and H. K. Lester turned back Hynson of Princeton, and Banks of Williams, 6—1, 6—4.

TILDEN-JOHNSTON DUEL LOOMS AS SKOKIE FEATURE

BY JOHN BAILEY.

With more than a score of the greatest tennis players of the world gathering at the Skokie country club, Glencoe, for the Illinois state championship which started yesterday, one can say in advance that there will be many thrilling matches and many upsets.

To the tennis lovers of America, the prospect of another great battle between Tilden and Billy Johnston is the biggest thing in sight. For nine years Big Bill and Little Bill have fought their battles, side by side, or against each other on most of the famed tennis courts of the world.

Each has been champion of the world and several times champion of the United States. If it had not been for Big Bill, Johnston would probably have been seven times national champion.

Johnston on Offensive.

Little Bill is quite a contrast to the game he plays. LaCoste, the great French player who recently won the British championship, says that Johnston attacks all the time and is always on the offensive to a greater extent than any other player. And yet Johnston never says a word or kicks against a decision of umpire or linesman.

Tilden, on the other hand, is extremely temperamnetal. Tennis players admire Tilden and love Johnston. Inasmuch as Tilden has defeated Johnston on grass for the national championship for five successive years, many fans think that Johnston has very little chance to beat Tilden at Skokie. But we think it is just about an even thing.

Grass and clay are different things and, if our memory is correct, Johnston has won a majority of all the matches with Tilden that have been played on any kind of a hard court, whether asphalt (on which he plays mostly) or clay or cement. Then, too, Tilden has been none too fortunate on Chicago courts. We can remember four matches he has lost here, one to Bill Johnston, one to Richards, one to Manuel Alonso in the Illinois State in 1923, and one to the Australian, J. O. Anderson, and three of these four defeats were considered upsets.

Miss Leighton Faces Task.

There will be great interest, even though most of it will be in Chicago and California, in the women's singles. What will Marion Leighton, Chicago champion, be able to do against the girl wonder, Helen Jacobs, or against Charlotte Hosmer, the third ranking player in California? And which one of the three will carry off the state title? From what we know of the past it is hard to beat these California girls. The more honor to Miss Leighton if she can turn the trick.

Many tennis fans crave upsets. In the main event of the Illinois state it will be the field against Tilden and Johnston.

Lott Has Chance.

In the great galaxy of stars who will play in the Skokie meet, outside of Bill Johnston and Vincent Richards, we can think of only four players who have even a slight chance to defeat Tilden. One is George Lott of Chicago, No. 9 in the national ranking. If the tennis brains of Norman Brookes could be put on Lott's shoulders we would give him an even chance against Tilden.

The second is Howard Kinsey of San Francisco. The third is John A. Wright, a member of the Canadian Davis cup team, and the fourth is Edward Chandler of the University of California, national intercollegiate champion. Should the efforts now being made to bring some of the brilliant members of the French and Australian Davis cup teams be successful, the all around game of La Coste might give Tilden or Johnston a good workout, but hardly more.

Chandler-Lott Duel Looms.

The fourth great feature of the meet will surely be the work of Lott and Chandler and other young players. A battle between Lott and Chandler would be well worth going miles to see, as it would be a clash between two potential national champions.

We can look forward to a treat in the men's doubles, for in that event two of the greatest teams so far developed in American tennis, Johnston and Griffin, and the Kinsey brothers will probably fight it out in the finals. Either team should defeat Tilden and Wiener without losing more than one set.

Steelhead Trout Thrive in Icy Waters of the Sierras

BY BOB BECKER.

In California Sierras, July 18.—[Special.]—Steelhead trout that live in the snow water lakes of the southern Sierras must be equipped with fur lined scales, as it doesn't seem possible that any ordinary fish could exist in the icy water that you find in the high country.

While returning from a golden trout lake the other day we stopped for a moment at a beautiful lake tucked away in a small valley at 10,500 feet altitude in order to play with the steelheads that show a preference for arctic bodies of water. This lake should be called Snow Bank lake, as it was literally surrounded by big drifts, on which the July sun hasn't been able to much of an impression.

Rocks and Snow.

On one side of it were a few stunted trees putting up a plucky fight in their efforts to grow in the high altitude, while all around them were piles of rocks and snow piled one above the other toward the summit of the mountains.

The guide told us that steelheads had been planted in this isolated body of water, so we tied up the horses, unlimbered the fishing tackle, and prepared for a little casting. It was like fishing in the lap of winter. The sun had disappeared behind a bank of clouds and from the northwest was coming a chilly, piercing wind so that a heavy sweater felt mighty good.

While we were assembling our fishing tackle the guide built a fire. It was more for his own comfort than any one else's, as he had gotten chilled while shoveling snow from a trail at 11,000 feet.

Cast from Snow Bank.

While getting ready to cast we noticed the trout rising in one corner of the lake not 100 yards from us. Above this place was a bank of snow at least six feet deep. Scrambling up this bank, we dug in our heels and began casting. Then along came Val, another member of our party, who figured that the snow bank was a good spot from which to do some long range shooting at the steelheads.

In a few minutes both of us connected with steelheads, one 14 inches and the other 16 inches in length, that showed us several new tricks learned during their life under the snow banks. But the scraps put on by these flyweight steelheads were overshadowed by the performance which Val staged.

Nearly Gets Icy Bath.

While the fish that he had hooked was gallivantin' around, Val forgot that the snow bank was steep and slippery, and, stepping out of his "hole" in the snow, he skidded, went down with a flop, and all but shot into the lake for an icy dip.

There is only one save way to fish for steelheads in the high country, if one wants to avoid any risk of tobogganing off a snow bank. That is, to first visit the lake and cut trails in the snow so

The presence of steelhead trout—gamy, plucky fighters—in that ice water lake in the Sierras is the result of the California fish commission's work. This organization is sparing neither effort nor money to stock lakes in the Sierras, and every year sees many pack trains loaded with trout fry plugging along on the rocky trails to mountain lakes. Many beautiful bodies of water that never had a fish in them ten years ago are today wonderful fishing holes for the Sierra anglers.

BRITISH TENNIS TEAM IN CANADA

Quebec, July 18.—(AP)—The British women's lawn tennis team arrived here today on the Aurania for a tour of Canada and the United States. The team comprises Miss Joan Fry, youthful player beaten by Mlle. Suzanne Lengien in the Wimbledon finals recently, Miss Kathleen McKane, Mrs. B. C. Covell and Mrs. Lambert Chambers.

COAST TENNIS STARS THRILL FANS AT SKOKIE

A flash of the California brand of tennis gave the gallery a few thrills yesterday at the Skokie Country club, while local players and one invader were fighting it out to enter the second round of the Illinois state tennis championship tournament.

William M. Johnston, former national and world's champion, and Miss Charlotte Hosmer, second ranking player among the Pacific coast women, were beaten in an exhibition match against Clarence "Peck" Griffin and Miss Helen Jacobs, the newest girl star of the game. Despite the terrific driving of Johnston, Griffin and his sturdy girl partner won in three hard set, 6—2, 4—6, 7—5.

Miss Jacobs Drives Hard.

The hard ground strokes of Helen Jacobs passed even "Little Bill" as he came to the net. It was a sample of the tennis that the coast invaders will carry east for them in the campaign for the national championships.

Emmet Pare shoved the first out of town player out of the running. The local school boy star defeated E. G. Amhyrst of Columbus, O., in straight sets to enter the second round, 6—1, 10—8. The west side lad had an easy time in the opener, driving back hand and forehand accurately, while the Buckeye star could not fathom the local boy's game. The second set was a different story, however, and Amhyrst pounded Pare's shots back steadily, but the Cook county prep champion had the reserve to win out, 10—8.

Johnston Plays Today.

Wm. Johnston plays his opening singles match today at 3 o'clock against R. C. Shoemaker, a local player.

William T. Tilden and the host of stars from the National clay court play at St. Louis will arrive tomorrow morning ready for a strenuous week.

Lucien E. Williams, who played at Wimbledon, has arrived and is working off his sea legs. Summaries:

The Year Ahead Six

Since 1923 the increase in motor cars has been greater than that of the five previous years. For the past two years Moon engineers have been perfecting in the Year-Ahead Six a new type of construction that would anticipate the revolutionary needs of this increased traffic.

New Performance

Two billion dollars will be spent this year on hard roads. That means higher continuous speeds. Moon engineers have designed pistons, crankshaft, connecting rods so that you can hold your speedometer at 50 to 60 miles all day, if you wish.

A stock "Year-Ahead" Six roadster recently covered 12,105 miles in a 30-day run, averaging over 400 miles a day and 19.52 miles per gallon. Not one in a million would ever give a car such treatment—but it's good to know that you have a car that will stand the gaff and cost so little to run.

New Ease

Women and the youth of the country comprise half of the motor car drivers. Their safety demands a new ease of control. Moon designed a chassis completely for balloon tires. It includes a new steering mechanism that makes one-hand ease of down-town parking.

The Moon chassis has not just four-wheel brakes. They are hydraulic, the only kind that stay equalized, that minimize skidding, that literally operate on a cushion of air.

New Smartness

The lines in the seven new body styles suggest the speed, the balance, the ease of the new chassis. Smartness is heightened by new two-tone color in durable Duco, by individual design in hardware and upholstery, oval instrument board with indirect lighting, one-piece ventilating windshield, new radiator lighting control on the steering wheel.

A $75,000,000 Combination

Moon is an important unit in one of the greatest combinations in the industry. The best specialist brains, $75,000,000 in assets, practically unlimited purchasing, manufacturing and engineering resources—all these have been devoted to building greater value into the Moon product.

If you would know the latest revolution in six-cylinder development, see these cars. You will be amazed at the performance and the prices.

SPOT CASH COPS FEATURE RACE AT HAWTHORNE OVAL

BY FRENCH LANE.

Spot Cash, from New York, sporting the red and blue silks of the wealthy A. C. Bostwick, raced to victory in the Blackstone Hotel handicap, a $2,500 event which featured the racing at Hawthorne yesterday.

A crowd of 10,000 turned out to see the thoroughbreds run and the triumph of the horse from east climaxed a day replete with thrills in which the players seemed to have much the best of the wily oralizers.

While the Bostwick interests have carried off a few important races at Hawthorne since the meeting opened two weeks ago, the winning efforts of Spot Cash yesterday, a horse that has faced such fashionable company as Sarazen, Zev and all the other greats and near greats of the American turf, was the most satisfying to the owner since the big eastern establishment arrived here. Spot Cash is the pet of the stable, and when he wins the Bostwick interests win.

Graeme Sets Early Pace.

Eleven high powered handicap horses accepted the issue in the Blackstone, and Buck and Sun Altos, running under the G. Frank Croissant colors, were installed the favorites. Croissant purchased Buck for a big sum from Edward R. Bradley at private sale the night previous.

It was Senator Johnson N. Camden's Graeme with Jockey D. Mergler in the saddle that first showed in front, although Jockey W. Smith also started with a rush on Buck and J. Wallace was away well with the outsider Chink. They ran in this order for the first mile, and as the field was heading into the stretch Buck shot his nose in front while Spot Cash moved up from the rear ranks and was running third.

Spot Cash continued third until they were less than a furlong out, then weaving through one narrow opening after another Jockey Smith got him into the lead as they dashed past the stands and finally scored a nose verdict over Buck, with Graeme in third place two lengths ahead of Hopeless.

Girl Scout Is Victor.

Four allowance affairs made up the big half holiday card at Hawthorne and the fields were so well matched that the racing was about the best of the season here. The crowd, while not nearly as large as that of Derby day a week ago, comfortably filled the racing grounds.

The secondary feature was the Midway purse, a dash at a mile, in which Girl Scout, best known as a sprinter, stuck her nose in front early, raced into a long lead on the back stretch and came on to win much as she pleased, with Senator Camden's Tilka second and High Water third.

Jockey Thomas was aboard Girl Scout and he never gave her a chance to let up on the dizzy pace which she cut out from the time the barrier lifted.

The Hawthorne track record of six furlongs went tumbling when the Croissant stable's Gibbons won as he pleased in the middle classes handicap which came on third on the program. Gibbons stepped the route in 1:11, which bettered the old mark by two-fifths of a second.

Chicago Is Beaten.

Gibbons was an odds on choice. He won by three lengths and was in front all the way. Lady Fox was second and Right On Time third.

The first race, a claiming event at five and a half furlongs, went to Marionette. MacLean saved second money, getting up just in time to nip Jack Bauer.

An upset came in the running of the second race. The colt Chicago, owned by Frederick Grabner, was backed almost to the exclusion of the others, but Russell Gardner, owned by J. C. McGill of Denver, was showing his heels to the high powered Chicago youngster at the finish. Cartoon, another Chicago owned horse, was third.

Lee Adrian, at liberal odds but well supported, came home a narrow winner over Midwestern in the last race, while Dutch Girl was third.

DU PAGE SWAMPS GRASMERE, 14-5, FOR POLO TITLE

The Du Page polo four, formerly the Chicago Riding Club team, defeated Grasmere at the Onwentsia club yesterday for the Chicago district championship, 14 to 5.

$25,000 KAZOO DERBY TUESDAY AN OPEN RACE

BY FRANK COOKE.

Lack of a pronounced favorite and the fact that no candidate yet has displayed the speed that was required to win a heat last year makes the renewal of the pacing Derby at Kalamazoo next Tuesday the sole topic of conversation among horsemen. They regard it as the most open race in their time and will not be surprised if any of half a dozen of the promised field of fourteen or more wins the major portion of the $25,000 prize given by this enterprising association.

Several of the horses that are counted upon as starters have won at North Randall or Toledo, but none in impressive fashion, while some that had been reckoned as factors have dole nothing worth mentioning.

Likely Starters in Derby.

The probable starters are:

Airy B., 2:09¼ [Shively]; Brook Volo, 2:04½ [McDonald]; Eli Direct, 2:06¼ [Pitfer]; Frank Worthy, 2:03¼ [Egan]; Grit McKinney, 2:08¼ [Morrison]; J. W. Mack, 2:13¼ [Lacey]; Leila Forbes, 2:07¼ [Thomas]; Miss Ellen W., 2:08¼ [McMillan]; Phil O'Neil, 2:03¾ [Crozier]; Ribbon Cane, 2:06¾ [Childs]; Skeeter W., 2:03¾ [Cox]; Tarsan Gratian, 2:05¾ [Walsh]; The Farmer, 2:10¾ [Stokes]; Theodore Guy, 2:03¾ [Palin]; Trampanew, 2:06¾ [McMahon].

Most likely of this lot is Frank Worthy, that is in the stable of Fred Egan, who stepped over the threshold into the hall of fame when he drove Thompson Dillon to victory in the Geers stake at Toledo. Frank Worthy was an ordinary sort of half miler last season and won a minority of his starts, but he showed his owner some things which decided him in giving the son of Guy Axworthy a good chance.

Egan took his time with the pacer and brought him along slowly, and at the North Randall meeting he won a race each week. At Toledo in a stake event Frank Worthy made two flying finishes in 2:03¼, both last quarters in 30 seconds.

Grit McKinney, that was three times second and beaten only a nose in the final heat, paced just as fast as the winner, but Morrison may elect to start his other eligible, El Verso, as that one paced a mile right at 2:03¼ on Tuesday.

First Favorite Falters.

Theodore Guy was a pronounced favorite with the public when entries to the Derby closed, by reason of his unbroken string of victories last year and final record mile of 2:02¾. He won a fast heat at North Randall, but made a poor showing at Toledo.

Ribbon Cane is considered a dangerous factor this year, as she won in 2:03¼ at North Randall and never was so good. Eli Direct also won an odd distance race at that track. That they should equal the stake record of 2:02¼ is a logical sequence of the improvement shown last week, but no matter what the speed they promise to have a rare scrap.

There will be four races daily at Kalamazoo, starting tomorrow, and some of them will be mile and an eighth heats, but 14 will be on the mile heat plan. The headliner of the opening day is the 2:18 trotting stake in which a big field should race hard. The Derby and the 2:05 pace stand out on Tuesday.

The $10,000 Exchange club stake for 2:08 trotters is set for Wednesday, when the 2:13 stake trotters also will perform. There are four stakes on Thursday, the three year old trot, 2:02 trot, 2:11 pace and two year old trot. The free for all pace and three year old pace are the main events on Friday, the program for the five days costing $62,000.

The Exchange club event will be made up of most of the horses that were in the Geers stake and are entered in the trotting Derby at Aurora.

Geers Stake a Surprise.

While the Cox entry, Hollyrood Jessie, driven by Cox himself, and Thompson Dillon, driven by Egan, was favorite in the Geers stake, the victory of Thompson Dillon was a surprise, as the mare had been doing better than he had in their recent starts. The element of racing luck cut a big figure in this race, for Cox and Egan beat the barrier in the first heat and did not put on much steam to the three-quarters, which just suits a trotter like Thompson Dillon that has such a great supply of speed.

Had Ben White been sent away as he should have been in the inaugural round, the story might have been different. Sumatra had the pole and was entitled to be on a line with the front tier, but she really was sixth horse when they were dispatched, and it was too much to overcome, although she did finish third very handily. In the next heat she went after them in the last part and won about as she pleased in 2:02¼.

Won driving, second same. Marionette broke well and, going to her best form, moved into good lead at once and, clear of interference, continued steadily and just lasted to win a lucky race. MacLean, much the best, was away tardily and suffered much interference in the stretch from Jack Bauer, but came with a rush near the end and got way strongest. Jack Bauer raced forwardly all the way and held on well. Gold Mount showed a good effort, but tired. My Destiny was badly kicked while at the post and showed a good effort. Riviera quit. Everglade was away poorly and kept far out of it for entire trip.

Won easily, second driving. Scratched: Stanwix, Cherryvale, Chink, Louis Rubenstein, Sun Altos. Overweight: Lady Fox, 1. Lady Fox, also away fast, showed good speed and held on well during final drive. Right On Time came from far behind in stretch and was going strong. Dudley showed a poor performance under a listless ride. Better Luck was ridden wide for entire trip.

Hopeless was ridden wide entire trip and, under better judged ride, would have given leaders more stronger argument. Chink tired. Georgie closed an immense gap under a poor ride. Sun Altos quit.

Ragtime showed a dull effort under a weak ride.

FLOWERS FACES TOUGH FOE AT AURORA FRIDAY

BY WALTER ECKERSALL.

That Lou Bogash of Bridgeport, Conn., who meets Tiger Flowers of Georgia in the feature of the boxing show at Aurora on Friday night, is quite a fighter is revealed by a glance at his record.

LOU BOGASH.

Statistics reveal that the Italian, who is known as the "Walloping Wop" in the east, has beaten Mickey Walker, the world's welterweight champion, and has defeated such well known fighters as Jock Malone, Bryan Downey, Tommy Robson, and a host of others. He has fought draws with Harry Greb, the world's middleweight champion; Mike McTigue when Mike was the world's light heavyweight champion, and Jack Britton when Jack held the welterweight crown.

Held Delaney to Draw.

Bogash held Jack Delaney, the fighter who knocked out Flowers, to a draw in a sensational match staged in Boston. This is the sort of fighter that will answer the bell against the gritty colored battler who defeated Jock Malone in the East Chicago ring early in June. The Italian can hit with either hand and is ever ready to take a punch to land one.

Bogash and Flowers met in Boston and the Italian turned loose an attack in the second round which sent the colored boxer to the floor five different times. Flowers weathered the storm by hanging on and going into clinches. Since that bout Flowers asserted he was not in the best of shape and has hankered for a return match with the result the pair were signed for Aurora.

Walker-Wells Matched.

Mickey Walker, the world's welterweight champion, considered one of the best two-handed fighters in the game today, and Billy Wells, the clever English welter, yesterday were matched to box ten rounds at East Chicago on Aug. 7.

Promoter Mullen is making strenuous efforts to match Sid Terris of New York with Sammy Mandell of Rockford at either Aurora or East Chicago. While Manager Eddie Kane believes the match will draw more money in New York, he is overlooking the fact it will be just as attractive if they meet in a no-decision match before going to a decision in a New York arena.

Mandell did not look any too good in his ten round fracas with Solly Seeman in East Chicago last Friday night. His boxing plainly indicates he needs more work, which must be secured if Sammy is to remain in the running for the lightweight title.

LAPORTE WINS GOLF MATCH.

La Porte, Ind., July 18.—[Special.]—La Porte defeated Michigan City, 26 to 21, in an intercity golf match here today.

WILL ROGERS

Another "Bull" Durham advertisement by Will Rogers, Ziegfeld Follies and screen star, and leading American humorist. More coming. Watch for them.

A City That Needs a Room Clerk

They don't know who to run for Mayor in New York City against the present Mayor. I am what the Politicians call in a "Receptive Mood." I have been looking over my qualifications and find the following, along with some things that I would have to overcome. I wouldn't have any Newspapers against me. That is almost fatal in a New York Election. The more they are against you the better chance you have got. I could welcome all the prominent visitors and give them the key to the City. Really what New York needs is not a Mayor, but a Room Clerk. I could watch the Parades. I would have them all parade one day. That would kill all the parading business off in one sitting. I could speak at the Banquets. I could keep that up every night for I know enough not to eat there, and I could claim I had another engagement so I wouldn't have to listen to the other speeches. That's really where the indigestion comes from at Banquets. What's this got to do with "BULL" DURHAM? Nothing, only maybe if I was Mayor I could compel all the Aldermen and Policemen to smoke "BULL" DURHAM.

Will Rogers

P. S. There will be another piece here two weeks from now. Look for it.

NATIONAL DIRT TRACK AUTO RACE AT ROBY TODAY

Chicago race fans will see a national dirt track auto speed title decided at Roby speedway, 108th and Indianapolis avenue, this afternoon when thirty-six drivers bid for the seventy-five mile title at stake.

The field of speed pilots entered is the classiest to appear in a local race this season. All of Chicago's successful drivers are entered, as well as a strong contingent of out of town stars. Heading the invaders is Ralph Ormsby, premier dirt track speedster of the country, who will represent Indianapolis. Other out of towners entered are "Shorty" Cantlon of Detroit, Michigan state champion; Fred Roberts of Danville, Harry Grimmer of Griffith, Ind., and Rollin May of Lansing, Mich.

Cliff Woodbury and Sonny Talamont will carry the principal hopes of Chicago fans. Other local stars who are expected to battle with the winners are Harry Nichols, Al Waters, Leslie Allen, and Esthan Wenneston. Although Ormsby, Woodbury, and Talamont are picked as the most likely title prospects, any one of a dozen drivers may cop the championship.

In addition to the feature championship event there will be a five mile consolation and a five mile motorcycle race which will bring together the fastest two wheeled experts in the country. Busses which leave White City, 63d and South Park, for Hammond, Gary, and East Chicago stop directly in front of the Roby track. The first race starts at 2:30 o'clock.

AMERICAN TRACK STARS TAKE FIVE FIRSTS IN LONDON

BY DON SKENE.

(Picture on page 3.)

[Copyright: 1925: By The Chicago Tribune.]

LONDON, July 18.—[Special.]—The American track and field stars captured the lion's share of honors in the second day's program of the British Amateur Athletic association championships at Stamford Bridge stadium this afternoon by winning five firsts, two seconds, and two thirds.

The Americans' brave little band, mostly from the Illinois A. C., scored victories over the stellar opposition from British and European teams in the 100 yard dash, 220 yard dash, high jump, 440 yard hurdles, and pole vault, with second place in the pole vault and hop, step and jump, and third places in the 880 yard and 120 yard hurdles.

Murchison was the individual star of the meet, with easy wins in the 100 yard dash and 220 yard dash. Osborn, Olympic decathlon champion, won the high jump, with Plewdon of France second. Osborn's leap of 6 feet 4 inches beat the former record for the best championship performance, 6 feet 3½ inches, made by Howard Baker on the same field in 1920. He failed, however, to break the British record of 6 feet 5 inches. Osborn also placed second in the hop, step and jump.

Riley Wins 440 Hurdles.

Ivan Riley of the I. A. C. won the 440 yard hurdles in 57 4-5 seconds. Riley ran away from the small field, F. J. Blackett, London fireman, taking a bad spill on the last hurdle and failing to finish. Ray Dodge got third in the half mile.

The globe trotting sprinter, Murchison, won the 100 yard dash with two feet to spare in 9 9-10, from V. T. Heard of France.

The pole vault was disappointing. P. W. Jones, I. A. C.; C. K. Greening, Newark A. C., and F. J. Kelley were tied when the bar reached 12 feet, after Osborn failed at 11 feet 6. None of the three was able to clear it at 12, so the bar was gradually lowered to 11 feet 6. Kelley fell by the wayside, leaving the two Americans to fight it out. Jones won.

45,000 See Meet.

An enthusiastic crowd of 45,000 saw the Yankee invaders walk away with the meet in American Olympic games style, though in general it lacked thrills, failing to produce any impressive marks either in the track or field events.

After the meet the winners received medals and handshakes from the lord mayor of London in his impressive robes of office, and this was followed by the ceremony of presenting magnificent silver trophies, wherein the names of the winners are engraved but which they are not permitted to keep.

GLEN ACRES OPENS CLUBHOUSE

Glen Acres Golf club, newest of the north shore colony of country clubs, has just been opened to members with the clubhouse in operation. It is located west of the town of Glen View, at the corner of Schermerville and Glen View roads, comprising a tract of 157 acres, including building lots reserved for residences around the course. The course was laid out by Joe Roseman, formerly of Westmoreland. Its length is more than 6,600 yards, with plenty of traps for the unwary.

From the outlook at the present time, the coming event will surpass its predecessors both in number and class of competition.

FAST TIME IS MADE IN BELMONT YACHT RACE

As a result of excellent sailing weather, good time was made in the racing events held by the Chicago Yacht club off the Belmont harbor course yesterday. A light easterly breeze was blowing as fourteen sloops got under way at the starter's gun over the twelve nautical miles triangular course, and to make conditions better the wind hauled a little to the south on the return drive of the yachts.

Racing at flat time in the A class event, Yacht Tomboy, manned by Bill Fereau, raced across the finish line in 2:02:17, while Mitzi, piloted by Doc Cotter, and Nancy, with Sam Douchy aboard, finished in a dead heat for second honors in 2:02:32. The fight between these two sloops provided most of the thrills during the race. They remained deadlocked almost the entire distance. Colleen finished in the wake of the Mitzi and Nancy, and Pilot Clark Wright brought her home in 2:03:34. Yank, Gossoon, and Sari finished in the order they arrived.

The Seneca won the handicap class race in the corrected time of 1:55:39, while Invader was second in 1:59:20. Springtime, Sand Dab, Seminole, Renegade, and Illinois brought up the rearguard of the drive, the squad finishing the race in close order.

FOUR HIGH GUNS IN LINCOLN PARK SHOOT ARE GIVEN TROPHIES

CLASS shoot, seventy-five targets, sixteen yards rise, was the feature of the regular Saturday shoot at the Lincoln park traps yesterday. The high gun in each of the four classes entered in the competition received a trophy.

J. F. Bonner Jr. carried off the honors in the A section with 72, while A. W. Becker was high gun in the B class with a like count. Although L. J. Frey had a difficult time fighting it out with Dall Stansbury for honors in the C division, he finally won after breaking a total of 66 birdies. Bert Ley was high man in D section with 53.

J. E. Bonner won the doubles, twenty-five pairs, from his son, who scored 40, with a 47 mark. Both shooters remained at an even mark until the final sets of birds were broken.

Etchen Wins Mountain Trap Shoot Tourney

Denver, Colo., July 18.—Fred Etchen of Coffeyville, Kas., today won the Rocky mountain doubles trapshoot championship after shooting off a tie with H. M. Smith of Denver and C. W. Olney of Milwaukee. Etchen broke 48 out of 50 targets in shooting off the tie. Each of his opponents broke 47.

10 YACHTS START IN JACKSON PARK CRUISING RACE

With full racing canvas set and a fair breeze following, seven sloops and three yawls under the colors of the Jackson Park, Columbia and Racine Yacht clubs glided over the starting line off the Casino pier last night in the annual Jackson Park Yacht club's cruising race to Saugatuck, Mich.

Light westerly winds permitted all the racers to carry big balloon jibs, and Vanadis, the single entry of the Columbia Yacht club, appeared to have a decided advantage as the yachts disappeared over the horizon.

Wind Favors Vanadis.

Bert Williamson's Edith II. and Hal Redmon's Columbia of Jackson Park are looked upon as the most likely winners of the seventy-eight nautical mile run, because of their time allowance over Vanadis, although it is almost a certainty the big yawl will beat them over the finish line, and if the starting weather conditions prevail, the big double-sticker may win the time prize also.

The Racine Yacht club sent down four of their fastest sloops, Clarabelle, Diamond, Lillian and Iroquois. This is the biggest entry from the Wisconsin club that has ever participated in a Jackson Park club affair, and it is probable the North Shore sailors may give the local yachtsmen some unexpected competition.

Mackinac Race Soon.

Because of the Mackinac island race, which starts next Saturday, the Chicago Yacht club did not send down any of their fleet, and some of the larger yachts in Jackson park entered in this classic next week remained at their moorings. The race marks the start of the annual cruising season for the south side tars, and most of the boats entered will continue north along the Michigan coast after the race. All entries should finish some time today. The yachts starting were as follows:

25 FOOT SLOOPS—START 6 P. M.

Yacht.	Club.
Diamond	Racine Yacht club
Lillian	Racine Yacht club
Clarabelle	Racine Yacht club

30 FOOT SLOOPS AND YAWLS—6:10 P. M.

Columbia	Jackson Park Y. C.
Camilla	Jackson Park Y. C.

FRANKLIN
SPORT MODELS

THE FINEST IDEA OF THE YEAR

Having developed in the New Franklin a style so fundamentally fine that the open and closed models display equal beauty, it only remained for de Causse to do another unusual thing—create a new feature car. The result is this fascinating Sport Sedan. Its combination of custom touches gives it a personality never before available in cars of American manufacture. It enhances the comfort of touring by including much of the privacy and air of a town car. It reflects quality. With its Landau leather rear quarter, touring trunk, and separate club case for golf bags, it is the season's climax of style and convenience.

A SPECIAL SPORT CAR DISPLAY—There will be a special exhibit of these three beautiful cars, the Sport Sedan, Sport Touring and Sport Runabout, at Franklin showrooms during the next two weeks. Each represents the highest development of its particular type. Every line expresses high power, comfort and enduring style.

Like the four other Series 11 types, these sport cars come ready for the road—fully equipped with appropriate accessories, spare tire and cover—at the catalog price. Only freight and tax are extra.

Coast Drivers to Prove Fitness Under New Law

License Examinations Are Required by State of California.

ONE of the most important acts of the last California legislature was the enactment of a new statute governing the examination of motor vehicle operators. The existing motor vehicle act was amended so that after July 24 operators or applicants for operators' licenses may, in certain cases, be required to submit to an examination.

The experience of several eastern states indicates that some 15 to 25 per cent of those who apply for a license to operate motor vehicles are not qualified to do so, and their applications are rejected. It has been claimed that accidents were reduced 50 per cent through examination of drivers. It is held by proponents of the measure that if it is true that one-fourth of the operators cause one-half of the motor vehicle accidents, it is the duty of the authorities to ascertain what drivers constitute the one-fourth.

The new law provides that those who apply for a license after July 24 must answer certain questions, which are designed to reveal whether or not the applicant is physically and mentally fit to operate a motor vehicle and to understand highway warning and direction signs.

Should a person apply for an operator's license who has never before operated a motor vehicle, the law provides that at the discretion of the department he may receive a temporary permit. This permit he must always carry with him while driving and will be good for 30 days following the date of issuance, and will be valid only on condition that the holder be accompanied by a licensed operator at all times while driving on the public highways. Such licenses are sometimes called "pupil permits."

Should a person applying for an operator's license reveal in his application a limited experience as an operator or that there is some question about his mental or physical fitness to exercise reasonable control over a motor vehicle, then the department may require such person to submit to an examination as well as a demonstration of his ability to handle a motor vehicle under driving conditions.

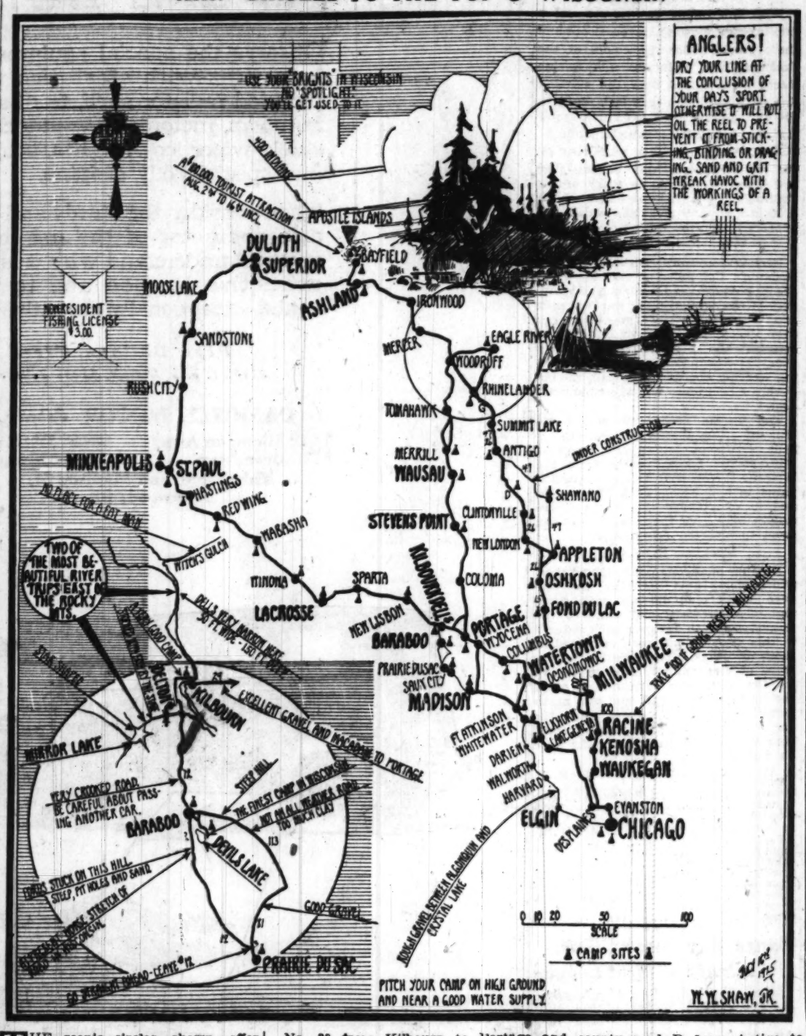
Among the questions which will be asked of an applicant are those relating to his hearing, eyesight, and whether the applicant has normal use of both hands and both feet, whether he has ever been afflicted with epilepsy, paralysis, insanity, or other disability or disease which might affect him as an operator and whether he is able to understand highway warning and direction signs.

HEAVY TAXES.

Motorists in Arkansas must pay a personal property tax on their cars, a tax of 4 cents a gallon on gasoline, 15½ cents per horsepower on the engine, 55 cents for each 100 pounds of weight of the car, and a tax of 10 cents a gallon on oil.

Tribune Tours

XIII.—CIRCLES TO THE TOP O' WISCONSIN



THE scenic circles shown offer pavement and good gravel every mile of the way and the finest week or two weeks' vacation trips anywhere in the middle west.

Last Monday morning at 5 o'clock THE TRIBUNE pathfinder left Kilbourn Dells for Milwaukee and Chicago, arriving at Tribune Tower at 1 p. m. Found No. 19 at Oconomowoc and Hartland well policed.

No. 29 from Kilbourn to Portage is excellent gravel, good gravel and macadam to Columbus, and a continuous stretch of hard road from Columbus to Chicago. However, the shortest route to Mirror Lake and the Dells is via Libertyville, Antioch, Lake Geneva, Fort Atkinson, Watertown, and Portage.

No. 10 from Madison to Ashland is very good gravel. Take county road G from Rhinelander to Summit Lake and county road D from Antigo to Clintonville to avoid a bad stretch on No. 26 south of Wittenburg.

We're receiving a number of fish stories from the lakes around Eagle River. Two muskies were taken on the same plug at the same cast and another story tells about two anglers whose baits were taken by the same fish. Interesting stories.

Drive over to Bayfield and see the Indian pageant, Aug. 2 to 16.

Tough Job.

Chief Constable Robert Bassom of Scotland Yard, London, was appointed to straighten out traffic tangles in London's narrow, crooked streets. He was taken to a hospital suffering from nervous prostration after traffic on the Strand had been paralyzed for two hours.

Quaker City Plan to Protect Motor Visitors in 1926

PHILADELPHIA, Pa. — Garage gouging charges for repairs, accessories, and service, will not be permitted to be inflicted on visitors to the Sesquicentennial International exposition, to be held in Philadelphia in 1926 in celebration of the 150th anniversary of American Independence.

The prevention will be through a combination of forces of the garage owners of Philadelphia and vicinity and the Sesquicentennial exposition management.

The garage and repair men and the automobile traffic committee of the Sesquicentennial are coöperating for the standardization of prices, and the banning of any persons trying get rich quick methods on motor pilgrims.

To prevent extortionate rates and to insure justice to both garage, repair and supply men and to the motorist, a classification of garages will be made. The present prices shall presumptively fix the classification. That is to say, a garage owner who now charges 75 cents for overnight storage will not be permitted to charge $2 for the same service during the Sesquicentennial.

Not that reasonable increases will be banned. The increased facilities, labor and other overheads incident to the augmented traffic will be considered and increases to cover them allowed. The rates will be posted conspicuously on the outside and inside of each "official," or recognized, garage.

Steps will also be taken to tie up the garage and other motor preparations with the hotel and housing preparations. The purpose is to give the incoming motor tourist, long before he enters the city limits, information where he can find hotel or rooming accommodations and a garage for his car.

Old Timers Best.

According to the motor vehicle department of Conecticut, the older they are the better they drive, both men and women. A man who is 90 and a woman who is over 70 are included in the list of persons licensed to drive cars in the state. More than 400 women over 50 years of age are on the list of licensed drivers and the percentage of auto accidents among them is very small. Department officials have found that the average age of operators who figure in accidents was just 23 years.

Mud Hole Lore.

When a car becomes stuck in the mud, do not try to put on speed to get out, for this will only spin the wheels and make them sink deeper. Put the engine in low, go slow, and do not try to turn from side to side. Keep straight ahead. If the front wheels are turned, the engine must push the car against the weight of the mud ahead. If the wheels start spinning, put on the emergency brake just enough to stop the spin. That will frequently enable them to take hold.

Chain-o'-Lakes Routes

AN Illinois Automobile club scout car has returned from a logging expedition to Chain o' Lakes, Newago, and Big Star lake, Michigan, and gives two good routes to that region, which boasts 120 lakes in one county.

There are thre main routes. One of these, which runs through Muskegon and Casnovia, has the most concrete. The other is by way of Grand Rapids, and the third by way of Ludington. Take the Dunes highway to Michigan City, M 11 to Holland, M 51 to Grand Rapids, and M 54 to the lake region surrounding Baldwin. This route is about ten miles shorter than that through Muskegon, which is preferred by many.

If one takes the alternate route he follows M 11 to Muskegon and route 46 to Casnovia, where the turn is north over M 54. Two detours are reported on the Ludington route, which is much longer than those through Grand Rapids and Muskegon.

Grease Trick.

Every now and again the spring bolts will offer some obstruction to the normal pressure of the grease gun with the result that no amount of twisting of the pump handle appears to produce any results. When this happens, and when you are without a "booster" gun, step up the pressure as much as possible and then, standing on the bumper nearest the particular bolt, rock the car up and down. Almost invariably the grease will start oozing out around the shackle just as you want it to.

British Cars.

Great Britain imported 13,797 passenger cars and 1,319 commercial vehicles, including motor omnibuses, motor fire engines, and motor ambulances, last year. Exports of passenger cars totaled 10,961 and commercial vehicles 1,730.

ONE OF A SERIES OF THE MOST POWERFUL ADVERTISEMENTS EVER PRINTED FOR ANY CAR

What other car could this be printed for?

STUTZ — THE CAR THAT MADE GOOD IN A DAY

"I never had to buy any parts"

We say this is one of the greatest automobile advertisements ever printed because it was not written by an imaginative advertising genius, but by a man whose words are steeped in experience—a Stutz owner.

"I have driven my Stutz continuously since 1916. Do not lay it up in winter. I claim 300,000 miles. In 7 years I have never had the transmission or differential down. I have been able to go with this car anywhere any other car can go and some places they could not. From the way things are, I guess the old ship will go another nine years. I have never had to buy any parts as yet."

Could any advertisement be greater? Backing this individual expression are the famous STUTZ FACTS showing for the first time in automobile history the performance of ALL cars of this make—revealing startling information upon which you can buy in safety.

Ask for the proof of the car itself—here and now! That after all is an even greater proof of Stutz value.

New Survey Shows 16 Laws Added to State Motor Code

Cutouts Barred, Highways Protected in New Budget.

BY J. L. JENKINS.

SIXTEEN new state laws regulating automobile traffic and the operation of cars in Illinois are listed in the latest compilation of the motor work done by the fifty-fourth general assembly. The compilation, completed yesterday by the Illinois State Automobile association, directly affects every car driver in the state and merits study.

The following list, grouped under general headings, cover only the new state regulations. All motor vehicle laws and traffic regulation formerly in effect are still active, except where they conflict with the new laws:

Motor Vehicle Equipment.

No motor vehicle except fire, police, or ambulance vehicles is permitted to show any red or green front lights. (H. B. 468.)

Exhaust pipes are required to be directed parallel to the ground or slightly upward. (H. B. 468.)

Muffler cutouts that can be operated from inside of car are prohibited. (H. B. 468.)

After Jan. 1, 1926, use of gongs, bells, or whistles by motor vehicles is prohibited, except by fire, police, and ambulance vehicles. (H. B. 468.)

Arterial Highways.

Motor vehicles are required to be brought to a full stop before driving onto or across a state hard road. (S. B. 79.)

Motor vehicles are required to be brought to a full stop before driving onto or across any city, town, or village street which has been designated and marked as a state route through such city, town, or village. (S. B. 79.)

Traffic on state hard roads and on city, town, or village streets designated and marked as part of the state route, is given right of way over traffic (except police, fire, and United States mail vehicles) on intersecting roads and streets. (S. B. 79.)

The above provisions—5, 6, and 7, apply to state routes 1 to 46, inclusive—the $60,000,000 bond issue roads—except at intersections of two state routes, at which points the state highway department is given control of traffic and may prescribe regulations by posting appropriate signs.

Traffic is required to obey such traffic regulations as may be posted by the state department of public works and buildings on state routes 47 to 185, inclusive—the $100,000,000 bond issue roads. (S. B. 79)

Routes Through Towns.

Control and regulation of traffic on city, town, or village streets paved by the state is vested in the state department of public works and buildings. Traffic orders of the department supersede local traffic ordinances upon such streets. (H. B. 116)

Traffic Regulations.

On single track pavemepts on one side of a highway, the driver on whose right is the wider shoulder is required to give right of way when meeting another vehicle. (S. B. 88.)

On state hard roads having two traffic lanes, traffic is required to keep to the right of the center line of the pavement, and is given right of way on that traffic lane. (S. B. 88.)

Stopping vehicles or permitting them to stand on state hard roads is prohibited unless in such position that there is ample room for two other vehicles to pass upon the road. (S. B. 88.)

Unloading of cargo, or transferring it from one vehicle to another, on state hard roads is forbidden, except in emergency. (S. B. 88.)

Pedestrians.

Persons walking upon state hard roads are required to keep on the left of the pavement, and when meeting a vehicle to step off the pavement to the left. (H. B. 127.)

Horse Drawn Vehicles.

Animal drawn or propelled vehicles on state hard roads are required, between one hour after sunset and one hour before sunrise, to have at least one lighted lamp showing white light ahead and red light toward rear. [H. B. 151.]

Speed of Busses.

Regulation of speed of busses operating under certificate of convenience and necessity is vested in Illinois commerce commission. (S. B. 516.)

Educate 'Em.

Jaywalkers in Williamsport, Pa., will henceforth be educated instead of arrested, under a new policy of politeness just adopted by the city police. Each violator will be handed a card which reads: "You have violated a traffic rule. Help us in the enforcement of all laws. This is for your safety as well as others." Warning by the police department. No arrests will be made unless the new system fails.

That Skid.

Brakes are much more likely to lock the wheels when the streets are wet; first, because of the decreased resistance to the brakes caused by lessened tire traction, and, second, because the brakes are more effective when the linings are damp. It is well to remember that brakes have always been inclined to be more conducive of skidding under the very conditions when skidding is most dangerous.

WIPE OFF TOOLS.

It is a good plan to wipe off all tools on a bit of oil waste before restoring them to the tool box. The oil deposited on the metal keeps it from rusting, which is a trouble to be guarded against.

THE INQUIRING REPORTER

He's Out to Learn the Truth About Motordom

The Tribune will pay $5 for each question accepted for the Inquiring Reporter to ask. Send name and address with your question to "The Inquiring Reporter," Chicago Tribune. For today's question $5 is awarded to Edward Schaedel, 2211 Michigan-av., Chicago.

The Question.

What would you suggest as the ideal evening drive in Chicago?

Where Asked.

Chicago avenue and Michigan avenue.

The Answers:

Dr. Leon M. Bellin, physician, 520 Rush street.—I like the Green Bay road to Ravinia park for a real fresh air drive and the road that touches some of the best scenery anywhere near Chicago. Most of the north roads are crowded now, but early in the evening the Green Bay offers fair going.

Oscar Rubenstein, 123 West Chicago avenue, cigar manufacturer.—Along the lake from Jackson boulevard north to Devon and return through the Lincoln park district is the best evening drive. If it is made between 9 and 10 p. m. on week nights, when traffic is light, the best that Chicago has to offer may be seen.

Lieut. George E. Lynch, 5261 West Monroe street, police officer.—I think that the drive west in Washington boulevard, through the west park system, through Oak Park to Maywood and return is about as pleasant an evening drive as can be found about Chicago. The boulevard is safe, and is excellently handled by the automatic signal light system.

Joel J. Fisk, 21 East Superior, manager.—I like to get out west into the country and follow some of the gravel roads that are being maintained now. They are seldom crowded, and they are practically unknown to the average Chicago motorist. Wolff road and other gravel lanes near Des Plains make wonderful evening drives.

Fred Hardy, 738 Rush street, writer.—The Northwest highway to Des Plaines, where traffic is not so congested makes a wonderful evening drive. The Dunes highway around the southern end of the lake to Michigan City is another excellent drive, but traffic is usually heavy over most of the distance.

GOSSIP OF THE AUTO TRADE

RECORD factory output has become the rule rather than the exception among the leading automobile plants, according to reports showing production averages for June. Chevrolet production hit the 55,000 mark during that month. Hupp turned in the biggest month's production in its history. Paige, Hudson, Essex, Willys-Knight, Rickenbacker and Ford are among others reporting "peak" loads. The latter beat its old monthly record by 6,000 cars.

Joseph Melin and George W. Peak officiated at the grand opening last week of the Uptown Stutz company sales and service headquarters at 5051 Broadway. Both men are widely known in Chicago retail circles.

A new line of six cylinder cars, featuring smart new bodies by Fisher, a new "harmonic balancer," and other engineering features, will shortly be announced by the Oakland Motor car company. A revision of prices with the new list from $70 to $350 lower is also contemplated.

The trend of 1925-26 automobile body work is graphically revealed in the special new car display arranged by the Franklin-Butler company on the row. The display is a part of the country-wide showing of Franklin sport types.

Earnings of Dodge Brothers, Inc., combined with those of the predecessor company, established a new high record for the first half of 1925, according to Detroit reports. Net sales of cars and parts totaled $117,045,569 and net earnings were $16,487,891. This is an increase of approximately $10,000,000 over the same period in 1924.

Reports from the Nash Motors company indicate that announcement of new models may be expected within a few days. E. H. McCarty, general sales manager, declared yesterday that plans for a nation-wide introduction of the new "special" and "advanced six" series cars will be disclosed this week.

Chart Five Routes Between Detroit and St. Louis

THE Detroit Automobile club has just prepared and printed no less than five routes between that city and St. Louis—one as good as another, and the mileage practically the same.

All roads shown are paved and in excellent condition, and if there is any choice at all, the Dayton-Indianapolis route is recommended by Ed Matheson, chief of the touring bureau of the Automobile club.

The road via Dayton and Indianapolis has a mileage of 572 miles; via Ft. Wayne and Indianapolis, 552 miles; via Kalamazoo, St. Joseph, Mich., Gary and Danville, Ill., 593 miles; via Chicago and Danville, 625 miles, and via Chicago and Springfield, 583 miles.

MOTORDOM

Big Summer Sales Help Motor Makers to New Records

Some Leaders Favor Plan to Junk Old Model Cars.

BY WHITCOMB WILLIAMS.

DETROIT, Mich., July 18.—[Special.]—Production figures for the first half of 1925 have not as yet been made public, but when they are it is quite likely they will top any previous figures for a similar period. In the early months of 1924 the automobile industry was at its peak, which, if it had continued, would have marked the year as the greatest in its history. It is common knowledge now that the high plane of production established early in the year could not be maintained and there was a decline in activities in April and May with a slump throughout the summer.

This year the automobile and allied industries will probably accomplish what they started last year. In the beginning of 1925 production and employment in the local factories were on a par with the early months of last year. But there has not been the slump which marked the 1924 program before it had advanced far into the summer.

The first half of the year will probably show that the output was equal to well in excess of the 4,000,000 mark—certainly an exceedingly profitable period, from the standpoint of both manufacturer and dealer. Stocks continue low, with the floors practically cleared. Seldom has the industry seen a season where automobiles were so scarce and deliveries so seemingly slow.

Advanced sales show that medium priced cars have shown an advance in sales of at least 10 per cent. These are the cars ranging in prices from $1,000 to $2,000.

What shall we do with automobiles that, on account of old age, have outlived their usefulness, and are a menace to life and property?

A joint solution is being advanced in automobile circles in the recommendation to manufacturers that old "busses" below a certain valuation should be bought in and junked. Speculation, however, regarding the effect of such a plan upon motoring conditions differs.

Dealers favor the plan to a certain extent because of the fact that it would remove a very objectional form of sales resistance and encourage what is known in the trade as clean sales—those that are unincumbered by trade-in considerations.

Whether the plan will gain any headway depends partly upon the manufacturers and partly on the motoring public. In the last analysis, the public would have to pay for the cost of dunking the car.

WORK BENCH WISDOM

BY ERWIN GREER.

WATCH FOR CARBON.

AN important detail to watch, and that which keeps the engine running efficiently, is compression. An engine with faulty compression may appear to run fairly well when the car is rolling at a reasonable speed or when it is working hard. Lost compression shows up when the car is being driven at comparatively low speed.

Under either of these conditions the engine will run with an irregularity that makes the car jerk or jump instead of running steadily, as it should. This condition indicates that there is considerable loss of power and that much more gasoline is being burned than when the engine is developing its full power.

Thousands of gallons of gasoline are wasted every day by motorists because of the inefficient operation of their engines. In fact, gasoline mileage may be cut in half through compression loss, and still the engine may continue to run fairly well, according to the ideas of the amateur driver.

If the engine is not running well and a compression loss is suspected, the easiest way to detect it is to use the crank and turn the engine over by hand, thus feeling the compression in each cylinder. You will nearly always find that some pistons will go over compression much easier than others, and this means that somewhere there is a leak in this cylinder.

The number of miles which a car should run without having the valves reground varies greatly, depending upon oiling and other conditions.

With the average car under normal running conditions, it is probably wise to have the valves ground at least once every 5,000 to 7,000 miles, depending upon the running condition of the engine.

FARM and GARDEN

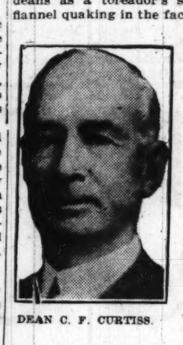
Dean Tells Why Graduates Don't Return to Farm

Land School Men Needed in Many Allied Industries.

BY FRANK RIDGWAY.

This is the fourth of a series of articles dealing with the decreased enrollment situation in agricultural colleges.

CRITICISING the agricultural college for sending the bulk of its graduates away from the farm is about as tormenting to some deans as a toreador's square of red flannel quaking in the face of a spotted Spanish bull.



DEAN C. F. CURTISS.

Misunderstandings have grown out of the fact that a comparatively small percentage of men with agricultural college diplomas ever become actual plow boys, and there is plenty being said about it. Some critics say that farm school graduates' failure to go back to the farm is one of the gravest problems confronting agriculture.

I hadn't been in Dean C. F. Curtiss' office two minutes the other day before he made it quite clear to me that he has no apologies to make to any one because only one-fourth of the agricultural graduates from the Iowa State college go into farming.

"That is an old, shallow criticism of agricultural colleges," said Dean Curtiss, who has had the deanship of the agricultural college at Ames for twenty-eight years. "It would stop the wheels of progress if all of our agricultural college graduates went to the farm.

"Agricultural colleges are obligated to furnish men for work allied to agriculture, just as much as they are to train men for actual farming. The colleges would fall if they didn't. Where would they train men for work in forestry, dairy manufacturing, and for agricultural positions in banking and other business concerns? They cannot stop with the training of men just to go out and work on farms. The agricultural industry does not stop with the farm—it involves the whole process of manufacturing and marketing."

President R. A. Pearson of the Iowa State college, where the attendance record has made only minor fluctuations during the last few years, increasing slightly last year—says that two points in connection with enrollment should be clearly understood by the public.

DR. R. A. PEARSON. [Harris & Ewing Photo.]

"The first is that the great majority of agricultural students remain in agricultural work after securing their college education," he says. "The second point is that all students who have taken an agricultural course should not be expected to engage in agriculture. It is all right—in fact, it is desirable, occasionally, for an agricultural graduate to secure additional preparation and enter upon other work outside of the recognized agricultural and allied fields, such as teaching agriculture in colleges and schools and agricultural journalism.

"We are glad to see an occasional agricultural graduate going into banking, or business, or preaching, or government service whenever the work to be performed relates especially to farmers and farm communities," said Dr. Pearson. "Some graduates have found their places in these outside lines of work and are succeeding and rendering valuable service to the farmers with whom they deal. More of this kind of trained service would be a benefit to the country."

As Dean Curtiss ran over the list of 120 different kinds of positions now being held by graduates of the Iowa State college, which is said to have more agricultural students than any other school in the world, he said he considered it the duty of his college to train men to fill these positions allied to agriculture. This allied field is demanding more and more men.

Since this vast field is filled with positions related directly to agriculture, Dean Curtiss' analysis of the general decreased enrollment of agricultural colleges would indicate that it has been shortsightedness on the part of some students who have turned their backs on farm schools just because actual farming has been less attractive during the last few years.

Passing the Purnell bill at the last session of congress is viewed with keen interest by Dean Curtiss. He says the money made available the first of July through the passage of this act to broaden the scope of federal experiment stations will make possible the development of a new field for agriculturally trained men.

The Purnell measure provides, in addition to the money received by agricultural experiment stations, an appropriation of $20,000 this year and an increase of $10,000 a year until it reaches $60,000 a year. Sixty thousand dollars will be appropriated to the stations each year thereafter, making provisions and funds available for newer lines of work which have become important since the Hatch and Adams acts were passed.

While these acts called for investigation of the field of production primarily, the Purnell bill provides chiefly for the investigation of the farmers' economic problems, including questions of farm management, grading, and standardization, transportation, storage, marketing of farm products, financing agricultural enterprises, home economics, and social problems of country life.

"That work will be of tremendous help to farmers, to the agricultural industry, and to educational institutions. The fund of information gathered through research is the basis of teaching," says Dean Curtiss.

"Here is another field that people often overlook. We have in this state more than 400 rural consolidated schools, which are big factors in rural life, requiring agricultural teachers. The Smith-Hughes act provides for vocational training, including agriculture, in all of the high schools that accept the provisions of the bill. We have 100 of the Smith-Hughes schools in Iowa. All of the men heading the work in these schools should have agricultural training because they primarily serve farmers. The consolidated schools and the Smith-Hughes schools alone call for more than 500 men trained in agriculture."

Iowa has 99 county agents and practically all of them are agricultural college graduates. There are more than 100 agriculturally trained men on the teaching staff at its state college. The soil survey work uses about twenty graduates. The state department of agriculture uses about fifty men. Part of those positions require college trained men. In addition to all of these fields there is a constant and growing demand among business institutions for agricultural college graduates, including banks, loan companies, and manufacturing concerns.

"We would consider it a misfortune if our agricultural students went into farming and neglected industries allied to agriculture," added Dean Curtiss. "I think the reason so many of our graduates do not go into farming immediately after leaving college is because a good percentage of them have earned all or a part of their college expenses. Many of them are in debt when they finish school. It requires capital to start farming, and these men do not have it, so they go into salaried positions at once. Our tenant system is discouraging, too. When it is changed so that we will have longer leases and a chance for more profit for the land owner as well as the tenant, then, perhaps, farming will be more attractive to our graduates."

Dean Curtiss says a big percentage of the Iowa State college agricultural graduates intend to go into farming eventually. "A great many of our men who go into work allied to agriculture immediately after they finish school are looking forward to farming as soon as they get sufficient capital. Men just out of college and in debt do not want to go deeper by starting to farm on borrowed money."

The agricultural faculty at the college is making a thorough study of rural economics and sociology. The school is offering new courses in this field to meet the needs and to equip graduates to fill positions that have developed since agriculturists have taken a more active interest in the business side of farming and the cooperative marketing of the products of the farm. Approximately twenty teachers and investigators at Ames are devoting their time to this new field. The 1925 catalogue has two pages devoted to a brief description of such courses as agriculture in relation to other industries, economic geography of agriculture, agricultural economics, rural law and business practice, farm organization and management, farm accounting, marketing agricultural products, farm capital and credit, cooperation in agriculture, elevator and shipping association, agricultural rent and land tenure, administration of marketing organizations, transportation, railway traffic and rates, rural sociology, rural community organizations, and others.

These new features of the curriculum are making the college more attractive to the prospective student and probably will have much to do in improving the enrollment situation.

They Are Content to Wait for a Four Like This Uncommon eagerness to own the new Chrysler Four indicates how far this latest Chrysler achievement is an advance over the usual standards of four-cylinder performance, appearance and value.

Never, perhaps, in history has a four-cylinder car been so heartily welcomed or so greatly desired.

The first showing of the Chrysler Four has attracted thousands to our showrooms. Scores have placed orders, without demonstrations, after a first view of the car. So instantaneous has been its appeal that, already, public demand exceeds scheduled production.

It is especially significant of Chrysler value that buyers everywhere express their willingness to wait rather than purchase a car of lesser quality than the Chrysler Four.

Every facility of the great Chrysler plants is concentrated today on meeting the public demand for the desirable new Chrysler Four. Production is now running more than 500 quality cars a day, the greatest output of four-cylinder cars ever attained in a Chrysler plant.

HIRED HANDS ON FARMS TREKKING TOWARD CITIES

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., July 18.—[Special.]—Analysis of a survey of farm population made by the department of agriculture shows that on Jan. 1, 1925, there were approximately 109,000 fewer hired farm laborers on farms than on Jan. 1, 1924.

This is a decrease of 3.4 per cent during 1924. There were 3,085,000 farm laborers on farms Jan. 1, 1925, compared with 3,194,000 Jan. 1, 1924. These figures apply only to hired farm laborers who resided on farms for a period of at least 30 days. They do not take into account farm laborers who resided on farms less than 30 days during 1924, or laborers who regularly lodged off the farm.

Back to the Farm.

The movement o fsuch farm laborers from farms to cities during 1924 is estimated by the department at 461,000. The opposite movement back to farms is estimated at 352,000. Although the total movement of farm population to the cities was still large in 1924, it was partly offset by a return movement.

Out of a gross movement of 2,075,000 men, women, and children from farms to cities, 22.2 per cent were hired laborers. A gross movement the other way, from cities to farms, of 1,396,000 persons comprised 25.2 per cent of hired laborers.

Information obtained by the department from many sources indicates that in 1920, which was the peak post-war year in farm prosperity, there was a net gain in total farm population of approximately 500,000 over the preceding year, or almost exactly the increase of births over deaths on farms.

Net Gain Diminishes.

The following year, it is believed, the farm population made a net gain of only about half its natural increase of births over deaths, indicating the beginning of a trend of laborers, tenants, owners, and their families to cities.

The department estimated that the movement from farms to cities in 1922 resulted in a net decrease of 460,000 in farm population. Apparently in 1923 the movement continued, and reached its peak, with a net loss of farm population equal to or exceeding that of 1922.

SIDEWALKS WILL BE NARROWED FOR STREET WIDENING

Widening of Halsted and Madison streets, Milwaukee avenue and other important heavy traffic thoroughfares by cutting several feet from sidewalks on both sides is to be undertaken at once, John J. Sloan, president of the board of local improvements, announced yesterday.

The scheme, Mr. Sloan points out, will relieve congestion considerably without great inconvenience to pedestrians because of the narrower sidewalks and can be accomplished at a comparatively low cost. Surveys to determine where such improvements can be effected are under way, he said.

Halsted street is to be widened by taking two and one half feet from each sidewalk between Fulton and 22d streets, West Madison street between Robey and Rockwell streets will be widened by a similar process, and on Milwaukee avenue, three feet is to be taken from the sidewalks between Chicago and Armitage avenues.

"Such a procedure will add an extra lane of traffic on each street, and render the parking common to those streets less objectionable," Mr. Sloan declared.

BETTER SERVICE IS PROMISED ON SURFACE LINES

Immediate service betterments by means of track extensions and, if the council will approve the scheme, by the addition of motor busses in several outlying sections of the city, was promised eo a subgroup of the council local transportation by Guy A. Richardson, vice president of the Chicago Surface Lines, yesterday.

Speaking for the Chicago Railways company, which operates the north and west side llens, Mr. Richardson asserted that installation of motor busses on Diversey avenue between Crawford and Laramie avenue in the near future is contemplated.

Work on the extension of the Devon avenue line from Western avenue to Kedzie and the Cicero avenue line from Irving Park boulevard to Montrose avenue will be undertaken as soon as the consents of abutting property owners as well as the approval of the state commerce commission have been obtained.

GOLD EXPORTS LIGHT.

New York, July 18.—[Special.]—Exports of gold last week as reported by the federal reserve bank of New York were $128,000 and imports were $51,000. The bulk of the exports went to Mexico and Germany.

INSULL RAILWAY PLANS TO BUY ANOTHER ROAD

The Chicago and Illinois Midland railway, a coal carrier controlled by the Insull interests of Chicago, today concluded a preliminary agreement for the purchase of the line of the bankrupt Chicago, Peoria and St. Louis railway between Springfield and Pekin, Ill.

Approval of the proposition by the state and federal commerce commissions and the federal court would result in a consolidation of the two lines and a general rehabilitation of the defunct system under the plan of the purchasers. Six months will be required for working out details. Ultimately the consolidated lines will be turned over to electric operation instead of steam.

Property owners along the Chicago, Peoria and St. Louis have donated 100 feet additional right of way to enable the purchasers to carry out their plans. Negotiations for the sale were conducted through the bondholders' protective committee of the road, which has coöperated with the receivers in management since a foreclosure sale last December.

W. S. Moore Grain Co. of Duluth, Minn., Has Failed

Duluth, Minn., July 18.—(AP)—An assignment in favor of its creditors was made by the W. S. Moore Grain company of Duluth, New York, and Chicago Friday. Watson S. Moore, president of the concern and wartime secretary of the United States grain administration announced the action today.

Shortage of ready money was given by Mr. Moore as the reason for the suspension which was precipitated yesterday when the company was forced to notify certain grain exchange firms in other cities that it could not take care of its trades.

LITTLE CHICAGO BUSINESS.

The W. S. Moore company, it was said yesterday, had little business on the Chicago Board of Trade.

RAILROAD NOTES

In order to procure funds for its purchase of control of the St. Louis-Southwestern system, the Rock Island railroad asked the interstate commerce commission for permission to issue $7,500,000 in three-year 4½ per cent notes. The Rock Island proposed to put up as collateral a part of its St. Louis-Southwestern stock.

The Atlantic Coast Line has filed protest with the interstate commerce commission against the construction of a new railroad by Seaboard Air Line interests in connection with the Fort Myers extension of that road.

A special meeting of stockholders of the Delaware & Hudson has been called for Sept. 8, to vote on the lease of the Buffalo, Rochester & Pittsburgh for 999 years. The managers approved the lease on June 24 and D. R. and P. directors approved it May 1.

The Western Pacific railroad was authorized to acquire control of the Sacramento Northern railroad at an approximate cost of $4,460,000. The Sacramento Northern will transfer both stocks and bonds to the Western Pacific. An issue of securities, if necessary, was also approved by the commission.

The Mobile and Gulf railroad has asked the interstate commerce commission to allow it to take over and operate twenty-nine miles of railroad running from Fayette to Buhl. The railroad is not now being operated.

J. F. Tansaig, president of the Wabash railway, expressed the opinion that the purchase of the Manistee and Northwestern railroad, which runs from Manistee to Traverse City and Grayling, Mich., would be considered if it could be shown that the road could be operated at a profit.

The Great Northern railway has been granted permission by the interstate commerce commission to construct a fifty-mile extension of its line from Bairville to Scobey, Mont.

There were 38,187 cars handled by the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe railroad during the week ended July 17, compared with 36,133 cars handled during the corresponding week last year.

PROFIT TAKING BREAKS PRICES IN GRAIN MART

BY CHARLES MICHAELS

Profit taking on a rather extensive scale turned the wheat market downward, coupled with the fact that there was a reaction at Liverpool. The failure of a house in the northwest also had more or less influence on the trade, while country offerings of cash wheat were the largest seen so far this season.

At the close of the session wheat showed a loss of 1⅞@2¼c for the day. Coarse grains were affected by the decline of wheat, and corn was 1⅝@3¼c lower. Oats were 1⅛@1¼c lower, while rye was 1½@1¾c lower.

Trend of the wheat market was upward this week and a net advance of 5½@7¼c was established for the period, with September delivery comparatively strongest. Corn closed the week at a decline of 1½@2½c, while oats were ⅛@2¼c lower and rye ½@1¾c lower to 1¼c higher, latter for December.

Early Selling of Wheat.

There was good selling of wheat early in the session because of the decline at Liverpool, which was explained as due to the sale of another Russian cargo. Local pressure developed and the market displayed considerable weakness. Buying developed on the break, led by several prominent houses and the market rallied. Local shorts made haste to come in on the way up, and there was a quick upturn. The bulge attracted realizing sales, which came in such liberal volume as to burden the market.

Prices declined quite rapidly toward the last, many longs going out for fear of unfavorable developments over the week-end. A number of reports told of material rust damage, while some stated that damage would probably not be heavy. There was further expression of belief that crop losses from the recent hot weather would be important.

Corn Market Heavy.

Tone of the corn market was heavy throughout the session. A feature was the selling of considerable December corn, believed to have been for a local long. There was more or less pressure on the September delivery and July longs liquidated. Nothing in the news encouraged buying and support given the market was limited. Crop and weather news was generally of a favorable character. Movement to market remains light. Stocks of corn are decreasing. Local shipments this week were three times as large as receipts.

Oats were lower at all times. Early selling was partly in way of liquidating distressed holdings for Northwestern account. The influence of other markets was felt as demand was easily supplied. Some buying was credited to cereal interests and scattered commission demand shown. Elevator interests continued to buy July and sell September at the difference.

Rye trade was moderate and liquidation was induced by the action of wheat. Tone was rather firm early.

Hog Market Lighter.

Interest in the market for hog product was lighter. The decline in prices for hogs and grain had a depressing influence and losses were established. Buying was scattered but mostly local. At the close lard was 5@15c lower and ribs 10@15c lower and bellies unchanged to 10c lower. Export trade quiet. Domestic shipping demand for meats fair.

WORLD'S·GRAIN MARKET·NEWS

Sentiment of the wheat trade was more mixed at the close, although there was a great deal of bullishness. There has been heavy selling by commission houses, who were active buyers a week or two ago, and while there has been an increase in commission house trade the market has had a big load put on it and some of those who were bullish at lower prices are indifferent about following the advance, believing that the crop damage news has been well discounted by the upturn of 21c from the recent low point.

One of the largest of the local traders, who has been active on the buying side of late, was a big seller on Friday and a buyer in person on the advance yesterday. After he had finished, pit traders who had followed him became sellers and were in a measure responsible for the decline at the last.

Winnipeg was heavy part of the day, with breaks of 2¾@3¾c at the extreme, July leading, while the close was at net losses of 1⅝@2⅛c. Minneapolis lost 1⅜@2¼c and Kansas City 1½@1¾c.

It was said that holders of September corn were the principal sellers of December, also that several large traders sold December outright. It is difficult to sell July and September corn in volume without depressing prices, and there are also times when they respond readily to moderate buying. The short interest in December and May corn was said to have been considerably increased.

The country was more disposed to sell wheat to arrive and it attracted more attention. So far, however, the movement of new wheat has been below the average, as the country is evidently disposed to hold for higher prices.

Foreign houses have been liberal buyers of wheat and have covered big lines within the last few days. Russell's News of New York says that 2,000,000 bu were bought altogether; they say, however, that there is no confirmation to the report.

The Alberta department of agriculture says that dry weather has completely changed the crop situation. Sections in the southern and central parts are once more facing the certainty of a crop failure, and a downward revision of crop estimates is expected.

NEWS OF THE CROPS

George C. Bryant in a to Jackson Bros. from Great Falls, Mont., said: "Reliable information here indicates damage of 10 to 30 per cent to the spring wheat crop. «Summer fallow land holding up fairly well but shows the effects of drought; winter wheat fields have been reseeded to spring wheat. Deterioration will continue until rain and cooler weather prevails."

The Winnipeg Free Press quotes Dr. Bailey, a Dominion plant pathologist attached to the Manitoba Agricultural college, who, after a very careful examination of the rust situation, says that the rust in its early stages is quite general on the wheat, but there has been no development during the past week. Furthermore, the crops are making rapid progress under favorable weather and are causing no worry at this time.

ANNOUNCEMENT

FORMAN First Mortgage BONDS

Prompt Payment of Principal and Interest

Unconditionally Guaranteed

By Leading Insurance Company

For more than forty years it has been the steadfast policy of the house of George M. Forman and Company to provide every possible sound and effective safeguard to protect the investments of its clients against all loss.

In accordance with this policy we have, after many months of careful study and thorough investigation, completed arrangements with a leading indemnity insurance company to provide the purchaser of Forman Bonds with the strongest, most liberal unconditional guarantee of absolute safety ever offered by an investment institution to its clients.

A Guarantee That Actually GUARANTEES Unqualifiedly—Without Any "Ifs" or "Ands"

Investors may now have their Forman Bonds insured and payment of interest and principal unconditionally guaranteed by the Metropolitan Casualty Insurance Company of New York, one of the best known and leading indemnity companies of America. Upon payment of a premium of one-half of one per cent per annum this Company, a large, strong, responsible insurance organization under strict legal supervision—an institution entirely independent and in no way affiliated or connected with George M. Forman and Company—will unconditionally guarantee the payment of principal and interest of Forman Bonds within 60 days of the date of maturity.

It offers a guarantee of payment that guarantees unconditionally—a guarantee without strings or qualifications—no requirement that compels exhaustion of all other means of collection before the insurance indemnity becomes available. It is the broadest, the most liberal and most effective insurance guarantee ever provided by an investment house for the protection of its clients.

It is the remarkable record of this house, "40 Years Without Loss to a Customer," and the effectiveness of the strong safeguards employed by George M. Forman and Company to protect the bonds underwritten and offered by this house, that has made this unusual guarantee possible. It is because the safety of every Forman Bond is so definitely assured under the Forman Plan of making first mortgage real estate bond issues that an insurance company can and will issue such a broad and liberal insurance guarantee.

In offering this optional guarantee to investors we are providing an extra service and additional assurance of the absolute safety of Forman Bonds. Forman Bonds have always been safe investments. The fundamental and sound character of the security back of Forman Bonds has always been beyond question. For that reason the purchase of the insurance guarantee in connection with the purchase of Forman Bonds is left to the option of the bondholder. Investors who prefer, may still purchase Forman Bonds (bonds of the same issues guaranteed by the insurance company) without the guarantee and receive the full interest yield earned by the bond.

The providing of the additional protection to the investor afforded by this Guarantee means that the safeguards which secure every Forman Bond Issue will be subject not only to the strict vigilance, care, caution and thorough investigation of the house of Forman before underwriting and offering any bond issue, but offers the further assurance that every Forman Bond Issue also meets the exacting standards of safety demanded by the insurance company guaranteeing the issue. It means there is a double assurance that, with or without the guarantee, Forman Bond Issues are absolutely protected by the strongest safeguards known to sound mortgage banking.

The Guarantee

THE METROPOLITAN CASUALTY INSURANCE COMPANY OF NEW YORK, for value received, hereby guarantees to the holder payment of the principal amount of the bond hereinafter described and the payment of the interest coupons thereto attached, as the same fall due, upon the condition that, at its option,

Local operators gained the upper hand in the week-end hog market as eastern demand subsided. Prices were slashed unevenly 15@50c, compared with Friday's erratic trading. The top and average prices were cut to $14.05 and $13.30, respectively, against a top of $14.60 and average of $13.90 two days previous. Prevailing quotations are lowest since July 1 and largely 15@25c under the close of previous week.

Prospects of a moderate Monday run induced some traders to hold better grades off of the market, despite the bearish attitude of larger packers, who claim a loss at present prices. Shipments from Chicago last week totaled 31,800, as small as any weekly shipments since last October, barring week ending June 13.

Hog Receipts Larger.

Hog receipts at Chicago last week at 126,400 were 7,200 larger than previous week's supply, but below any corresponding week in over five years and 40,900 under the five year average. Estimated average weight of hogs at 242 lbs was 2 lbs heavier than previous week, but 1 lb lighter than the five year average. General average cost of hogs at $13.65 stands highest since the peak in March.

Beef Steers' Price Better.

Broad demand for better grades of beef steers elevated values of these unevenly during last week, bringing top 1,146 lb averages to $14.50, a new high mark for the year, which stands 65c above the peak previous week. While values of best corn fed cattle soared, inbetween and commoner grades, on the other hand, flooded the market and an accumulation of these descriptions were purchased at unevenly lower prices after mid-week. General average cost of good beef cattle last week at $12.00 stood highest since 1920, comparing with $11.80 previous week and $9.00 a year ago. Calves slumped 50c to $1.00 during the week. Stockers and feeders declined 25c.

Lambs Sell Low.

The sensational decline in lambs thus far this month carried values of natives to a new low level for the season late last week, best "sorts" after Wednesday bringing $14.50, against a top of $15.35 a week previous. However, a letup in supplies checked the drastic break and strength appeared at the extreme close. Aged ewes, due to broad country demand for breeders, advanced as the week progressed, closing fully $1.00 above a week previous. General average cost of aged sheep, due more to the improvement in quality than to the advance in prices, figured at $9.00, the highest since March.

Receipts for Monday are estimated at 18,000 cattle, 40,000 hogs, and 15,000 sheep, against 17,021 cattle, 40,926 hogs, and 16,929 sheep a week ago and 22,974 cattle, 53,019 hogs, and 21,486 sheep a year ago. Next week's receipts are estimated at 55,000 cattle, 120,000 hogs, and 63,000 sheep, against 56,324 cattle, 138,241 hogs, and 77,874 sheep the corresponding period a year ago.

Local operators gained the upper hand in the week-end hog market as eastern demand subsided. Prices were slashed unevenly 15@50c, compared with Friday's erratic trading. The top and average prices were cut to $14.05 and $13.30, respectively, against a top of $14.60 and average of $13.90 two days previous. Prevailing quotations are lowest since July 1 and largely 15@25c under the close of previous week.

Prospects of a moderate Monday run induced some traders to hold better grades off of the market, despite the bearish attitude of larger packers, who claim a loss at present prices. Shipments from Chicago last week totaled 31,800, as small as any weekly shipments since last October, barring week ending June 13.

Hog Receipts Larger.

Hog receipts at Chicago last week at 126,400 were 7,200 larger than previous week's supply, but below any corresponding week in over five years and 40,900 under the five year average. Estimated average weight of hogs at 242 lbs was 2 lbs heavier than previous week, but 1 lb lighter than the five year average. General average cost of hogs at $13.65 stands highest since the peak in March.

Beef Steers' Price Better.

Broad demand for better grades of beef steers elevated values of these unevenly during last week, bringing top 1,146 lb averages to $14.50, a new high mark for the year, which stands 65c above the peak previous week. While values of best corn fed cattle soared, inbetween and commoner grades, on the other hand, flooded the market and an accumulation of these descriptions were purchased at unevenly lower prices after mid-week. General average cost of good beef cattle last week at $12.00 stood highest since 1920, comparing with $11.80 previous week and $9.00 a year ago. Calves slumped 50c to $1.00 during the week. Stockers and feeders declined 25c.

Lambs Sell Low.

The sensational decline in lambs thus far this month carried values of natives to a new low level for the season late last week, best "sorts" after Wednesday bringing $14.50, against a top of $15.35 a week previous. However, a letup in supplies checked the drastic break and strength appeared at the extreme close. Aged ewes, due to broad country demand for breeders, advanced as the week progressed, closing fully $1.00 above a week previous. General average cost of aged sheep, due more to the improvement in quality than to the advance in prices, figured at $9.00, the highest since March.

Receipts for Monday are estimated at 18,000 cattle, 40,000 hogs, and 15,000 sheep, against 17,021 cattle, 40,926 hogs, and 16,929 sheep a week ago and 22,974 cattle, 53,019 hogs, and 21,486 sheep a year ago. Next week's receipts are estimated at 55,000 cattle, 120,000 hogs, and 63,000 sheep, against 56,324 cattle, 138,241 hogs, and 77,874 sheep the corresponding period a year ago.

STOCK MARKET RETAINS GAINS; TIRE PRICES UP

STOCK MARKET AVERAGES

	High.	Low.	Last.	Net Change.
20 railroads	90.20	79.93	89.15+	.91
20 industrials	149.97	148.99	149.83+	.49
40 stocks	115.13	114.46	114.88+	.21

New York, July 18.—(AP)—Cumulative effects of such favorable trade developments as increased half-year earnings by leading industrial companies and higher prices for a wide range of commodities lifted stock prices to new high ground today. The usual week-end profit taking was readily absorbed without any effect on the market's upward trend.

Standard rail and industrial shares maintained their leadership of the advance today, setting the pace for the more volatile specialties and establishing record high prices on gains of one to four points. The average price of fifty representative stocks established a new high record for the year, thereby bettering the previous high price established in February.

Trade Reports Are Cheerful.

The stock exchange now is giving most attention to trade reports. These have taken on a colorful and cheerful tone during the last week, and it is quite natural that such issues as those of the steel, copper, rubber, and public utility groups should move along as evidence comes to hand of the betterment of conditions, these lines reflected mainly in minor ratios of operation as well as in fewer prices.

The advance today of 10 to 15 per cent in the price of rubber manufactures, notably tires, is a direct reflection of the tremendous inflation which has taken place in the price of crude rubber, which today was quoted at the year's highest level of $1.20 per pound, as compared with a price of fractionally more than 11 cents at this time last year.

American Can Leads Rise.

Trading interest was focused on the spectacular performance of American Can, which soared to a new high for all time at 208¾, in response to reports that plans were being worked out for the long awaited recapitalization of the company. Under the pressure of realising sales the stock eased off at the close to 207¾, a net gain of 3 points for the day.

The advance in Sears-Roebuck shares to 131¾, a gain of about $4 points from the year's low, reflects increased earnings and a probable split up of the stock, which was predicted by Julius Rosenwald, chairman, when he left for Europe. He said it would not be considered before his return to Chicago. He is expected to arrive from abroad Sept. 1. The split may take the form of giving four shares for each present share, the new stock to be put on an annual dividend basis of $2. This would equal $8 on present stock, against $6, now being paid.

Low High Marks Attained.

At the same time buying operations made good headway in a diversified list of the more representative specialties. Among the score of new high records marked up were Mack Trucks, American Tobacco common and "B" shares, General Railway Signal common and preferred, Montgomery Ward, Coca Cola, Otis Elevator, American Works & per and preferred, American Safety Razor, Pittsburgh-Stirling, American Agricultural Chemical common and preferred, General American Tank Car preferred, and Sloss-Sheffield Steel.

Accumulation of Southern Railway common in anticipation of a higher dividend pushed the stock up to a new peak at 131¾. Most of the other rails were neglected, although Northern Pacific, Ann Arbor issues, and Frisco continued to attract buying orders. Wheeling and Lake Erie preferred dropped 4½ points to 39¾, as compared with a recent high of 47¾.

A Few Shares Are Weak.

Among the few isolated weak spots were Radio, Chrysler Motor common and preferred, General Electric, and Eastman Kodak, all of which gave evidence of week-end profit taking. Pierce-Arrow prior preferred sold ten points below the last previous sale on a turnover of a 100 share block.

Midsummer dullness settled over the bond market. Selling pressure relaxed in the Liberty bond section. Among domestic corporation liens gains by Chicago and Alton 3½s, Florida, Western and Northern 7s, Sinclair Consolidated Oil 6s, and Third Avenue adjustment 5s contrasted with the heaviness of Missouri Pacific, Western Pacific, and Union Pacific bonds, U. S. Rubber 5s, and Anaconda Copper 6s.

CHICAGO CURB MARKET

The local unlisted securities market was reactionary in the early part of last week, but the close showed an almost complete recovery in the majority of issues, with some reaching new high levels.

Kellogg Company sold up 4 points to sales at 78. Additional stock was later wanted at 76 without attracting sellers at the current market. Kraft Cheese preferred changed hands between 101¼ and 103½. Palmolive improved over 6 points to 101 bid. H. O. Stone units continued to advance, sales at 76 reflecting a further gain of 16 points. Butler Brothers declined to low sales at 31¼, but later rallied to 32½ bid. 33 asked. Products Coke was freely offered at 56 with little interest on the buying side. Bucyrus advanced in the late trading to 152 bid, 157 asked, an improvement of about 6 points. Beatrice Creamery was traded in between 61¼ and 63¼.

The bid price of American Seating moved up about 3 points to 130. Although 87 was bid for the preferred, trading was on a limited scale on account of the scarcity of offerings. Goodman Manufacturing was steady, with transactions between 46¾ and 48. Through the forced liquidation of a considerable block of McCord Manufacturing common prices were depressed to sales as low as 7¾, but on excellent buying the reaction brought the level back to closing sales at 11. There were no reported transactions in the preferred; quotations, however, were lower at 65 bid, 70 asked.

In the public utility group, American Public Utilities common advanced about 6 points to high sales at 105. The major portion of this was later relinquished in dealing with stock offered at 103 and the best bids at 100. Considerable trading took place in the rights, which sold as high as 3, but declined with the stock to closing trades at ⅝. The participating preferred was traded in at 79, at which price stock was wanted with offerings at 81. Little change was noted in the prior lien preferred at 91 to 93.

Continental Gas continued to rise with high sales reported at 165, a further advance of 30 points. The warrants were wanted at 48 with offerings at 50. The participating preferred and prior lien were without particular interest at 92¾ to 93¼, and 93½ to 94¼, respectively. Northern Indiana Gas and Electric Class "A" preferred changed hands between 96 and 98. Ninety was bid for Chicago Rapid Transit 7.8 per cent prior lien preferred. Lake Superior District Power preferred was wanted at 94. Central Indiana Power preferred sold up from 90½ to sales at 92, and was later offered at this figure, with buyers at 91.

Investment and Speculation.

The difference between an investment and a speculation seems to be a matter of a good deal of perplexity in the public mind. It is not always easy to draw a distinct line

The Stewart-Warner Speedometer Serves a Double Purpose
Tells Your Speed and Mileage—Warns When Lubrication Is Needed

Enjoy the peace of mind that comes from knowing—not guessing your speed.

It is so easy to increase unintentionally your ratio of driving beyond the speed limit that you are constantly uncertain as to whether or not you are keeping or breaking the law. Most arrests are for traveling just above the speed limit.

Save yourself this uncertainty and the costly delays it may occasion. Equip your Ford with the Stewart-Warner double-purpose Speedometer. It tells you accurately at all times of how fast you are going—and how far you have gone.

Automatically Reminds You to Care for Your Car

How often has the question "Need oil?" found you only guessing at its answer? With difficulty you try to remember when you last had oil put in the motor, the crankcase drained and refilled and the bearings greased. For you know that failure to watch such matters may entail, even in a sturdily constructed car like the Ford, the bother and delay of repairs.

With the Stewart-Warner Speedometer on the instrument board you can't forget to lubricate your Ford. Colored tabs appearing on the mileage indicator automatically warn you when the motor needs oil, when to fill the grease cups, when the crankcase should be drained and the steering gears greased. There is no guesswork and no trying to remember.

Instead you always have exact knowledge of your car's lubrication requirements. This means better care of your car and consequently better, longer service in return.. Drop in today at the nearest Authorized Ford Dealer and have the Stewart-Warner Speedometer installed.

Remember, you get this lubricating index feature only in the Stewart-Warner Speedometer—the original and only speed and mileage recording device, and adopted as standard equipment for the finest cars.

Summer Evening Gowns Disembark from the Boat Neckline

by Corinne Lowe

NEW YORK.—(Special Correspondence.)—When they planted that flower on the shoulder, it seems as if it were as final a performance as planting the flag at the north pole. It is one of those fashions which is not dislodged by the fact that everybody does it and, in spite of the hardy perennial's blooming on many a fifteen dollar frock, the haughty two hundred and fifty model often admits it just the same.

This does not mean all new evening frocks admit the shoulder blossom—far from it—but it does mean that if you are a confirmed flower bearer there is no reason why you should not be humored in your fancy. The constant excuse for perpetuating this type of trimming is the scarf which is used in a dozen different ways to give variety to the neckline, and usually we find it affixed to the shoulder by the conventional blossom. This blossom is often repeated on the long floating streamers of the scarf, where the flowers are scattered at irregular intervals with all the effect of having been wafted there by some capricious, but benevolent, south breeze.

As to the choice of these flowers—there is no War of the Roses. There is, on the other hand, a complete victory of these blossoms. They are absolutely first choice—stunning, big, crushed ones that work out the color harmony of the gown. For example, black roses on pink or light green or white frocks, dawnlike pink on white, and deep red on black. But you don't need to "gather ye rosebuds," if anything in your nature resists it. There are various other forms of floral life admitted to the privileged circle. Lovely waxy looking pond lilies are held in high favor, and look chic on white satin gowns. Orchids and carnations and tiny rosebuds are other members of this trimming aristocracy.

Whether you decide to blossom or not, you can't get away from the importance of the neckline in present day evening frocks. The "V" is decidedly stressed and, believe it or not, these "V's" of today are most awfully in earnest. Many of them extend to the waistline and are then filled in with some fabric which often provides the most striking color note of the gown. A black lace frock seen at the opening of the Ritz roof garden this month inserted in its deep "V" in the back black satin embroidered in the rich brilliant colors of a Chinese vase.

Sometimes the "V" is not the product of the scissors. Its effect is produced by bands of embroidery, of rhinestones, or beads. One stunning imported evening frock of silver lame achieves a deep front "V" by a narrow band of crystals. Still another Paris creation uses a shaped ruffle at the back to create the coveted illusion.

One thing is certain—we are disembarking from the good old boat neckline which has carried us for so many seasons. We see it still, but usually it makes some such compensating gesture as a shoulder cape to make us forget how old is the fashion. These shoulder capes, frequently pointed in the back, are still in excellent repute and do much toward varying the decolletage. So do the numerous oval and square cuts which join with the predominating "V" to dethrone the venerable bateau line.

At the extreme left an evening wrap collared in natural grebe is achieved of black chiffon over white chiffon, broken by a band of shirred, diamond shaped motifs. Next, a frock of rose chiffon votes for the fashionable trimming in the back. Of similar prejudice is a cape of silver toned crepe-back satin over orchid crepe-back satin. Both colors are revealed in the jabot that cascades down the back and in the tasseled scarf collar. Next comes a Chanel frock of apricot pink chiffon trimmed with matching roses centered in pink and exploiting a cape back. The oval neckline is sponsored here, and all the edges are picoted. Last, a fuchsia taffeta with molded bodice and long sleeves drapes its skirt with matching marquisette embroidered in brilliant colors. The predominating "V" neckline is found in the back.

Second from the left we find the bateau launched in a lovely little pink chiffon dance frock adapted from a Paris model. Yes, the neckline in front has been practiced assiduously this many a year—nothing new about that—but look at the other features of the frock, and see how the model atones for its hoary custom! This, you see, is one of the new frocks with the fulness all in the back. This latter occurs in the form of two circular tiers headed by three rhinestone flowers and abetted by a little rounded shoulder cape banded in self material. The same narrow bands of self material appear at the waistline, hem, bateau front, and armholes. A charming frock for the young girl and one which incorporates the new theory of trimming to the rear.

Now how about it—this fulness shifted from front to back? Many of our New York designers and manufacturers seem skeptical about the new method's taking a serious hold on our affections. Nevertheless, it is the new thing, and no woman who adopts it need feel socially uneasy. Personally, I like it—provided she who adopts it is slim. But then why add a qualification inherent in every type of present day wear?

ANOTHER VIEW OF TODAY'S FIGURES.

Certainly this trimming at the back is encountered often in evening wraps designed for summer wear. Our central sketch is typical of the season. Here we have a deep orchid crêpe-back satin veiled in a silver toned crêpe satin. Both tones appear in the cascading jabot which forms the distinctive feature and in the scarf collar. The latter is weighted with a big tassel of mingled orchid and silver thread.

That the cape is the favored form of summer evening wrap is evident from one's first quick glance over any fashionable assemblage. Yes, there are a few who cling to the tailored coat executed in the familiar metallic tissues, in taffeta or even in several layers of chiffon, but for once femininity wins in its perpetual skirmish with the tailored. The cape, that most gracefully feminine of garments, is predominant.

Our fashion of matching cape with evening gown is observed by many women to whom a large income is a matter of course. Frequently such harmony is obtained through the use of the degradé cape. Suppose, for example, that your evening gown is of willow green. Then the accompanying cape will cover the green field by ranging from the palest of sea tints to the most brilliant of emeralds. It is really a stunning idea, and the only thing that keeps many of us from adopting it is the bugbear of cost. The great majority of women have got to be content with one unprejudiced evening wrap—the kind that will go with our pink gowns as well as it does with our green one.

The black and white chiffon cape is especially recommended for such general service and we show a simple, yet smart, exemplification of this color scheme at the extreme left. In this wrap black chiffon is draped over white and the only touch of trimming, save the natural colored grebe collar, consists of diamond shaped motifs of fine shirring. The collar ties with rather wide double faced ribbon, embracing both white and cerise, and this latter tone allies the cape with a gown of cerise georgette. Here, by the way, is an idea. If we've got to be slaves to this matching habit, why not let a mere ribbon carry the message? Thus by merely exchanging the ribbon mentioned for one of, say, blue and silver, to go with a frock of these latter tones, we may link wrap and gown.

A great many of the new evening capes are of chiffon, arranged in layers of divergent tint. Others drape a metallic tissue with colored chiffon. Indeed, these silver and gold fabrics are used in connection with various other diaphonous materials—notably tulle and mousseline de soie.

One of the most striking wraps seen in New York—one which owes its origin to a recent exhibition in Paris—covers silver lame with black net, and then appliques the tulle with the most futuristic of motifs in white velvet.

This brings me again to a vital theme. If things go on at this rate, Fifth avenue may look by the time autumn is here exactly like an exhibition of the independent artists. These colic-y triangles, these paralleograms with cramps, these lines that zigzag in a mad vertigo are more and more impressed upon fashion. The evening wrap—as well as other forms of dress—bears its imprint in the form of designs which are printed, painted, or appliqued and which often carry out in their daring color effect the message of the hectic pattern. Whether you decide upon futuristic patterns or not, this trick of appliquing the chiffon or tulle evening cape with velvet is exceedingly new and smart.

One last word concerning the evening frocks—we are told so often that color reigns supreme that it is a distinct shock to come upon a fashionable assemblage. Why? Simply because so many women continue to wear gowns of either white or black. The latter tone seems to me just as fashionable as ever before, and is worn by old and young alike. Another habit which we cling to as faithfully as if we had been brought up in wigwams is beading. Beads are used with equal impartiality upon all types of fabrics—georgette, satin, chiffon and lace.

Let me draw your attention to the frock at the right, one observed at the opening of the Montmartre club. The fashionable fuchsia is here exploited in a taffeta foundation with a molded bodice incorporating long sleeves over which are worn "slave" bracelets. Fine matching marquisette forms a front and back panel and on this are embroidered flowers in orchid, king's blue and cerise, accompanied by brilliant green leaves and interspersed by a few white daisies. The sash is a continuation of the bodice.

How to Use the Patterns

This department appears every day in the Daily Tribune.

SATIN crepe, crepe Romain, satin, or crepe de chine would be pretty made up in a dress by pattern No. 2424. It is an especially pretty design for a dinner or party frock, and if the material is one of the best qualities, it will need little or no trimming. The back of the dress is cut in one piece, and should fit smoothly over the hips; the front has a circular flounce set on. The neck line across the back follows the normal line, while in the front it is cut in rather a deep V. The short kimono sleeves are seamed on the shoulders.

The dress is an easy one to cut and make, but don't forget, before laying the pieces on your material, to see that length and width measures are right for you. Before finishing the dress at the bottom, it should be hung up for several days to give the flounce a chance to stretch. If the neck and sleeves are finished with a binding, bind the dress around the bottom. This design will look well made of a plain or printed material, and if you feel ambitious you might do some embroidering on the front of the dress—perhaps beautiful flowers, one on the shoulder, one towards the right, just below the hips, and a third, stamping the pattern partly on the dress and partly on the flounce. These flowers should be done in laid embroidery and several colors used.

Making shirts for your sons and husband will save a good many dollars; and the patterns for shirts are so exact and the directions so clear that shirt-making is pleasant work. Pattern No. 1911 is good, and comes in every size. The shirts may be finished at the neck with a band, and there is a pattern for a detachable collar. Many men and boys like collars that match some of their best shirts.

Thoroughly shrink the material before cutting. The chart on the envelope shows the most economical way of laying the pattern on 36-inch material. It is always a wise precaution to lay every piece of the pattern on the material before cutting so as to be sure there is going to be enough.

The back yoke and cuffs may be cut across, instead of on the length of the material—this being particularly effective if there are stripes.

Lay the back yoke in place on the back of the blouse, turn in the lower edge, baste down, stitch close to the edge, and then three-eighths of an inch in from the edge—making two stitchings across the bottom of the yoke. Lay the hems down each front, and stitch; then make the pocket and stitch to the left front, according to the notches. Baste the shoulder and underarm seams, and try on. Make any needed alterations.

Then rip the underarm seams and stitch the shoulder seams together—not including the yoke—having the seams come to the right side. Lay the raw edges of the seams up towards the back, baste the shoulder seams of the yoke down over the seams, turning the edges in so that the folded edge just covers the seam stitching; and stitch across twice—matching the stitching across the bottom of the yoke.

Finish the sleeve openings according to the directions given on the pattern, and then trace a line across the top of each sleeve about three-quarters of an inch from the edge. After clipping the edges of the armholes all around at close intervals, turn in the edge and, matching the notches front and back, pin the turned in edge of the armhole to the traced line on the right side of the sleeve, and baste to the shirt. With the shirt right side out, stitch the sleeve to the armhole just inside both turned in edges.

Pin and baste the under arm and sleeve seams, taking care to have the seams under the arm where the sleeves are sewed in match perfectly there. After the first stitching, turn the remaining edge in and hem down.

Heavy linen or flannel would make a pretty suspender dress by pattern No. 2413. Direction on the envelop show how to cut and put the pattern together, so there should be no trouble; but one's own measures should always be applied to a pattern before using it, for while the bust measure will be right, the length and hip measures often vary on different figures.

There is one front gore and one back one, and all four edges extend far enough beyond the underarm seams to allow for plaits. These plaits are a good feature—they look well and allow necessary freedom in walking, and do not take away from the desirable slender effect.

Any of the sheer white materials will be suitable for the blouse, and more or less elaborate embroidering should be used—cross stitch designs are effective.

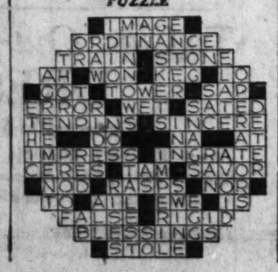
ANSWER TO LAST WEEK'S PUZZLE



The TRIBUNE COOK BOOK

By Jane Eddington.

All recipes here have been scientifically tested by Miss Eddington, with current market materials, and are indorsed by her.

This department appears every day in the Daily Tribune.

SUMMER SIRUPS.

SIRUPS are far better for sweetening our numerous summer beverages, far more elegant and economical, than plain or raw sugar. A fruit punch to be superior needs a sirup sweetening. A punch sweetened and flavored with a raspberry sirup is fine. Even a fruit cocktail is best if the pieces of fruit of which it is made are blended by a sirup. And so are the sandwich fillings made of dried fruits. Use a plain sugar sirup for them or one of brown sugar.

The water ices, sherbets, and "granites," are mainly frozen sirups. We may have fine strawberry ice cream all the year around if we can put up a fine strawberry sirup, although the sort most people get deteriorates and should be used within a month or two. A number of the desserts, like the gelatins and the tapioca puddings, can be made fine by sweetening them with fruit sirups—a plum sirup is worth while if made for no other purpose than for tapioca puddings, or pudding sauces. Fruit sirups or plain ones can be quickly converted into pudding sauces by heating them up with a little butter, and perhaps thickening them with cornstarch to assure a pretty gloss to them. We use them plain as sauces as well, especially for the "sundae."

Pears poached in a plain sirup slightly flavored with vanilla, and served with unsweetened whipped cream, make a high class dessert. While freshly made sirups are generally prepared for such work, what may be called a "stock sirup" which is so valuable in candy making, can be used when such a supply is rather promptly used, as it will be in sophisticated cookery. Other fruits besides the pear may be poached, and such cooking constitutes quite a chapter of its own.

Lessons in Making.

In summer canning and preserving, the sirups must play an important part—usually the exceedingly thin ones, thinner than for beverages. And it is worth while to can the sirups themselves or bottle them. We need also to understand how to make sirups of various degrees of density just for the sake of being able to make better jellies which are just congealed sirups.

Perhaps man got his first lesson in sirup making from the honey bee, and even our American Indian profited by his lesson, whoever or whatever the teacher was, when he boiled down the sap of the maple tree to a sirup and a sugar. Honey may thicken up and become sugar, so even the bee is somewhat of an amateur at sirup making, as most of us are!

The fact is that sirup making is an ancient business infinitely older than the making of soft drinks and the various other services of the soda fountain, yet all but the barest few cooks in the world are amateurs in what would seem to be the simplest form of cookery, namely, the cooking together of some sugar and a liquid. If that liquid contains some acid we can make a thicker sirup and one which will not have a tendency to granulate. Unless we do make sirups of a certain thickness they will ferment; therefore the "just so" becomes highly important in this sort of cookery.

Fruit Sirup Cookery.

There is a variety of ways of making fruit sirups. In some cases fruit is fermented first. For careful work, or to make sirups which will keep, it is probably best always to make a plain sirup and then to add either the fruit or fruit juice to it, cook, strain and sometimes cook again. But for sirups to be used within a short time, the diluted fruit juice and sugar can be cooked together as in making jelly. In the one case the fruit is cooked in the sirup, and in the other it is cooked and prepared and sugar added to it. In this latter case it is often possible to make several extractions of the fruit as we do in making currant jelly, but the adding of a fruit juice to a hot sirup probably best develops the flavors fully.

Beverage Sirups.

The general formula for beverage sirups is measure for measure of sugar and liquid, cup for cup, pint for pint, etc. This sirup, when cooked to about 220 degrees, makes one which can be diluted three to five times with plain water to make a refreshing drink, when it has flavor. When it is plain, about the same proportion of it may be used in sweetening a lemonade.

Lemon Sirup.

Following the general formula for the sirup which is made of the fruit most generally used as a beverage, a lemon sirup is made by cooking together two cups (a pound) of sugar and one cup of water and one cup of lemon juice. It takes about half a dozen small lemons to make a cup of juice. Cook the sugar and water together to sirup stage, then add the lemon juice, and cook just long enough to sterilize the juice, or up to five minutes. Use from two to three tablespoons of this sirup for a glass of lemonade. This sirup can be thinned a good deal for a drink, and the Italians in making their "granites" may thin it until the taste of the lemon and sweetness is barely perceptible if this refreshment is for sidewalk selling on hot days. It would not be thinned so much for those who could pay more.

The "granites" are just thinned sirups frozen without stirring until the mixture is just congealed and forms a light granulated mass. No gelatin or egg is added as in making our sherbets. It is finally of the color and consistency of half-melted snow.

Sour Cherry Sirup.

A cherry sirup with part plain water and part seltzer or soda water gives us a drink that is more than a fair rival of any we can get at the soda fountain. It is also excellent for making sauces, and is even used on French toast. Cherry Bavarian creams lead all others in popularity, probably, and the sirup can be used for them. One way to make this sirup is to mash a quart of cherries—some like the flavor of the stones and other people prefer to stone the fruit—add one cup of cold water, bring slowly to a boil and boil for five minutes mashing the cherries in the meantime.

Strain and press out the juice, and add it to a sirup made of two cups of sugar cooked with one cup of water until it spins a thread. Add cherry juice, boil five minutes, skim and bottle. Or for immediate use cook and strain the cherries—using one or two cups of water in cooking and mashing them—measure the juice, add to it twice its measure of sugar, dissolve carefully, and cook to about 216 degrees. Almost any home will find a sirup like this a most convenient one to have in stock. A sirup of most pronounced cherry flavor may be made of raw cherry juice and sugar.

Blackberry Sirup.

In making a blackberry sirup one has to be careful, or the result will be like a soft jelly which does not readily blend with water yet is all right with lemon juice for a drink. Some people make this by heating the blackberries without water, mashing, adding it to a sirup and then cooking it a little extra long to develop flavor. For instance, the juice from one quart of heated and mashed blackberries would be added to a sirup of one cup of sugar and half a cup of water. Because the flavor may be insipid a bit of salt is added to a sirup made for dessert use. The lemon juice is all that is needed when it is to be used in drinks.

Raspberry Sirup.

Raspberry juice can have more sugar added to it than blackberry, or twice as much in making a sirup, because it has more aroma and flavor. One way to make a sirup, or two sirups, is as follows: Wash and mash the berries, measure and add to them half their measure of cold water. Let stand one-half hour and strain off the juice (they could have been heated up slowly), measure it, add double its measure of sugar, stir until this is dissolved, skim and cook to about 218 degrees.

Measure the pulp from which the juice was strained off, add to it one-half its measure of cold water, bring slowly to a boil, boil five minutes, strain and treat this juice just as the raw juice was treated. When wishing to get the most service out of raspberries and blackberries, this is a method to use. The two sirups obtained are unlike, but both good. Raspberry sirup with lime juice and seltzer water has been called a raspberry rickey, and there are raspberry punches, delights, and so forth, made with raspberry sirup.

Straining Sirups.

It is probably advisable to strain all sirups through a jelly bag or an enameled strainer, if they are rather thick, too thick to go through cloth. And a way to get no end of variety in sirups for beverages and desserts is to strain off the sirups from preserves, and use them for this purpose, while the fruit itself can be used in the so-called "cocktails" or in fruit salads or punches.

Fruit Punches with Sirups.

A rather thick and hot sirup poured over fruits ready for punch brings out their flavors. Such a sirup may be of table sirup density, that is, allow only one-half cup of water to two cups of sugar, and cook it to about 220 degrees on the candy thermometer.

Thin Canning Sirup.

Some canning sirups used contain but 16 per cent of sugar, but one containing 25 per cent, or one quart of water to two cups of sugar, when used with peaches, sweetens them sufficiently to make them rank with what we used to call preserves. This is rather a favorite canning sirup. Dissolve the sugar in the sirup and cook for about fifteen minutes. This may be flavored in various ways and frozen "granite" style.

Sirup for Nut and Fruit Mixtures.

The sirup best for this purpose should be as thick as that used for glazing and for sticking fruit on to cake or one too thick to pour out of a spoon readily. A medium thick one, which piles up over the edge of the spoon when it is poured out, will do. Nuts and dates and raisins chopped and bound together with such a sirup make an excellent sweet sandwich filling and bonbon.

Pineapple for Drinks.

There are a number of ways of making a pineapple sirup so-called but there is no better way to get a preparation that will help us to use less sugar in drinks, and no better way to get a flavor for drink with but a small amount of sugar than the following: Use an aluminum or glass grater to shred a medium sized pineapple. Add to it one-half cup of sugar and put it over the least bit of a fire to come slowly to a boil. After it boils let cook for twenty minutes. This has a delicious sort of sourness that the fresh pineapple has not, and is excellent with lemon sirup and fresh fruit juices diluted a good deal, or to taste, with water.

Pineappleade.

To a cup of grated pineapple or to each cup, allow the juice of one lemon or more, and pour over this one cup of plain hot thin sugar sirup. Allow this to stand several hours, then strain and dilute to taste. This mixture is excellent with a little seltzer water and some strawberry sirup.

Pineapple Tea.

An inexpensive way to get a pineapple toning for summer drinks made with fruit sirups and diluted in various ways is this: Cut a large slice of pineapple in bits, pour over it a cup or a cup and a half of boiling water, cover closely and keep hot, but not cooking, for two hours.

If the skin of a pineapple is well washed, it may be treated in a similar way to get a flavoring for drinks or a liquid which may be used with sugar to make a sirup.

A Bitter Sirup.

Add one tablespoon of ground ginger to one-half ounce of hops, add a pint of boiling water and cook for one-half hour. Strain and add one-fourth of a pound of brown sugar and cook to sirup stage or about ten minutes after the sugar is dissolved. When it has cooled add a cup or a little more of cold water. Fill glasses one-fourth full of this sirup and add seltzer water. Or add as much cream to the sirup as it measures and then fill up glass with fizzy water. This gives an especially agreeable foam.

On Dissolving Sugar.

Once upon a time an eight pound "sugar hat" [loaf sugar] seemed to be dusty, so an attempt was made to wipe off the dirt with a cloth wrung out of water, as dry as it could be wrung. But there was enough of the wet in it to set that whole eight pounds to dissolving into a thick syrup mainly. Sugar will easily dissolve if not with the water for a while, and better results can be obtained in the cooking if this is done.

Sirups and Fruit Juices for Drinks.

It is quite useless to put together ingredients which neutralize one the other and often to get something less agreeable than any one of them would be alone, yet it is often done, although today there is a tendency to keep the number of ingredients in a mixture few. Blend flavors delicately, and remember that to have it too cold is to have the flavors less apparent.

Tea Sirup with Lemon.

Cold tea seems to give a body to a drink, and when a fruit syrup is added the tea flavor may be quite obliterated. Put together for a tea sirup one cup of sugar, two tablespoons of black tea, one cup boiling water. Dissolve sugar. Cook the whole two minutes after it boils, strain. Use this with lemon sirup and ginger ale, deciding proportions to taste, but beginning with small and equal amounts of the two sirups.

Currant Jelly Punch.

Whip up a glass of currant jelly, pour over it a sirup made of two cups of sugar and one-half cup of water, whip two well together, add a little lemon juice, dilute two-thirds with water and then modify with other fruit juices to taste.

The Last Word in Paris Fashions

By Bettina Bedwell.

EVENING MODES ARE SMARTLY SIMPLE.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS.—[Special Correspondence.]—Say it with simplicity. The story of the summer evening mode is a simple tale, distinguished by the subtlety of perfect harmony. You can't find any elegant woman—either Parisienne or American or English, for that matter—in Paris after lighting up time wearing a gown that is more complicated than a daisy, for example. But every one admits the daisy is well made, and has a beauty of line that isn't easy to copy.

With the Paris social season at its height, on the eve of the Grand Prix, one is going somewhere every night, and observing clothes makes it apparent that whatever the rest of the world is doing women of social importance, who make an art of clothes, are sticking close to simplicity of line, of color, and of detail. A brief survey of that high society simplicity so paramount just now certainly reveals the fact that in clothes particularly the sins of commission are the cardinal ones. They leave off the extra knick-knacks and omit the gewgaws. If they want a perfect orgy of complication they let the couturiers put it into gores and godets, so the result is only apparent to the needle wielders.

In fabrics, too, the effect is toward simplicity, and crêpes of all kinds are having another day—and evening, not to sound paradoxical. More plain fabrics are seen by a large margin than figured ones, although the printed crêpe frock is still worn by some extremely fashionable women. It is noticeable, however, that with printed frocks not much jewelry is evident, and scarfs of greater importance than a wisp of the same material are omitted.

Many persons in authority are saying, "Don't wear beaded gowns." There is good reason for this, but taken whole it is misleading. Plenty of beaded frocks are worn in smart places by elegant women. What the experts mean is, "Don't wear a certain kind of beaded gown." That is, don't ravage the bead market to ornament a single robe, and don't go in for those hackneyed designs that weary the eye by too much repetition.

Our first offering is an example in point, of what kind of beaded gown is approved by smart Paris. It was worn recently by the Comtesse Schoenborn at a ball in Biarritz, and illustrates the real éclat of the bead frock. The material of this frock is white crêpe de Chine and the bodice is a simple straight line blouse, without sleeves. The neckline is one of the season's approved—cut round and rather high in front and descending in a deep V in back.

The waist blouses softly where it meets the skirt, eliminating the necessity for a girdle, the joining being marked by two beaded flowers at the left side. A lot of women are wearing the flower at that point this season instead of on the shoulder where it has been perched for several seasons.

The skirt of this dress is composed of three sword pointed tiers placed on a straight slip. The broad fringe thus formed is beaded solidly in a design of ifs, which is French for little evergreen trees. The oddity of the design and the restraint of beads make this an outstanding model, which is in no way ostentatious. With it is carried a large fan of pale green plumes of paradise, and the slippers and stockings are silver.

Plenty of the material of the dress, plainly visible, is the rule for the beaded frock, and the beading put on in such a way that it adds distinction to the effect. Just let your eye travel over our sketch to the final figure, and you will see another example of the beaded frock, approved by the socially elect. This frock appeared last Sunday night at the Ritz dinner dance. It was worn by the Princesse de Broglie, who dined in company with la Princesse de la Tour d'Auvergne, also in a simple beaded frock.

There is nothing more conspicuous about this gown than there is about the rising of the summer moon, which comes up quite simply in the eastern sky without making any fuss about it. It is beautiful in the same way, and received the tribute that one unconsciously pays to that luminary—a pause and an admiring glance. Made of white crêpe satin, it is only a straight slip, undeviating from shoulders to hemline, such as you can imagine would be within the capacity of the little home dressmaker. The difference lies in the unusual neckline and in the bead trimming. The decolletage is rounded in front, and the white satin shoulder bands circle the nape of the neck. From this circle two brilliant bands extend to meet the square cut top in back.

The crystal fringe, which is a smart form of beading evening gowns, is placed in rows, slightly circular. These rows extend from under the arms to the hem at the sides. They add a grace and effect of amplitude to the line, which is pleasing, in addition to the chic that this arrangement supplies.

There is a brilliance and an air of gayety about the beaded gown that endears it to women and maintains its vogue no doubt. Such models as we show display that this trimming may be subdued to meet the approval of the seeker after the severest simplicity.

Nothing is prettier for dancing and dinner frocks in this extreme heat than the soft little mousseline de soie dresses that are being so generally worn by smart women. They are usually cut with straight bodices and full circular skirts, and most frequently appear in solid color. The smartest of these unassuming gowns are often shaded, and come from the hands of expert dyers with every nuance of whatever color they employ shown in the stretch from neck to hemline.

Our second model shows one of these shaded frocks, which was worn by Miss Elsie de Wolfe at the premiere of "Jeanné d'Arc," where Eva Le Gallienne made her first appearance before a Parisian audience. The dress is of gray mousseline de soie, shaded from a deep smoke gray which you might call "Gary gray" to the palest of pearl color at the top. It has no trimming whatever except for a small motif of gray embroidery across the wide flat stitched girdle in front. The simple circular skirt with its inverted plait at center front and back is particularly becoming and graceful, and worn by Miss de Wolfe this gown was one of the most effective in that brilliant audience.

Our third model is the kind of simplicity that is a trifle more sophisticated, chiefly because of its material and color. The first is satin and the second is black. Cut straight, a bit of drapery at the left side widens the skirt to the desired dancing capacity. Mrs. Chase-Casgrain, who wore it at the Ritz a Sunday ago, wore three strands of pearls as her only ornament to harmonize with the motif of pearls placed at the left side of the skirt. The deep V decolletage of this frock shows a bit of the flesh colored crêpe de Chine slip worn beneath.

On coming home the other evening I spied Bob fixing the wheel on his wagon.

I said, "Hurry up, Bob, or you'll be late for supper."

"No, I won't, 'cause I've got the meat here for our supper," was the reply.

And he held up a parcel to show me he was just coming from the butcher's. J. W. L.

One day her mother had a few friends in for tea and had given Jean instructions not to talk all the time.

I noticed she was unusually quiet, so I went over to her and said, "What's the matter, Jean?"

She said, "I'm not talking today." S. A. C.

FAVORABLE

Aurora, Ill.: I asked an acquaintance, who was at one time an intemperate drinker, how he liked the 18th amendment, and here is his story almost word for word:

"I like it; in the open saloon days, after a hard day's work, I was compelled to pass many saloons on my way home. I found it easy to get by the first, second, and occasionally the third, but before the last one was reached, my good intentions were usually gone. Now I can go through town and not stop; of course, I know there are places where the stuff may be found, but I am too tired or too proud to look them up, so I let it alone altogether. My family is benefited by it, and I am better off financially, physically, and perhaps morally, than I was in the old days; I hope they never come back." C. S. P.

UNFAVORABLE

Chicago: My husband did not drink. We bought a home and had it all paid for except $1,000 when the "home brew" craze started. His work takes him to other homes, and women who make drink began offering it to him and urging him to try their brew. Little by little he fell for it, until now he is nearly a wreck. Our $1,000 debt is still hanging over us; it is all I can do to pay the interest on it. I am trying to raise and educate my child under this sorrowful and disgraceful situation, and I say that those who think they must make beer and wine and moonshine should at least keep it to themselves and not offer it to persons who come in their homes on business. I know of many young boys and girls who have been started drinking in this manner, and of women—even old women—who make spectacles of themselves after drinking home brew in the home of an acquaintance. Prohibition has brought about a pitiful as well as disgraceful state of affairs to America. H. A.

ISN'T IT ODD

by William Atherton Du Puy

ISN'T it odd that the whale is a closer relative to the cow than it is of the great so-called "whale shark" which may be 100 feet long and which looks much like it!

Yet the whale is a mammal, an animal which suckles its young, and the shark is a fish. Mammals are, primarily, land animals. They got their start in the world during the age of reptiles when the lesser animals were driven into the tree tops by such monsters as the dinasaurs and stegorauruses. Its young are born alive, one or a few at a time, and cared for by the parents. Fish spawn innumerable eggs and never see their young ones.

The whale has red meat like that of a cow. The shark has white meat like a fish. The whale is a warm blooded animal. The fish is cold blooded.

Mammals all have four legs and arms. Fish have none at all. Mammals came from a race of fish that developed its fins into legs and learned to climb upon the land. Thus its members became land animals.

The whale is, primarily, a land animal. It lived for millions of years on the land. During all that time it walked about on four legs. It still has four legs. They are not what they used to be because it has not made much use of them of late. The front legs are now flippers but they still have within them the bones of the upper arm, the fore arm and the five fingers of the mammals. The hind legs have almost disappeared from disuse. The remnants of them are beneath the skin on the back part of the whale. All the bones of a leg are still there.

If a whale were kept under water long enough it would down. The shark, on the contrary, lives beneath the surface. The whale is an air breather, has no gills. The fish uses its gills to get oxygen from the water. The whale is a cousin of the cow. The fish is a member of an entirely different tribe.

COLORS to CHOOSE

by Antoinette Donnelly

Clever Woman Selects Only Shades That Serve to Enhance Her Type

NEW YORK. — [Special Correspondence.]—When Michael Angelo was asked how he mixed his colors, he replied, "With common sense."

A woman of drab and neutral coloring shows more than common sense by bringing a personality to life with the choice of a positive color. A colorless blonde won't make herself more pallid by choosing a pastel shade that makes her look insipid, when she can become quite effective with a deeper body to the tone she chooses.

There is nothing quite so interesting to woman as color, and no one item upon which she can draw more cleverly to accentuate her God given charms. With the wealth of varying shades she now has to make her personal selection from there would seem to be little excuse for hiding her light under the wrong shade.

Some women are born with a color sense and never appear to go wrong; other women have to acquire the sense by studying color harmony, or by permitting one versed in it to dictate the tones that are best.

Margaret Story, dress economist and lecturer, in her book, "How to Dress Well," offers some valuable suggestions on the subject of colors.

She warns against not taking into account the passage of time. A pure color, appropriated in the days of flawless skin and clear, brilliant eyes, is better relinquished by the woman no longer young and soft, neutralizing shade substituted.

Defeating Her Purpose.

"A bright red hat," says the dress economist, "is often chosen by a woman no longer youthful, with the thought that the necessity of bathing in the fountain of youth is obviated. The truth is that the red hat is really defeating the wearer's purpose in a most unkind manner, by directly calling attention to her age."

Although persons whose eyes are blue labor under the impression that adding a vivid blue enhances their brightness, in reality the intense blue makes the eyes gray.

A faded, Titian haired woman might select an orange hat, thinking it would resurrect the tones of her hair, and succeed only in killing the color of the hair and making the shadows and hollows on face and throat appear deeper.

An intensely florid woman, Mrs. Story points out, substituting a rich, woodsy brown for green, would modulate her color happily.

To show the influence of color upon size, this expert tells of a large American woman consulting Worth, the famous dressmaker. She was dressed in a vivid color, with many, many diamonds. She asked what colors she should wear. Worth replied: "My dear madame, when the Creator fashioned the hummingbird and the butterfly he made them of brilliant colors; but when he created the elephant he made it taupe!"

Bright Colors Increase Size.

The dress lecturer does not mean this to be taken to imply that every large woman should wear taupe, but figures clothed in warm colors seem nearer, and therefore larger, and figures in cool colors seem farther away, and therefore smaller. Brilliant textures increase size, in other words, and shadowy textures decrease size.

Likewise, color may be happily employed by the woman with the lean and hungry look. Deadness and dullness, rather than extreme harshness of intensity in colors, are wise for her. Soft colors are best, with depth; rich pile fabrics, or layer over layer of soft cobwebby materials, with colors playing hide and seek. For afternoon there are the light tones; for evening, pastel tints; for general wear, though not brilliant, there are hues of certain colors that do not contrast sharply, but blend to stimulate pleasing textures.

Colors may change a girl's career, if they are right, and will serve to give her courage and faith in herself. They have done it in fiction. It is a popular theme to make a butterfly out of the little gray mouse, to help her capture her Prince Charming. In life we've seen color work the same magic.

If you have not much faith in your beauty, you might work on the theory of the Sleeping Princess. The right prince will awaken you when you introduce the color necessary to bring out your witchery and charm. It is there—the magic shade for you.

Mrs. Story's Color Chart.

No color chart answers the question for every woman. There are color combinations that might serve better than a single shade. There has to be harmony and balance. But Mrs. Story offers these general rules:

If you need to be brightened, employ contrast.

Never let the costume overshadow the wearer. Color, like any other factor in dress, should be employed to enhance the person wearing it and should not be conspicuous in itself.

THE BLONDE—Soft featured, with an animated expression and clear skin, can wear almost any color, unless a large waist line rules her out.

PALE BLONDE—Skin pale, hair flaxen or light brown; eyes blue, black, brown, gray or hazel, may use light green, light blue green, light and dark blue, light red, pink, dark brown, light orange, light tan, blue gray, cream white, flesh white lavender and shiny black. She should avoid red-purple, purple, red-brown, bright red, dead black and all strong color.

SEMI-BLONDE—Skin imperfect but fair; hair light or medium brown, mouse colored or drab; eyes blue, gray, hazel, or light brown, may use medium green, medium and dark blue, medium red, medium blue green, soft pink, dark brown, blue gray, cream white and shiny black. She should avoid purple, red purple, dead white, pastel pinks, too bright colors, somber colors and warm brown.

RUDDY BLONDE—Skin fair and ruddy; hair brown, mouse colored or with golden glints; eyes blue, gray, hazel or light brown, may use blue, cool brown, green, dark reds, blue green, grayed orange, beige tan, pink, dark gray, white and black. She should avoid yellow, mustard, blue purple, purple, red purple, warm brown and reddish tan.

PALE BRUNETTE—Skin pale olive or clear; hair dark brown or black; eyes brown, dark gray, dark blue or bright black, may use red, orange, green, not too dark; dark blue, dark green, warm brown, light tan, orange, medium and dark; blue green, dark tan, brownish gray, cream white, dark red purple and pink. She should avoid yellow, yellow green, blue purple, purple, pastel tints and black.

SEMI-BRUNETTE — Skin imperfect brunette; hair dark brown or black, eyes dark blue, dark gray, dark brown, or black, may use red, medium and dark; dark blue; dark green; warm brown; light tan; orange, medium and dark; blue green; dark tan, brownish gray, cream white, dark red purple and pink. She should avoid yellow, yellow green, blue purple, purple, pastel tints, and black.

RUDDY BRUNETTE—Skin dark and high colored; hair dark brown or black; eyes dark blue, dark gray, brown or black, may use dark red, dark blue, dark green, dark orange, dark cool brown, dark tan, dark gray, cream white and black. She should avoid all light red, yellow green, blue purple, purple, red purple, warm browns and pastel tints.

PALE RED HAIRED TYPE—Skin pale, clear, transparent, white; hair red, eyes blue, black, brown, gray or hazel, may use green, blue, blue green, light blue, purple, cool brown, light tan, dark tan, blue gray, light gray, flesh pink, white and black. She should avoid red, orange, yellow, yellow green, red purple, warm brown and rose pink.

SEMI-RED HAIRED—Skin imperfect, freckled and not much color; hair red; eyes blue, black, gray, brown or hazel, may use black, dull blue, dull green, blue green, cool brown, dark tan, light tan, gray, ivory white, cream white, flesh and shell pink. She may use blue purple with caution, but should avoid red, orange, red purple, dead white and rose.

RUDDY RED HAIRED TYPE—Skin highly colored; hair red; eyes blue, black, gray, brown or hazel, may use black, ivory white, dark blue, medium and dark green, blue green, cool brown, light tan, blue gray and dark gray. She should avoid red, orange, yellow, yellow green, purple, red purple, warm browns and rose pink.

BLONDE-BRUNETTE—The in between type, hair light, chestnut or brown; eyes hazel, gray, blue gray or brown; complexion, medium, may use black with trimmings of color, flesh white, dark brown, gray tan, dull blue blue green, lavender, dark red, ecru and pongee tints.

For women whose hair is turning gray Mrs. Story recommends mysterious colors, the colors which were becoming in youth, grayed red, grayed tienna or soft rose; blue to steel blue yellow to beige; orange to citron golden brown to taupe; violet to heliotrope; green to olive. Pongee shade and yellow and tans are taboo for the woman with hair of "sabled silver."

What's your beauty ill? Too fat? Too thin? Shy on hair? Oily hair, oily skin, freckles, pimples, or blackheads? Flat chested or flat footed? Write to me. I have a tonic, a diet or a set of exercises for what ails you. And you're welcome to them and to all the advice I can give you. If you wish a personal reply, send a stamped, addressed envelope. Address Antoinette Donnelly, The Tribune, Chicago.

This department appears every day in the Daily Tribune.

MRS. C. J. G.: TWITCHING OF the eye is usually due to fatigue—eyestrain. You may be straining your eyes, even though you feel the sight is perfect. Reading, with the book or paper held too low, or if you are in need of glasses may be responsible for the condition. Again, it may be due to a general run down condition. The wise thing is to determine the cause by consulting a specialist.

CEIL: THE HOLLOWS IN YOUR cheeks are either due to a rundown condition or to a loss of teeth. If the latter, visit your dentist and have him do some bridge work for you. If you are run down, you'll find on taking measures to build up again that your face will fill out. Massage will not bring about the desired results.

MAY P.: PUFFS UNDER THE eyes may indicate a lack of sleep, or of sufficient fresh air in your sleeping room. Again, they may be the result of a general run down condition which calls for medical treatment..

FRANCES: THE OIL IN THE hair is not removed by frequent washing as is so often claimed. On the contrary it is increased through the improvement in the circulation. Where there is dandruff the treatment requires that the hair be washed twice a week, gradually increasing the length of time between shampoos to every two weeks. For instructions on shampooing send stamped addressed envelope.

MRS. W.: ORANGE JUICE IS NOT at all harmful. On the contrary there is much to be said in its favor. It is rich in vitamines, as proved by its being incorporated into the diet of infants at an early age. It is an aid to digestion, and dental authorities recommend its use for teeth preservation and mouth hygiene. Continue taking it in the morning.

ALICE M.: TWENTY-FIVE PER cent solution of aluminum chloride in distilled water is an excellent remedy for excessive perspiration. It may be obtained at the drug store, and is inexpensive. It may be used twice or three times the first week, but after that once a week is sufficient to prevent recurrence. It may be found irritating if the skin is sensitive, so should not be applied in large doses. Care should be used in applying it, and it should be allowed to dry in before the clothing is permitted to touch the skin. If itching does occur in spite of precaution, an ointment of cold cream containing twelve per cent boric acid may be used.

MISS C. R.; YOUR SKIN NEEDS more frequent greasing. When the skin lacks natural oils, in order to keep it from wrinkling and cracking, you must feed it from the outside. It would be well for you to get the habit of massaging the face every night, with a good cold cream. Cover your hair with a towel to protect it from the grease. I have a formula for a good skin food which I'll gladly send you on receipt of a stamped addressed envelope.

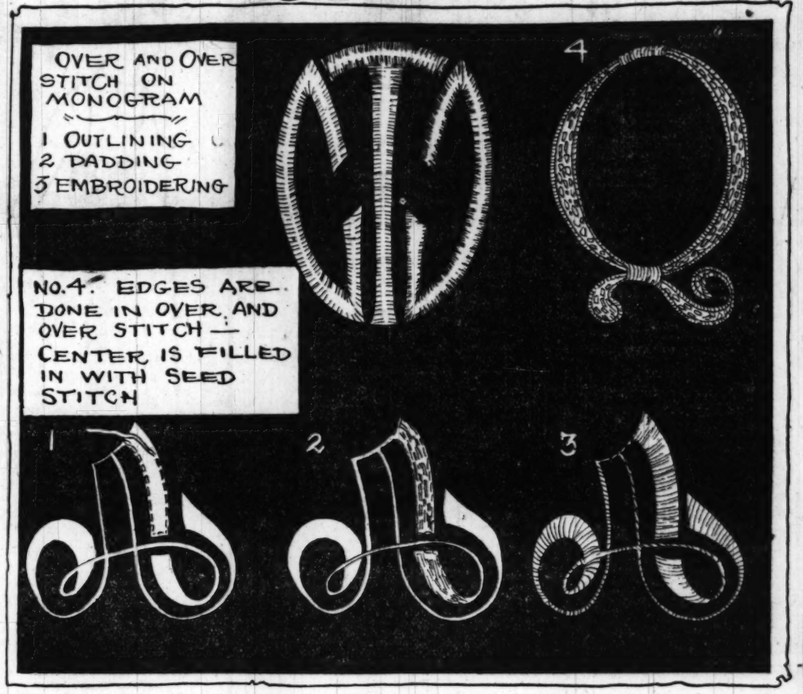
Practical and Fancy Needle Work

By Clotilde



What is your sewing problem? Do you have trouble in following a pattern? Do you find difficulty in making a skirt hang evenly or making a sleeve that doesn't twist? If there is anything you would like to know about these or other problems of needle-work write to Clotilde, The Tribune, Chicago, inclosing a stamped, addressed envelope if a personal reply is desired.

MAKING A MONOGRAM.

EMBROIDERING is one of the most fascinating forms of needlework; and a beautifully embroidered initial or monogram will lend distinction to anything on which it is put.

Monogram making is in some ways more difficult than a single letter; but the result makes the work worth while. The design must be distinctly marked on the material, so that not a single line is blurred, and when that is accomplished, the outlining is next in order.

Darning cotton is good for this work as well as for the padding. In outlining be careful to follow exactly the way the lines cross over and under one another. Take small, even stitches, making them as short as possible on the wrong side and decidedly short on the right.

The padding stitches should run the length of the letters. Be careful to choose a needle that will go through the material easily. Some use a simple darning stitch for the padding, making the stitches short on the wrong, and longer on the right; and some use the chain stitch. Whichever is decided upon, make the padding heavier through the center of each section and lighter toward the outer edges. Much of the beauty of the finished work depends on these preliminary stitches.

Embroidery hoops are necessary, and should be used for the padding also.

The embroidery stitch is an over and over—taken evenly and close together—always running at right angles to the padding, and taken as close together as is possible without lapping.

A monogram should hardly be attempted before a certain degree of perfection has been reached in embroidering a single letter. Patience and practise will be worth while, and it is delightful to watch the work grow under one's fingers.

Monogramming is always an added beauty to all kinds of household linen. Not long ago there was a vogue for putting some sort of a monogram on blouses and the waist part of one piece dresses. Sometimes these monograms are inclosed in a circle or diamond shaped outline, and sometimes not. If one chooses, parts of these letters may have a center part filled with seed stitches, and the effect is excellent.

SLANGUAGE

SLING US SOME SLANG.

The Sunday Tribune will pay $1 for each original slang expression to take the place of the hackneyed standbys:

It's the cat's whiskers!
What do you know about that!
Put it in your pipe and smoke it!
Heaven have pity!
I'll tell the world!

There are dozens of other slang expressions so old they have whiskers on them. Let's replace them with some shiny new ones.

$1 will be paid for every phrase published.

Be sure to sign your full name and give your address, street number, and name of city where you live.

Lists must be original. No phrase using any sacred name will be considered.

Thanksgiving Appetites At 100° in the Shade!

When the mercury soars, appetites drop. Summer diets—especially children's—should be watched carefully, as proper hot weather nutrition is most important.

VEGEX

in itself is a food containing valuable elements needed in the sumer diet:

Richest in Vitamin B
High in iron and iodine
Containing other necessary food salts

Enticingly Delicious Flavor

VEGEX is a concentrate of grain-grown yeast, many times more potent than ordinary yeast, but with a tempting appetite appeal. Its rich meaty taste stimulates desire for food yet satisfies desire for meat. A cup of VEGEX, hot or cold in water or milk, before breakfast and in the evening, soon proves by its beneficial effects that your diet requires Vitamin B and food salts.

Try This Appetizing Healthful Summer Dish

Dissolve a half package of gelatine in one cup cold water. Into two cups boiling water stir two teaspoonfuls VEGEX. Add the gelatine; flavor with a dash of lemon, chill and serve in cups with lettuce sandwiches.

In VEGEX you have the means of correcting the lack of vital elements so prevalent in many modern over-refined foods

100 Boys to See Cubs Play Giants with Sally Joy

By Sally Joy Brown.

BOYS, now would you like to see the great baseball battle that's coming a week from Friday, when the Giants and the Cubs will be in town? Whenever these two teams meet you're sure of a battle royal—and it will be harder fought than ever now, with the Cubs fighting to stage a come back at the expense of the team they most like to beat. Mr. Veeck will let me bring a hundred boys to see the game—so now's your chance to get in on the party and see everything as my guests!

And you can win easily, because I'm making everything as simple as can be. I want to take the hundred boys who'll enjoy the game the most, and I'm asking you to write letters telling me why you'd like to be among my hundred lucky guests. Then from the letters I'll pick the hundred boys whose letters show they'll get the greatest enjoyment out of the game.

Party for Girls Soon.

That's all there is to it—and when you think of all the fun there is whenever the Cubs and Giants fight it out you won't find it difficult to write a winning letter.

And don't think, girls, that I'm forgetting you just because I'm giving another baseball party for the boys. I have a splendid party coming, that all girls will like, so your chance is coming soon.

Now just a last word about the baseball game before I give the winners for the party at the Roosevelt. I'm going to pick the Cub game winners next Thursday, so your letters have to be in the mail by next Wednesday afternoon. And don't forget to give your age and address in your letters!

Here's the Cinema Party.

Now for the winners for the movie party!

I've chosen the winners and I'm printing their names below. Also I shall send a letter to each one, so you will get it by Tuesday. In this letter I'll tell you the plans for the meeting, so if your name is in the list watch for your invitation and the letter telling you all about it.

EMBARRASSING MOMENTS—WHY THE ICEMAN SMILED

night dresses, and summer underwear. She has been in the hospital so long that all of our savings are exhausted and I cannot afford to buy these things for her. O. B. H."

Anything you can do to make this sad little girl more happy will make you more happy, too. If you have just one toy or one piece of clothing to give, do not hesitate to write to us for the address, for this mother will be more than pleased to receive it.

Unable to Work.

"I have just recently been discharged from the hospital and am unable to work. I wonder if some of your kind readers might have some clothing, size 36, which they are planning to discard? I am also in need of shirts, size 14½. Any gift will be sincerely appreciated, and I hope that some day, not too far distant, I shall be able to repay the kindness shown me by helping some one else through your column. R. F. F."

It is a big thrill for us to see the appreciation of those we are able to help, and a bigger one to know that time and time again they have found the turn in the road toward success and are soon able to give rather than receive.

Will Give Stamps.

"I have a collection of United States stamps which I would like to give to some boy or girl interested in having them. J. J."

How are those stamp books coming along? Do they need filling up a bit, with our own United States stamps?

Help This Mother.

"My sixteen year old boy has just returned from the hospital and is greatly in need of clothing. The bills have been such a drain on my pocketbook that I have nothing with which to buy him a suit or shoes. Can some one supply him with a suit, size 36; shoes, size 7½, and a few shirts, size 14? I have three others boys—2, 4 and 12 years old—who are in need of clothes. I shall be grateful for anything donated. F. B."

Here is an urgent call for boys' clothing. Will you help this mother solve her problem if you can?

Donating Head Phones

"I have a pair of head phones which I shall be glad to give to some one in need of them. F. B. K."

Do you need an extra pair of head phones for your radio? It means that one more can listen in, you know, and the saying still holds, "the more the merrier."

WATCH BABY'S HEALTH CLOSELY IN SUMMER

U. S. Public Health Reports Show Terrific Increase in Infant Mortality From Intestinal Disease During Hot Weather

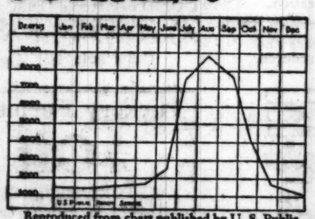
"Summer is the purgatory of motherhood," according to Assistant Surgeon General W. C. Rucker and Surgeon C. C. Pierce of the United States Public Health Service, in a Supplement to the Public Health Reports.

From 12 to 20 out of every 100 babies born in the United States die during the first year, and the majority of these deaths occur during warm weather.

The principal contributing causes are given as improper feeding and intestinal disorders. Many valuable suggestions are made for proper feeding, sanitation and general care of children in summer.

The mother should nurse the child for the first year if possible; if not, modified milk is the best substitute. Keep baby cool during hot weather, especially by proper clothing and frequent bathing in tepid water. Give plenty of boiled water. Keep flies away from baby and all utensils used in preparing its food. Never consider any disturbance of baby's bowels as unimportant, or "only summer complaint."

At the first sign of bowel disorder the disturbance should be immediately remedied. In thousands of homes Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is relied on to correct and regulate the bowels. This mild, pleasant laxative, free from injurious drugs, can be given to even the tiniest babies with perfect safety. It can be bought at any drug store.



Reproduced from chart published by U. S. Public Health Service to show appalling increase in the number of infant deaths from intestinal diseases during hot weather period.

A FRIEND IN NEED

I want to be the medium through which the friend in need and the friend indeed may be brought together. If may be you have some discarded article which has not outgrown its usefulness that should come into fortunate one happy and you would gladly give it if you knew of one to send it to. Write to me and I shall be happy to let you know where to send it. Please write as one side of the paper.

Lamps for Bicycle.

"I wonder if one of your readers has a bicycle which he is ready to discard? I am a boy, fifteen years old, and am planning to work this summer to help my mother, who is a widow. All my life I have longed for a bicycle, but have never had the money to buy one, and cannot use my summer earnings in that way. I surely would be happy to get one. F. W. B."

The man who invented the bicycle gave life to the longing in every real boy's heart to own one, and our correspondent is no exception to the rule. We will be glad to supply his address to any one who can grant his wish.

Here's Pathetic Story.

"I have a little daughter, a year old, who fell out of a three story window some time ago and sustained a broken leg, a fractured skull, and is blind. Anything your readers can do for my little girl I will appreciate. She needs something to play with, and

LOVE LETTERS

The Tribune will pay $1 for every love letter published. As no letters will be returned send copies of the ones you wish to keep.

THE ONLY THING TO DO.

MY Darling Bruce: Bruce, it is spring once more and the apple trees are pink—do you remember how pink and white they were that spring five years ago when together we admired them so ardently and laughed beneath them so lightheartedly? We loved everything then, didn't we, Bruce?

They tell me you have made good in your profession and are well on the way towards becoming a prosperous man. I am glad. I, too, have known success and moments of happiness, but never a moment so poignantly sweet and joyous as that moment five years ago when you took me in your arms and asked me to be your wife. Our love was as fresh and sweet as the apple blossoms, and the memory of it has kept me sweet, too.

You wonder why I am writing to you now after all these years. Because I know you still love me and because I love you—no one, not even you, have guessed how much, sweetheart. I've carried my love for you through the years,, as a great aching happiness deep in my heart. It has helped me to be brave and strong and true. You know I never realized that you loved me so much, and when you told me of it the joy in my heart was unutterable. I though I could never give you up and yet I knew I must.

There is a taint of madness in my family I could never risk transmitting to your children. Now do you understand, dear, why I lied to you—why I told you I did not love you when I did? It was the only thing to do—I was afraid to tell you the truth—afraid of myself and afraid of you. In the face of your laughter and your tears and your pleading my resolve might have broken—your impetuosity and ardor would have overwhelmed me—you would have taken me anyway and it would not have been right. You see, I knew myself and you so well, dear, didn't I? So I lied. I told you I did not love you and could never be your wife. You will forgive me, won't you, dearest?

The doctor tells me I have but five weeks to live—I could not leave you forever without telling you—it can do no harm now.

O, Bruce, if you could only know how often and how deep has been the longing for you—how fierce the desire to feel your dear arms about me, crushing me—how I have wanted the warmth and tenderness of your caress—longed to kiss your eyes and hold your dear head in the hollow of my arms—you do forgive me, don't you, for if my lie caused you pain, it broke my heart.

You should marry, dear—any woman would be proud of you; the fineness, the strength, the tenderness, of you should be some woman's to possess. You would make her supremely happy and her children, too. Then my love and sacrifice would be justified most fully.

Good-by now, darling. God bless you and keep you and bring you the happiness you so richly deserve. You will always keep a tiny place in your heart, I know, for your LOLA.

First Floor Plan

Second Floor Plan

ARCHITECT Robert L. Stevenson of Boston, Mass., specifies stucco for the exterior finish of the house shown in today's illustration. This material is particularly well suited to a design of this type, and the result produced by its use is most effective.

A distinctive feature of the exterior is the entrance and stair tower. It adds to the character of the whole house and yet is obviously a real part of it, not merely an excrescence. The arched opening into the small, tiled entry porch is flanked by a pair of wrought iron lanterns. Wrought iron adds another decidedly decorative note in the little balconies beneath the tall windows of the stairway and the living room.

Inside the front door is a gracious reception hall lighted by the stairway windows. There is a coat closet at one side, as well as a downstairs toilet and lavatory. From the reception hall there is a double doorway opening into the living room. This room extends through the full depth of the house, with double windows at front and back and two pairs of French doors leading to a large porch. The doors flank a delightful open fireplace. If so desired, the porch could be inclosed, with little additional expense, to make a charming sunroom.

Balancing the double doorway from living room to reception hall, is the one leading from living to dining room. Another single door connects this room with the hall. The room is almost square, being 12x13 feet. There is a group of three windows overlooking the grounds behind the house.

The kitchen is directly adjacent to the dining room. It is equipped with all modern conveniences. The sink is placed beneath double windows, with commodious cabinets and cases against the walls at right angles. Another window in the side wall insures the necessary ventilation. The rear entry is unusually well arranged. Here are a closet for broom, etc., a place for the refrigerator, and a door opening into the well lighted basement stairs.

Three bedrooms, a profusion of closets, and bathroom are pleasingly laid out on the second floor. Almost the same size as the living room is the large bedroom directly above. Two closets are arranged at the end overlooking the garden, with a delightful built-in seat beneath the window which separates them. A group of three windows across the front and two in the long side wall make certain that this room will be sunny and light, no matter which way the house may face.

The bedroom over the dining room has a double window in the rear of the house, with a door directly opposite so that it may be aired easily. It has its own clothes closet at one side of the door. At the head of the stairs in the hallway is an additional closet.

Connected with the main hall by a single doorway is a smaller one opening into the third bedroom, the bathroom, and a convenient closet for the linens. This bedroom is a trifle smaller than the second one, but is provided with three windows and a large closet.

In the bathroom there are two windows, one in the front, the other in the side of the house. Floor and wainscoting are tiled, and the fixtures are all of the best, including a built-in tub, pedestal base wash bowl, and steel cabinets, enameled white.

For the exterior finish it is suggested that the stucco be a cream white and the trim painted bright jade green, with a roof of deep green variegated tile or slate. The house itself is 54 feet frontage over the porch, and the main house covers 966 square feet.

Thank Goodness!

—it wasn't really true

FOR weeks she had been upset. Dark doubts and misgivings crowded through her mind. He had been so attentive; yet when he went away he didn't write. ¶ Could it possibly be that insidious thing—what is it the magazines speak of when your breath is not just right? ¶ Finally his letter came; everything was all right. ¶ But never again did she omit that simple precaution in her toilet. She wanted to be sure.

It's true. Even your best friends will not tell you when you have halitosis (unpleasant breath). That's the trouble.

Sometimes, of course, halitosis comes from some deep-seated organic disorder that requires professional advice. But usually—and fortunately—halitosis is only a local condition that yields to the regular use of Listerine as a mouth wash and gargle. It is an interesting thing that this well-known antiseptic that has been in use for years for surgical dressings, possesses these unusual properties as a breath deodorant.

Test the remarkable deodorizing effects of Listerine this way: Rub a little onion on your fingers. Then apply Listerine and note how quickly the onion odor disappears.

This safe and long-trusted antiseptic has dozens of different uses: note the little circular that comes with every bottle. Your druggist sells Listerine in the original brown package only—never in bulk. There are three sizes: three ounce, seven ounce and fourteen ounce. Buy the large size for economy.—Lambert Pharmacal Company, Saint Louis, U. S. A.

LISTERINE Throat Tablets are now available. Please do not confuse the antiseptic cleansing these so correct bad breath. Rely on the Liquid, Listerine. Containing all of the antiseptic essential oils of Listerine, however, they are very valuable as a relief for throat irritations—25 cents.

DRESSING FOR DINNER AT SEA.

Anita de Campi will be glad to assist as housemaker in any problems pertaining to home building and home furnishing. Address your letter to Anita de Campi, The Tribune, Chicago. Inclose stamped, addressed envelop for personal reply.

By A. T. Gallico.

ON BOARD S. S. AQUITANIA.—[Special Correspondence.]—If a man had never before donned evening wear, for one reason or another, I think he would give in on shipboard, because, somehow or other, it is a pleasure to dress for dinner on the boat.

One of the reasons for this is that fundamentally all boat trips are monotonous. The scenery of the boat doesn't change. If there is to be a relief, it must come from the passengers.

Five-thirty is the zero hour aboard ship. You're talked out and walked out. Nothing is quite so refreshing as to retire to one's cabin, have a bath, a change of linen, and then don evening dress; that is, tuxedo, since one was hardly any swallow tails go to dinner. The evening meal on a great trans-Atlantic liner is a festive affair, and evening wear goes with the spotless napery, sparkling glassware, and silver, music, wine and laughter.

Of some sixty men in dinner coats noted one evening at dinner on the Aquitania, but three wore the white vest. Two out of three were single breasted. Thus it would seem that the black vest is the popular one. However, there may be a catch to this. The black vest may be favored on shipboard because of laundry difficulties.

The four button black or figure [black and gray] seems to be the standard. In the majority of cases, the vest is cut U shaped rather than the V, showing plenty of the shirt, especially when the coat is worn unbuttoned. All of the vests appear to have plenty of notch at the bottom, while none is seen with the rounded corner and small opening.

As in all society where the man dresses well and tastefully, the turn down collars are decidedly in the minority, only a few being seen. Everything is wing, with the men about divided as to wearing the bow of the tie in front or in back of the wing.

One of the best dressed men aboard, if not the best, is a young Englishman who, according to his friends, spends a fortune on clothes. He, in common with other Englishmen, favors the dark vest with the shoulders of his dinner coat cut square, quite like Jack Buchanan's, whom New Yorkers will remember from "Charlot's Revue." The peaked lapel is it, without a doubt. Also worthy of sartorial note is this: The best dressed Englishmen wear the corded or ribbed silk lapels instead of the satin, the tie being also of dull silk.

There seems to be a great deal of latitude as far as ties are concerned, both the butterfly and the straight tie [small knot] being worn.

The sleeve on the dinner coat of the well dressed man remains without cuff, just a narrow band about two inches from the end. Although there is said to be a movement towards two buttons on dinner coats, all those seen have but one, and the jackets are still without the vent in the rear.

One or two strike out along more original lines with dress. One chap wears one of those wide black ties that almost entirely hide the collar. It makes him look rather distinguished. Another affects a high straight collar with a narrow tie, doubtless a hangover from his youthful days.

As to shirts, there is a decided leaning towards the comfortable and nonchalant; only one or two stiff bosomed shirts have been observed—everything being the semisoft plaited. The smartest dresser wears those with but one stud.

There are many shawl collars on the dinner coats, worn mostly by the older men. The younger ones prefer the peaked lapel, with dull silk. Coats are snug across the hips; trousers medium full, narrowing to the shoes.

As for shoes, patent leather and dull kid are divided about fifty-fifty.

On the whole, the steamer certainly shows a fine lot of dinner coated men. Perhaps those who are taking the trip this summer for the first time, and get the habit of dressing for dinner each evening on both ways across the ocean, will carry this habit more over into their life at home. They won't be so alarmed at the prospect of changing into a dinner coat when the wife tells them the Smith-Jones are coming to dinner.

The next style reports will come from London. Meanwhile, if you're planning a trip, don't forget to pack the tuxedo.

Accuse Him Publicly.

"Dear Miss Blake: There is a young man who is ruining my reputation with all the boys whom I like. There seems to be no apparent reason unless he is just a cad. Please help me to know what to do. BROWN EYES."

He's just about the meanest sort of person there is, Brown Eyes. Openly charge him with it, in front of your friends, if the occasion presents itself. In fact, I'd make a point of doing it, that none may have a wrong impression.

Keep Your Friends.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am 18 and have been going steadily with a boy friend for seven months, who is 20. I recently went to a dance and met a boy friend of mine who asked me to accompany him to a show. I did not know whether to accept or not, but requested him to call me up during the week about it. Also after seeing my old boy friend I realize I do not love the present one. What would you advise me to do besides telling him frankly that I cannot keep steady company with him? FRITZIE K."

The idea of steady company is not a wise one, Fritzie. Where a girl is engaged to be married she devotes her whole time and attention to her fiancé, which is quite right and proper. But no man should be so unfair to a girl as to expect such attention unless he intends to marry her. Don't narrow your list of friends down to one until the right one comes along.

You Overdid It.

"Dear Miss Blake: I went with a young man three months. The other boys did everything to break us up. At last they succeeded. I am unhappy, although I have everything else I want. "WAITING."

Your friendship would have been more lasting had you kept up with others and had he spent some of his time with the boys. Absence makes the heart grow fonder.

He Is Selfish.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am 21 and am engaged. I love my fiancé dearly and he feels the same toward me, but he has one great fault; he does not allow me to see my friends. AMY."

He is a most unreasonable young man, Amy, and certainly inconsiderate of your feelings, and selfish. You would have a miserable existence with him.

Reading Together.

One Sunday evening the minister asked that his congregation read aloud one of the chapters of the Bible, responsively, he reading one verse and his congregation the next.

When he got to his, next to the last verse, I began reading it aloud with him, putting a lot of emphasis and force into my reading; and as I was in the choir, standing before the whole audience it made my mistake more conspicuous.

The whole audience, including the minister, looked toward me, making it embarrassing. The next time I'll have my mind on what I'm doing.

Telling the World.

Some years ago I was employed as a suburban trainman, and as is customary, one of my duties was to call the various stations in a voice loud enough to be heard throughout the car, and there never has been anything the matter with my lungs.

I became quite friendly with a young lady who occupied a rear seat in my car every evening, and in fact we used to go out quite frequently. We were discussing a date for the following Saturday, when the train pulled into the 79th street station, and you can imagine my embarrassment when, instead of calling the station, I bellowed out "SATURDAY NIGHT."

C. T.

Kerosene Curls.

When I was a young girl just old enough to want to begin to curl my hair I stayed with a friend one Saturday night. We were going to Sunday school the next morning at a country church which was strange to me.

The girl suggested that we wet our hair with kerosene, and braid it, as that would make it curly for Sunday school.

Well, at Sunday school every one we were near asked if we smelled kerosene, and we finally had to admit where the smell came from. The rest of the embarrassment came when papa saw what I had done.

W. R. B.

Never Finished.

During my senior year I was the proud captain of a winning football team. The evening before one of the hardest games of the season a pep meeting was held, as is the custom in some schools. The auditorium was crowded. The spirit was keen. Every one wanted the team to win and each did his part to urge it on to victory.

After a number of speeches I was called on to say a few words. With all due modesty I approached the platform. The students had showed wonderful spirit all evening, and I meant to compliment them on it and tell them how much the team appreciated their attitude.

I began, "We do not have to worry about our supporters——" I never finished the sentence. A. F. G.

Hasty Exit.

My most embarrassing moment occurred while I was coming home from work one night. Four pretty girls were walking leisurely ahead of me, and, as they took up the width of the sidewalk, I walked behind them, waiting for a chance to get ahead.

My chance came when they were passing a pump that stood about a foot from the curb. I attempted to make a graceful leap over it. I would have succeeded but for a bolt that protruded about two inches above the top, and, amid the amused laughter of the girls I sprawled right in front of them. It took me only a minute to speed around the next corner.

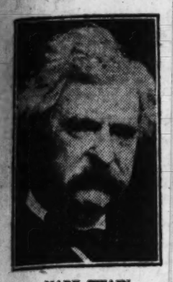
The English Begin to Slip

By H. L. Mencken.

UP to a few years ago the American literatus was almost as abject a colonial as the American social pusher. No matter how far he went in his own country, he was never content until he had received the approval of the motherland. That approval, when it was given at all, which was very seldom, was given grudgingly and patronizingly; nevertheless, the lowly Americano yearned for it shamelessly, and rejoiced with loud hosannas when he got it.



MARK TWAIN,
An outstanding figure in American letters.

I offer Mark Twain as an example. When Oxford made him Litt. D. at last—he was then seventy-two years old, and had been writing for forty-four years, and had six masterpieces behind him—his delight was almost pathetic. All the other American literati of his generation exulted with him. They had been brought up to believe that the highest honor that could be given to a native writer at home was appointment as ambassador at the court of St. James, which made him, at least officially, almost the equal of an Englishman.

That puerile deference to English opinion, and even prejudice, still survives, but not, I believe among American authors of any genuine dignity. It would be difficult to imagine Cabell or Dreiser wooing the English as Lowell, Henry James, and even Emerson and Walt Whitman wooed them. The business is now confined to the rabble of literary college professors and the inferior order of literary journalists. The touring English novelists who swarm down every gangplank are still bathed in mayonnaise and sauce Melba, but not by the men and women who are making American literature. Dozens of them, indeed, come and go without meeting a single American author worth knowing. And even those who have better luck quickly sense the fact that seeing is not always conquering, and so one usually finds them slipping back quickly into the literary half-world, where any man who can get his name into the papers is esteemed, on taking refuge in tours of the provincial women's clubs, where flattery is free for all.

Merely Marking Time

There is, in truth, not the slightest reason today why Americans should stand in any awe of English literature and its living exponents, or put it below their own. The English, in the main, are doing second rate work, even third rate work, and not all the whooping and snorting of their log-rollers and ballyhoo men can conceal the fact.

Consider, for example, the novel. At once it appears that practically all of the men who gave it dignity in England twenty years ago are now either dead or lost to other enterprises. Conrad and Henry James belong to the first category—neither, by the way, an Englishman. Hardy is senile. Kipling was blown up, psychically, by the war, and hasn't written a line worth reading since. Wells has become an amateur historian and brummagem prophet. Bennett is writing bad plays and occasionally a worse novel—for instance, "Riceyman Steps." Such fellows as Hugh Walpole and

DRUSILLA WITH A MILLION."

THE CAST.

Drusilla Doane	Mary Carr
Sally May Ferris	Priscilla Bonner
Collin Arnold	Kenneth Harlan
Elias Arnold	Henry Barrows
John Thornton	William Humphreys
Daphne Thornton	Claire Du Brey

By Mae Tinee.

GOOD MORNING!

This is a double deck Cinderella affair with a little old lady from an Old Ladies' home and a young girl from an orphanage, playing the leading rôles. It is based on what I imagine could be called a dear, sweet, little story. It oozes simplicity, and sentiment drips from its uncomplicated situations. And Mary Carr, always paged feverishly by directors in need of sad, sweet, wistful, gummy, put upon old ladies, is in her element.

She is Drusilla.

Miss Drusilla Doane!

Drusilla is a charity inmate of the Cliftondale Home for Old Ladies. All the other "girls" pay their way and are allowed to go to picnics and wear lace caps on their heads. They may sit in the parlor and knit and gossip and listen to the Victrola. The matron is kind to them and smiles leniently upon their diversions. But Drusilla

Washes the dishes and washes the clothes,
And hustles about on her tired old toes,
And feeds stray dogs when nobody knows,
But never complains of all her woes.

MARY CARR
In the title rôle of "Drusilla's Millions."

And only HOPES that the board will let her stay—because if the board should decide NOT to let her stay, well, what——? Drusilla doesn't know.

Enter the Hero!

Then one day a Man comes to see Drusilla. A Man to see Drusilla! The paying guests are in a flutter and congregate about the parlor door, which the Man ceremoniously closes on their noses. Alone with Drusilla, he tells her a distant relative has died and left her a Million. Drusilla is to leave right away and take possession of her money and new estate.

Exit Drusilla from the old life; she enters on the new. A stately mansion receives her. But it doesn't stay stately long. Right away people begin leaving unwanted babies on her doorstep and Drusilla, who had always wanted babies, gathers them all in, to the dismay of the haughty help and the horror of the fashionable neighborhood.

Who left Drusilla the million? The father of a young man who gave just one too many gay parties.

"Get out!" had said Dad; "you're no good. I'll disinherit you."

He did. He died. That's that.

Evolution in the Ravinia Laboratory

By Martin Stevers.

TECHNICALLY, of course, the play's the thing—and Ravinia's ultimate raison d'etre is the quality of its performances. But most people, I fancy, have a penchant for seeing behind the scenes, for getting a taste of how and why operatic performances are made great. And to those who have this desire, I can recommend nothing better than an evening at Ravinia—for there, perhaps more than anywhere else in the world, Mr. and Mrs. Chicagoan can see how really great opera is made.

ARMAND TOKATYAN,
who sings Romeo at Ravanis this evening.
[Mishkin Photo.]

And they can see it being made, not by furrowing the brow and plowing up the carpet in cloistered studios, but in the way all great art is made. They will see the off-evening artists, clad in flannels or summer frocks, seated in and about the pavilion among their families and friends, laughing, chatting, and enjoying opera as the laity enjoys it. Then, by looking sharp, they will notice sudden thoughtfulness—a quickening of attention, a gesture or two, almost unconscious, and the artist may suddenly retire to a secluded nook, there to commune with the idea that has struck him. And when that happens, Mr. and Mrs. Chicagoan may be sure they have seen the birth of something new in opera—a new interpretation, a different nuance, which is going to score a triumph either at Ravinia or in some metropolitan appearance this winter.

For an example of how this works, I can cite nothing better than Ravinia's treatment of the comedy numbers in its repertoire. It seems to be a common impression, fostered, no doubt, by the surrounding splendor of winter productions, that all opera is grand, whether or not its plot and music deserve the appellation. If you can imagine yourself laughing out loud in the imposing surroundings of a winter audience, you get the idea.

Seeing Things as They Are

At Ravinia, however, the entire perspective changes. Sitting in the intimate, homey surroundings of the open air pavilion, and free from the strain of a heavy winter season, an artist sees things exactly as they are. When a piece is essentially comic—as in the case of Offenbach's "Tales of Hoffman"—this fact stands out; and when a comic piece is billed, it receives exactly the interpretation it demands. I mention the "Tales of Hoffman" because last week's presentation, one of the best Chicago has heard in years, is admirably in point. The "Tales of Hoffman," rightly understood, bristles with comedy, and that is just what the Ravinia company made it do. They made it known that you could laugh—right out loud, if you felt that way—and then they devoted themselves to extracting audible merriment at any and every opportunity.

All of which means much for opera, not only at Ravinia, but in the centers from which Mr. Eckstein draws his company. Ravinia, by providing a congenial and intimate atmosphere, thereby provides a center—a laboratory, if you will—where artists may consider their work, free from the strain

SIGHING FOR THOSE OLD DAYS AT CONEY

By Burns Mantle.

CONEY ISLAND AND ENVIRONS, N. Y.—[Special Correspondence.]—I don't suppose anything can be done about Coney Island. And yet I have a selfish feeling something should be done. Something to bring the ocean back closer to the shore and to reclaim at least part of the beach.

In the old days, before the people took over Coney and began to remold it closer to their hearts' desire, it was a lot of fun to go there once a summer.

Seldom were we disappointed.

I remember we used to ride down in the old Brighton Beach trains, a comfortable ten or twenty thousand of us, and walk, not run, toward the nearest and coolest of the open spaces, of which there were at that time any number.

Usually we would go about the middle of the afternoon, arriving around 5 o'clock, and passing mamma and the dirtiest and happiest of the children starting for home. Thus our first impressions were subconsciously pleasant. With mamma going home, we knew there would be more room on the beach.

Seldom were we disappointed. Occasionally mamma would be going only so far as the police station to pick up little sister, who had been lost since noon. Then she would come back and resume her burrowing. Which complicated matters a bit if we had happened to take over mamma's section of sand. But usually she was going home. Whether papa came or not.

As It Was Once Upon a Time.

We would then park the shoe box and the wedding ring with the lady who had promised her husband not to go in the water, and go in search of a bathhouse and bathing suits. Neat, clean bathing suits with white letters relating the legend of their ownership and making every wearer a member of that club.

Adjusting these to our slim, youthful figures, we would run, not walk, through the burning sands, ejaculating little O, O's, punctuated with an occasional masculine ouch, toward the rolling billows, and throw ourselves joyfully upon what practically was the bosom of old ocean herself.

And there, after we had caught our breaths and tightened up the twisted, knotted tape strings that left the second piece of our flapping two piece suits from interfering with the action of the knees, we would paddle back and forth or dash boldly into what those with a seashore background called the breakers.

Our first bath finished, we would romp back to the spot marked by the lady who was not going in, and there, our lips a little blue and our teeth a little unsteady, we would recount the joys of living so near the ocean and how nice it would be when we got the subway and a five cent fare.

Soon the sun and the hot sand warmed us, and we would get out the dear old kodak, to confirm the suspicion that we had forgotten to buy a film. And then merrily to the hot dog

July Jottings of the Plays and the Players

By Frederick Donaghey.

SAVE that Miss Claiborne Foster expresses expectation of performing "The Patsy" August 16 in the La Salle, the tentative line-up of novelties in the Chicago theaters stands as of a week ago. . . . "The Gorilla" is to be let out of the Studebaker August 1; but the owner is seeking new confinement for it. The Messrs. Chapin are installing ventilation in the Playhouse, which has ever been choking for lack of it, and, having some air to spare, will pipe it next-door into the Studebaker; that is why "The Gorilla" seeks new shelter. . . . The Messrs. Shubert say they will have the Olympic revamped in time to exhibit "The Love-Song" August 2. . . . Hope at the Harris is that "Laff That Off" will draw persons in numbers to warrant keeping it there long enough to make a fortnight's vacation for the employés the sole "dark time" before Miss Elsie Janis puts her revue in there at the end of next month. . . . If nothing promising turn up for the Cort, "The Lady Next-Door" will be succeeded by "Pigs," whose producer prefers, however, a later Chicago start. And, in case you care for what I say in such matters, "The Lady Next-Door" is a good comedy—so good of its sort that it is unlikely you will see anything better in some time to come. This is its final week.

GUY ROBERTSON
He's the new tenor in "Rose-Marie," and is a better tenor than the old one.

This-and-That.

And there's nothing new this week in New-York save a piece named "What Women Do." . . . However, there's plenty to be seen there, with the seventh Scandals, the third Artists and Models, the third Vanities, and the eighteenth Ziegfeld Follies, not to mention the third Grand-Street Follies and the first Garrick Galeties. . . . And the management of the Greenwich Village Follies, the sixth issue of which is in the making, is gone to law with the management of the Greenwich Village Scandals, alleging infringement of title, but saying nothing as to the measure of infringement involved in styling a revue the Greenwich Village Follies twelve years after the Ziegfeld Follies had been established. And Mr. White, who also feels aggrieved in that he has been marketing his Scandals annually since 1919, retorts with the announcement that he will stage a second revue and name it the Paris Artists and Models, thereby indicating that he regards the Messrs. Shubert as the real sponsors of the Greenwich Village Scandals,—which, it seems, is to be composed of the overflow from the third Artists and Models. . . .

And, as I have averred ere this, managers are far, far funnier than the comedians they employ to be funny.

A paragrapher says in today's New-York Times that, if the two new revues be produced under the respective titles, one young producer will feel sufficiently encouraged to venture with a piece named "Abie's Irish Rose-Marie."

"The Matinée-Girl" is an addition to the list of songshows in the mid-July announcements. The authors are

And on top of it all, the hospitality of a marvelous new hotel, with golf, motoring, and every summer sport—all yours as the guest of that magic city, Hollywood-by-the-Sea!

Come to Florida's Miracle City!

Think of finding it cool in Florida! All day and all night, the ocean breezes sweep in across thousands of miles of cooling water. And Hollywood-by-the-Sea is right on the shore of the Atlantic.

That's why we offer this wonderful vacation. We want to prove that Hollywood-by-the-Sea is an alluring vacation city in summertime! When you and thousands of others realize that fact, Hollywood-by-the-Sea can reasonably hope to become the greatest year-round vacation city in the world.

Never Before Such a Vacation Offer

People who have come to us to investigate this remarkable offer have asked us "How can you do it?" The answer is simply this: We have these immense hotels, waiting to entertain you. We have the golf courses, the beaches, the Broad Walk and other attractions. We have the cool ocean breezes. We have spent $250,000.00 on a bathing casino, just completed. We are spending $15,000,000 on a harbor—one of the finest between New York and Panama. The cost of all the entertainment we offer you is small in comparison to these investments. It is small in comparison to the tremendous success which is bound to follow, when we can bring you down here to enjoy yourself, so you can come back and tell your friends about Hollywood-by-the-Sea, because your word will send them down here next year. Our hotels are so large that a trainload of guests can be accommodated without causing a ripple in their smooth operation. Do you wonder that we are willing to entertain you at such liberal terms—a cost little more than what the railroad fare alone would be at other times.

$100 Vacation Tour to Hollywood by-the-Sea Florida's All-Year Resort City

July Jottings of the Plays and Players

By Frederick Donaghey.

Mr. Gilbert Moore, who wasn't afraid to say he wrote "Plain Jane," a fourth-rater of last year; Bide Dudley, a New York paragrapher and drama-critic, and Frank H. Grey, who turns out tunes. The Messrs. Dudley and Grey once wrote a piece named "Sue Dear."

Miss Toots Pounds, who is liked in London and other English cities, is coming here to perform in a piece named "A Night Out." . . . Frederick Kerr, Robert Andrews, and Herbert Marshall are sailing hither to act for us the respective rôles they had in "The Pelican" when it was a London entertainment. Mr. Kerr is known here well through many a visit; I am unable to identify Mr. Andrews; and Mr. Marshall was a good actor when I saw him in one part and another over there. . . . THE TRIBUNE has stated that Miss Margaret Lawrence, last in Chicago in "Secrets," will have the part in "The Pelican" for which Miss Katharine Cornell, Miss Mary Newcomb, and Miss Ann Harding have in turn been mentioned.

Richard Ringling, the baritone son of one of the circus Ringlings, is engaged to sing with the Chicago Opera.

And Signorina Storchia, who sang with the Chicago Opera in 1920-'21, has taken the veil, joining the Franciscans. . . . She was the first singer of the title-part of "Madama Butterfly" in Italy; but that was a thin reason for importing her fifteen years later.

"All Dressed Up," by Arthur Richman, is in the list of new plays. . . . Miss Madeleine Marshall [Mrs. Richman] is expected to act the principal rôle.

Balieff is to return this season with the Chauve-Souris, and to make a trip to California. . . . Chicago, which was not too hospitable to the Russian show, is not in the itinerary, so far as I know.

Francis Neilson, for a time president of the Drama League of America and known well in Chicago, expects soon to stage in Paris a play of his writing, "The Desire for Change."

More Miscellany.

Theater-goers who remember the comic dwarf named Little Tich from the days of the Henderson extravaganzas in the Chicago Opera-House may be interested in being told that he is still performing in London, where his big-shoes dance is as popular today as it was when he did it in the Ballet of Dolls in "The Crystal Slipper."

Norman Trevor, here last season in "The Goose Hangs High," is to be in a comedy named "It All Depends," by Miss Kate McLaurin, whose "Whispering Wires" was acted here in 1923. Another play by her, named "Caught," also is announced for production this season. . . . With Mr. Trevor will be Miss Violet Kemble-Cooper, Felix Krembs, Miss Katherine Alexander, Charles Trowbridge, and Miss Lee Patrick.

Diaghileff has been struggling in London to reanimate interest in his famous ballet, and hasn't been successful. . . . His principal dancer, Anton Dolin (unknown in this country), has withdrawn to go into one of the London revues.

Miss Rosamond Pinchot, whose business in life appears to be acting the rôle of the young nun in "The Miracle," is to go to Salzberg to act the rôle of the young nun in "The Miracle." . . . Lady Diana Manners also is going—to act the Madonna; and both are bulletined by Mr. Gest to take part in such American performances of the pantomime as may be given this season.

And Mr. Gest expects to renew his efforts, which failed last season, to arrange for some performances of "The Miracle" in the Auditorium. . . . The Building Department's refusal to permit him to make radical changes in the Auditorium is understood to have been the cause of his not bringing the spectacle here in February.

Charles Richman, Ralph Morgan, Miss Emily Ann Wellman, and Miss Sara Sothern are well-knowns in the cast of "The Dagger," which has had a Jersey try-out and is thought by its producer to be OK.

Godfrey Tearle, neither of whose American engagements has carried him to Chicago, recently acted Hamlet in London, and is now in a revival of "The Fake" there. . . . Miss Louise Prussing, once a Chicagoan, is with him in it.

IMPORTATION

MISS NANCY GIBBS

She's in "Artists and Models," doing a bit of this and of that to help make the Summer nights diverting in the Apollo. . . . Miss Gibbs came from England in 1921 to take part in a sad revival of "The Belle of New-York."

READY WHEN OPPORTUNITY COMES

MISS ROSLING WISHON — MISS VIOLETTE CODE

BOTH are ladies-in-waiting this Summertime in Chicago. . . . Miss Code is waiting for an opportunity to show what she thinks she can do in the part of the Grand Duchess Anastasia in "The Student-Prince," in case Miss Charlotte Granville should take a night off. . . . And Miss Wishon is at attention to take over any other woman's work in "Artists and Models." It is stated in her behalf that she is a native Chicagoan; and that doesn't matter.

Sighing for Those Old Days at Coney

By Burns Mantle.

stand and to the soda water stand, and back to the shoe box. And so, with many a quip, into the water again to wash off the mustard.

Dressed, and refreshed by the swim we would wander back to Surf avenue which was almost on the beach, and join the thirty or forty thousand promenaders surging, without much shoving, to and fro. Sometimes we would "take in," as the quaint saying was, Steeplechase park, where the patrons entertained themselves and each other by rolling down slippery toboggan slides, or twisting about on human pool tables, often being thrown, shrieking with joy, into one pocket or another, the ladies all wearing calico bloomers to protect their modesty. My, my—how times change!

Sometimes we would go to Luna park and listen to the band. Or see the circus. Or ride the sky-high races and dips. And then home again on the elevated, tired, as we used to admit yawningly, but happy. And nicked for more than three or four dollars.

Later we gave up taking the shoe box, and would buy ourselves a good soggy shore dinner at one or another of the huge rambling restaurants that stretched their table acreage between Surf avenue and the lower end of Coney's bowery. Thence through the side shows and home by subway or motor bus. However we went, and whenever we went in those days, there always was a clean beach to be found, a refreshing swim to be had, and a place to sit down within a small stone's toss of a clean ocean.

And as It Is Now.

But there has been a change, my masters. The old Coney is no more. The new Coney is a bigger and, it may be, a better place to play in. But not for us. Probably it is just as well. Those who have taken it over certainly need the water.

We made our annual Coney pilgrimage last week, partly out of curiosity, partly to get away from the heat and combine a friendly tour of inspection with a dip in the sea. And fell to contrasting the new with the old.

Now we go by motor, because it is practically impossible to go any other way without fighting to retain your feet and protect the family from being crushed. In the old days, which is to say no more than ten years back, one hundred and fifty thousand people were a good crowd at Coney and a quarter million a hot Sunday record. Yesterday, the turnstiles and police estimaters agreed, there were 750,000 people in and around the resort. And probably 500,000 of them arrived by subway and elevated. It takes a more even tempered man than I am to fight a crowd like that successfully. And it is fearfully hard on the ribs, too.

We arrived by motor on a weekday evening. Hot, but not sizzling. And decided that, having come this far, we might as well take a bit of a swim for old times' sake as well as to be sure of an appetite for dinner. And we went in search of one of the old familiar places.

Everything Is Changed.

My friend, there are no more old familiar places.

The porch of the hotel on which we used to have our best dinners, and which at that time overlooked the ocean, doing its stuff a matter of sixty or eighty yards away, is now a full city block from the sands of the beach, which are still another block from the water's edge. And on the porch are wide rocking chairs in which mamma parks grandma with the wet bathing suits while she hunts up the children.

Between the hotel and the ocean are thousands of pens and a checking system by which you are numbered and ticketed for a full beach day if you want it. This is for the ocean bathing. If that does not appeal to you, there is still a pool between you and the ocean, a cement pool of salt water usually running over with splashing celebrants, but still a pool.

Beyond the pool and the pens is the board walk, a grand structure providing a promenade such as the people have never previously enjoyed in all the years they have been in this country. And beyond the board walk a solid stretch of sand, so far as a reasonably good pair of eyes aided by a better pair of specs could see, carpeted with olive skinned humans tanned a deep Oriental brown.

No Room to Get In.

We went to another place, farther down the shore, and found a reservation of one and two room cottages, each of them housing, the suspicion is strong, from six to twelve summer vacationists. We went on and on. And came back again. And nowhere did there seem to be room even to get into the ocean. Taking a long walk on an empty stomach may be good exercise in town.

We went on to Sheepshead Bay for dinner. And drove back at night. Coney was booming. And no longer shabby. It is like the man in Raymond Hitchcock's song, still more beholden to the difference just a few hours make. All its wrinkles and its grease spots fade away with the coming of the shadows and the bright lights.

But it is different from the crowd it used to be. Bigger, more solidly packed, as it drifts in from those wide, reclaimed beaches, but less joyous, less light hearted than it was in the days when the Bowery boys and their gals gave Coney its touch of character and made it a jolly place, where the most fastidious of the uptown folk could release their inhibitions and indulge the thrills a common humanity is forever craving.

Glad and Sorry.

I am glad the people have found Coney and taken it over. There are pitifully few places on the shore hereabouts which can be reached for a small street car fare or that offer any space or recreation after the journey has been made. And one short walk through any one of the congested sections of the town will reaffix the conviction that a healthy citizenry cannot be reared there.

But there is regret at the passing of the old Coney, too, when one recalls the days and the crowds that have been pushed out.

Eventually, as the melting pot boils and the forces of assimilation work on, there will be a combination public that will be different from either the old or the new. But Coney, as Coney, is gone.

JUST ACTING

MISS WINIFRED HARRIS

She is in "June Days," a diversion which depends for its pull on songs and dances; but none of these things falls to Miss Harris, whose business it is to keep to the text and help to tell the tale while the quiristers are changing their clothes.

Hitchcock's New Play.

Raymond Hitchcock now says he will act in a piece named "Don't Play with Love!" by William A. Grew, who wrote the thin comedy, "The Big Sap" (if that was its name), in which Mr. Hitchcock acted last season in the Great Northern. . . . Mr. Grew states that other plays by him are named, respectively, "Smarty," "Solitaire," and "Wanderlust," and that the last is to have Frank Fay in the principal part. Also, Mr. Grew is the librettist of the new issue of Earl Carroll's Vanities.

The Movie Fans Have Their Say

You Surprise Us.

Dear Madam: Had opportunity to view two pictures at leading houses this week. The first was so utterly stupid that I forget its name. The second, "The Lost World," a cheap picture, devoid of plot, story or dramatic incident worth while, and entirely devoid of any chance for character acting.

I have a play, based on incidents in the life of Maxmillian of Mexico that, if some of the producers that put out the balderdash would be led to produce, would give a chance to an actress like Pola Negri to portray scenes worthy of her great talents, and as she portrays in the first part of "The Charmers." Unfortunately the shifting of this production from its initial scenes in a romantic land to prosaic New York take the interest out of the entire production and so "The Charmer" falls flat as a truly great picture.

I would be willing to devote 80 per cent of all royalties to charity, if I were allowed the direction of a truly American picture, devoid of claptrap, such as forest fires that never occur, of torrential rains that are a joke, of rotten bedroom scenes and bawdy house occurrences, and the picture would be filled with action, real, virile, strong and clean from beginning to end.

However, since producers seem to believe "The Lost World," a worthy effort, I guess nothing may be done to produce worth while pictures until the dumb doras become extinct.

ADOLPH.

Editor's Note: Why I thought "The Lost World" quite a picture!

Moved to Verse

The world is just a Hollywood of everybody's life,
For life is but a movie, made of laughter and of strife.
The action starts the minute that first you see the light,
And continues every minute, every day and every night;
There are episodes that thrill you,
there are episodes that bore;
The scene is always shifting—there is always room for more;
But no matter how you like it, there is one thing that is true:
You have got to see the picture and you've got to see it through;
For the stage is all around you, and very soon you learn
You will see another movie, no matter where you turn;
And no matter how you like it—no matter how you feel—
The picture keeps unfolding and you cannot miss a reel.
Frequently the reel is tragic, or at least that's how it seems—
But it soon will flicker past you and live only in your dreams;
So don't let it make you gloomy—it is better you should know
That it's only just a picture—that it's all a passing show.
You may not like the actors, and perhaps they don't like you!
But you've got to see the picture, and you've got to see it through.
So you may as well admit it—it will save you lots of strife—
The world is just a Hollywood of everybody's life. LENORA.

[Editor's Note—That's awfully nice Lenora!]

IN THE SKITS

MISS PAULA TULLY

She's in "Artists and Models," taking part in some of the skits, sketches, and interludes.

Odds-and-Ends of Stage-News

"Un Dejeuner de Soleil" is the name of a current Paris comedy taken for use soon in this country, where, it is said, Miss Margot Kelly, here with Miss Barrymore in "The Second Mrs. Tanqueray," will have the principal part. . . . The part is of a cocotte who, in love with a gigolo, drops him for a nobleman of imposing pedigree; and the new lover steals her money. Spinelly, out of the variety-houses, has this rôle in Paris.

Zangwill's "We Moderns," a sad and futile thing when acted in Chicago, has been a quick failure in London, too.

It is stated that Miss Lenore Ulric and Sidney Blackmer will soon act together in California in a play by Harry Wagstaff Gribble.

"Death Takes a Holiday," an Italian play by Alfredo Cassello, is announced for production in this country by Horace Liveright, of the firm of Boni & Liveright, book-publishers.

The New-York critics' consensus is that "All Wet" is the worst play they have seen in the last year. It lasted a few nights when acted there.

Picture Players Sizzle and Suffer on Desert "Lot"

By Rosalind Shaffer.

HOLLYWOOD, Cal.—[Special Correspondence.]—Sizzling temperatures bring in many tales of weary wanderers on the desert spaces of Wyoming, Arizona, Nevada, and sundry other places where flourish the horned toad, mule, bean and sourdough and melting make-up. Every studio in Hollywood has its contingent of actors making pictures out in the wilds, now that the sun is hot and dependable for shooting the horse operas.

Richard Dix and Lois Wilson, making "The Vanishing American" for Lasky's out eighty miles from Flagstaff in Arizona in the Navajo Indian reservation, are making a valiant effort to vary the desert menu by sending to Flagstaff for ice cream once a week.

Beating the thermometer became an impossible job last week, for midway back a tire on the truck blew and the thirty minute delay reduced the ice cream to so-o-o-p, and thus the company had pears in the can for dessert for the forty-seventh time.

Plenty of Thrills.

The company filming "Wild Horse Mesa," near Red Lake, Ariz., reports some thrills for the cameraman, Bert Glennon. A picture of the flying hoofs of the horses in a stampede was shot from underneath, the cameraman and camera being concealed beneath boards in a brush strewn gully. A flying hoof hit the two inches of protecting camera and nearly blinded Bert with a heavy charge of sand.

Jack Holt and George Magrill got so interested in making their fist fight real that they fell into a barbed wire fence, and got all cut up. The horses, five thousand of them, escaped with no casualties whatever.

Lois Wilson admits she can think of more pleasant ways of spending the summer than in Arizona at 120 in the shade, but certainly not any more exciting.

Charlie's Out Again.

Charlie Chaplin is about and playing again, now that little Charles Spencer Jr., has been finally introduced to his circle of expectant friends.

Papa was seen at the Montmartre with Marion Davies dancing in a most professional manner and showing Maid Marion the intricacies of the Charleston and other eccentric and involved steps. Conversation didn't lag all through the lesson, either.

A Hollywood father simply can't allow his responsibilities to become liabilities. The twenty-four inch shoes of the films shrink to a quite narrow patent leather dancing pump, size 2, on the dance floor. Charlie is a mean ankle artist, and I don't mean maybe.

Wednesday at the Montmartre.

Wednesday was a busy day at the Montmartre. In the afternoon Florence Vidor was hostess to a party of friends, Mrs. Tom Reed, Mrs. Clarence Brown, Mrs. John Ford and Mabel Normand were having another party; Constance Talmadge was entertaining friends, and Margaret Livingston was giving a luncheon.

On Wednesday night Theda Bara judged the dancing contest, which is one of Hollywood's indoor sports. She wore her hair in the new and popular door-knocker effect, down her neck, and a white brocaded satin and crepe gown with scalloped edge finished in iridescent crystal fringe. A white Spanish shawl, embroidered in mustard color, completed her costume. At her table Robert Vignola was playing his favorite rôle of genial bachelor host. Sister Loro Bara, in gray chiffon, wore a gray tulle turban over her auburn tresses and diamond ornaments over each ear; June Caprice, a screen favorite of a few years back at Fox's, wore white chiffon.

Julanne Johnston and Mack Sennett were at a nearby table, with Dorothy Devore and Harry Edwards nearby. Marjorie Daw was noticed on the dance floor with an unknown escort. Ralph Ince, recently divorced, was there with Dolores Mendez.

John Barrymore Present.

Saturday night beheld the arresting vision of Jawn Barrymore himself with a pair of white pleated trousers. A sprinkling of iron gray to his hair adds the last touch of romance to the irresistible John who only a short time ago found it necessary to warn one of the Hollywood newspaper sisters that she might as well give up the idea of being in love with him, since he loved his wife. Said female scribe is still in a state of hiatus from Jawn's declaration.

Mario Carillo at another table danced with Katherine Hill, who wore her long blonde hair under a black horsehair poke and a double string of small pearls at the neck of her black crepe dress.

Reed Howes, resplendent in a checked vest and knickers with black and white silk striped hose, danced with his wife, though he left her long enough to join Cecilile Evans' group of five admirers at a nearby table. Cecilile wore a white satin ensemble suit and a rose horsehair hat with a large drooping bow of ribbon over one ear.

Greta Nissen, with her young brother, was in a flame chiffon dress which was accompanied with a large white felt hat. Charlotte Merriam, Dorothy Mackaill, and Mildred Davis were together at another table.

Jim H. Young, who years ago provided the Young park of Clara Kimball Young, was dancing with a pink flapper, while Clara Kimball is working in the two a day here not so many miles away and living on the hundred a week the judge allows her from her salary till she pays all her back bills.

Rupert Julian and wife, Mal St. Clair, Adolphe Menjou, Raymond Griffith, the latter resplendent in makeup and a British army uniform, and Hugo Ballin were there. Charles Chaplin and Henri d'Abadie d'Arrast entered late. Edmund Goulding, Jack Daugherty, Charles Whitaker, and Lew Cody with Mario Carillo were together.

Notes and Gossip.

Mrs. Harris, mother of Mildred Harris, who embarked with Everett Buchary ("Terry") McGovern on a second matrimonial craft after Charlie Chaplin proved unseaworthy, is living in Hollywood again and is accepting congratulations on her news that she is to become a grandmother in the fall. Mildred is living near New York at the country home of her husband.

Thursday night music lovers of Hollywood turned out to the concert in the open air bowl; prominent among those was young Bill Hart, aged three years, who, seated in a box with his mother, climbed on to a chair and "conducted" the orchestra with such perfect rhythm and time sense as to excite the admiration of one of the musicians in the audience. When the tempo changed young Bill's efforts followed the rhythm, and the concert was not the end of it, for he has been conducting orchestras in his bath, over his morning oatmeal, and on the back steps ever since.

Tattling tongues say John Gilbert's interest in Norma Shearer has been growing by leaps and bounds; which may be as it may, but would upset all the "dope" about men always falling in love with the same type of woman. The vivacious brunette beauty of Leatrice Joy, the last Mrs. Gilbert, is a great contrast to the quiet, rather stately, and fragile loveliness of ash blonde, blue eyed Norma.

Pola Negri has got herself a new and young sheik in the person of young Billy Haines, who has been playing juveniles. They say this most exotic siren likes a taste of each year's crop, and no one can say she has been too constant to any admirer to miss one season. While Lasky's famous film school is turning out actors, why shouldn't Pola conduct private classes where perfect lovers are being produced?

of a heavy winter season, and evolve new charms and new beauties for the times to come. And any Chicagoan, by taking the easy after supper jaunt northward to Mr. Eckstein's haven of summer music, may "see the wheels go round."

Repeating Past Successes.

The coming week is dedicated largely to repeating the outstanding successes to date, with two first productions for good measure. Leading off the week's repeat performances is tonight's offering of Gounod's "Romeo and Juliet," with the same cast which scored a triumph a week ago last Tuesday. Lucrezia Bori will sing Juliet, with Armand Tokatyan playing her vis-a-vis as Romeo, and Leon Rothier as Friar Laurent. Others in the cast are Desire Defrere, who sings the "Queen Mab" aria; Paolo Ananian, Louis D'Angelo, Giordano Paltrinieri, Anna Correnti, and Louis Derman, with Louis Hasselmans at the baton. Those who wish may make a day of it by attending the free afternoon symphony concert, with Jacques Gordon as soloist.

Tomorrow night's symphony concert will feature Helen Freund, who made her debut at Ravinia last week as Olympia in "Tales of Hoffman"; Virgilio Lazzari, and Alfred Wallenstein.

Tuesday will see a repetition of the popular double bill, "Pagliacci" and "Cavalleria Rusticana," with a notable cast in each opus. Giovanni Martinelli, whose Canio in "Pagliacci" is a classic, will head the list, with Marie Sundelius as Nedda, Mario Basiola as Tonio, Desire Defrere as Silvio, and Giordano Paltrinieri as Beppo. In the other half of the bill, Rosa Raisa will repeat her masterful delineation of Santuzza, with Mario Chamlee playing opposite as Turridu. Giacomo Rimini plays Alfio, Anna Correnti will render Mamma Lucia, and Ada Paggi will sing Lola. Gennaro Papi will conduct both operas.

Danise as "Rigoletto."

Wednesday will see the week's first new item of repertoire in "Rigoletto." The name part goes to Giuseppe Danise, and Florence Macbeth will be the Gilda. Mario Chamlee is cast for the Duke, and Virgilio Lazzari as Sparafucile. The cast is completed by Ada Paggi, Louis D'Angelo, Anna Correnti, Philine Falco, Paolo Ananian, Giordano Paltrinieri, Virgilio Coscia, and Virgilia Grassi.

Thursday night, "Il Trovatore," which the Ravinia company endows with remarkable fire and freshness, will hold the boards with Rosa Raisa, Giovanni Martinelli, and Ina Bourskaya scheduled to repeat their triumphs of a week ago tonight. The one change of cast gives Giacomo Rimini the rôle of Count di Luna, while Virgilio Lazzari will be heard again as Ferrando.

Lucrezia Bori will sing the title rôle in Friday night's repetition of Massenet's "Manon," with Tito Schipa opposite as the Chevalier des Grieux. Leon Rothier will sing the elder des Grieux, with Defrere, D'Angelo, Paltrinieri, Maxwell, Falco, Paggi, Ananian and Grassi completing the cast.

Saturday evening is chosen as the spot for the second new production of the week, "The Jewess," with a notable cast. The lead in Halevy's powerful opus will be carried by Rosa Raisa, with Martinelli opposite. Macbeth, Tokatyan, Rothelr, Defrere, Ananian, and D'Angelo complete the vocal galaxy for the occasion, with Hasselmans conducting.

Art Notes

Other summer shows at the Art institute include paintings by the Russian painter Brailousky; paintings by Frederick F. Fursman and William Owen, Jr.; paintings by Jessie Arms Botke and Cornelius Botke; wood carvings by Charles Haag; the valuable loan collection of old masters, lent by Mr. and Mrs. Francis J. Neilsen, and the beautiful loan collection, chiefly of modern masters, lent by Cyrus H. McCormick, Sr.

Miss Helen Forrest, in charge of costume on the faculty of the department of drama in the Art institute school, is presenting a series of lectures on "The History of Costume, With Its Practical Application to Theatrical Production," before members of the Drama league and the summer dramatic arts students at Northwestern university.

J. Theodore Johnson and Thomas Lawson Blackmon, who received the Eryan Lathrop and the John Quincy Adams scholarships, respectively, in the 1925 annual traveling scholarship competition of the school of the Art institute, are sailing together the latter part of August for a year's travel and study in Europe.

Several of the students in George Oberteuffer's advanced painting class in the school of the Art institute, are planning to spend part of their vacations doing outdoor painting under his criticism at his summer school at Cedarburg, Wis. The group includes Jean Goodwin, Andrene Kauffman, George Lenher, and William Davenport Griffin.

The Art institute is getting its share of summer visitors. In evidence of the fact this item is interesting: the number of paid admissions for the month of June totaled 8,146 as against 4,982 for the month of May. July will undoubtedly show a greater income. Pay days at the museum are Mondays, Tuesdays, Thursdays, and Fridays. Sundays, Wednesdays, and Saturdays are free.

The English Begin to Slip . . . By H. L. Mencken

Turn, now, to the younger novelists. Are they better than the younger Americans? It must be obvious that they are not. Logrolling, as I have hinted, has reached a high development in England, and so every newcomer with the proper connections is touted as a new Balzac, but all that is needed to dispose of that balderdash is to glance through a few of the current "masterpieces."

I point to E. M. Forster's "Passage to India." It was cried up at home as something rare and superb, a piece of writing of the very first rank; even over here there were rhapsodies over it in Anglomaniac circles. But what is it, in fact? It is a very respectable novel, workmanlike, amusing, and inoffensive—and that is all. In ten years only a few half-witted college tutors will remember it.

Every year there is another "Passage to India;" nay, every six months. The English wind machines are thrown into full blast; the firmament echoes their dreadful screams. But every year, I believe, it becomes harder to put the thing over. The accursed Yankee is no longer the easy mark that he once was. He may still occasionally swallow a Katherine Mansfield, but the Michael Arlens now make him gag. Bit by bit the sinister thought begins to take possession of him that his own fictioneers are better.

America in Lead.

They are, in fact, not only better, but much better. Not in ten years has England produced a novel as generally sound and solid, as cunning in observation and diverting in manner, as "Babbitt." The Arnold Bennett of "The Old Wives' Tale" or the Wells of "Tony Bungay," had he kept on, might have written an English "Babbitt," but neither kept on; they are both wrecks today. And no one has arisen in England to pick up the torch that they dropped.

I have mentioned Katherine Mansfield. She was, at the time of her death, the wife of a very influential English critic. At once a critical wake began which quickly rose to a sort of orgy. The veriest scraps from the waste basket of the dead lady were exhumed and printed; her husband testified to her genius with all the solemnity of an Oxford don; her first editions began to bring fabulous prices.

But what is actually in her short stories? Nothing, in the last analysis, save an agreeable manner. They are as devoid of genuine imaginative passion as so many bond circulars. Miss Mansfield saw her characters as an Englishman sees a colonial: aloofly, distantly, with a certain delicate aversion. She simply could not feel with them. And so they remain sticks—sometimes pleasantly gilded, but still sticks.

There are, in America, at least a dozen women who write better short stories, not to mention two dozen men. I name only two: Willa Cather and Ruth Suckow. There are single stories of Miss Cather that are worth the whole Mansfield canon, and single stories of Miss Suckow—for example, "A Pilgrim and a Stranger"—that are worth all the fiction written by English women in twenty years. In these American stories there is everything: accurate observation, deft writing, and profound poetic feeling. In the average English short story, even of the best kind, there is only affectation.

Down Hill Rapidly.

The revolutionary English novelists who are so vastly applauded at home—for example, Virginia Woolf and Sheila Kaye-Smith—are all actually second rate, and their innovations are mainly stale. Sherwood Anderson, to name but one American, has gone far beyond any of them, and with much better success. There is more genuine originality in Anderson's "Horses and Men" and "The Triumph of the Egg" than in any fiction done in England since Joseph Conrad published "Almayer's Folly." And there is more solid merit—more feeling for character, more understanding, more literary dignity—in Miss Cather's "My Antonia" than there is in any book by an English woman novelist since the death of George Eliot.

In the novel, indeed, the English fast lose their old preëminence; they are surpassed not only by Yankees, but also by Scandinavians and Germans. Their golden age was nearly a century ago; of late they have been going down hill rapidly. It is no longer possible to say—what one could at least say twenty years ago—that the English novel is well written—that it clearly surpasses the American novel in manner, if not in matter. I know of no living Englishman who could write as well as Cabell writes in "The High Place," nor any English woman who seriously rivals Elinor Wylie.

So in all other fields. The Yankee seizes and holds the lead. With Shaw sunk into his dotage, the best dramatist writing in English is an American, Eugene O'Neill; there is absolutely no one among the English playwrights of his generation to challenge him.

And poets? Well, what has England produced since Kipling became a bore to match the poetry of Sandburg, Masters, Vachel Lindsay, and Frost—that is, in originality, in honest eloquence, in human significance?

So-called "serious" writing remains. Here, it may be argued, the English still lead. Do they, indeed? Going down the list of Americans who have performed in that department I confine myself to one letter—more, to one name. What has England produced that is better than "The Education of Henry Adams" or than the two volumes of New England history by that other Adams, James Truslow?

Breaking the Rules.

It was an ardous task for the teacher to drum into her youthful pupils the principles of arithmetic.

"Now, listen," she said. "In order to subtract, things have to be in the same denomination. This is what I mean: Now you couldn't take three apples from four peaches, nor eight marbles from twelve buttons. It must be three apples from four apples, and so on.

"Do you understand?"

The majority seemed to grasp the idea. One perky little youngster in the rear, however, raised a timid hand.

"Please, teacher," he inquired, "couldn't you take three quarts of milk from two cows?" M. C.

Almost Too Quiet.

Teacher [to scholar]—"What are you laughing at? Not me."

Scholar—"No, sir."

Teacher—"Then what else is there in the room to laugh at?" O. N.

Hiking Made Easy.

Recently this was seen in a small town paper:

"Two young men walking from coast to coast, got off the train here Friday morning." M. L. M.

And Coming Fast!

He was teaching her to drive the car and things were going along nicely on one of the unfrequented streets, when she threw up her hands and exclaimed: "O, quick, quick! Here comes the curb." H. G. H.

Already Gone.

"Have you anything to offer in your behalf?" the judge asked the prisoner.

"Im sorry, your honor, but I've turned every cent I own over to my lawyer and a couple of jurymen." C. S. C.

Mixing Cinderellas and a Movie Million

By Mae Tinee.

The son marries the other Cinderella of the piece. She's a poor little slavey in the home of a mean woman. The son is in an auto wreck and the girl binds up his wounds. She's so unhappy and her mistress is so mean—and he's so grateful—that he marries her and they are vurr' happy on his earnings. Dad's harsh words had been just the needle shower Son needed to make a Man of him.

And Next, the Villain!

Once a man, he writes his father and in return receives a letter from the family lawyer—to whose daughter Son had once been engaged—that Dad is dead and Drusilla rampant.

"——but I think we can break the will," says the lawyer.

Son doesn't want to.

Enter the lawyer's daughter. She pays an underhanded call on the young wife. Several hours of lowdown argument and she has persuaded the poor girl the only way she can show her love for the husband who has, she is informed, married so far beneath him, is to leave him.

So Sally May packs her suitcase and leaves her husband. She makes him a cake first and sets the table for his supper. Then she writes him two notes. One tells him the food's in the warming oven. The other, what a wrong she has just learned she did him—and good-by forever.

He feels something terrible, for he loves the gal; and from then on he walks the streets trying to find her, just missing her by hairs' breadths a number of times.

Well, Sally has a baby and a cruel landlady turns her and the child out into the cold, ha-ha-ing the idea that the wedding ring Sally shows her so proudly ever came from anywhere other than the five and ten.

It Ends Happily.

Sally, sitting mournfully beside a garbage can with the babe in her arms, sees a story in an old newspaper that has been thrown out. It's about that queer Drusilla and her habit of adopting babies.

From then on all things begin to work together for good for the two Cinderellas—and if I had space I'd tell you how, but I haven't and you're good guessers, anyway.

Lots of everything in this picture, including several stretches of admirable acting.

See you tomorrow!

VOICE OF THE FAN

Lots of Old Timers.

Dear Miss Tinée: I've often yearned for a sight of the old timers. My dream has come true. "The Mad Marriage" was the medium. In the cast were Maurice Costello, Richard Carle, Rosemary Davies, Harrison Ford, Jean Girard, Gaston Glass, Walter McGrail, Paul Panzer, Florence Turner, and Charlotte Walker.

But the picture! Most holy cat! The ending was happy, but not soon enough. If you haven't reviewed "The Mad Marriage" pick out a cool day for your task.

I'm converted, ready to hit the sawdust trail and worship at the shrines of such moderns as Hoffman, Griffith-Ingram, De Mille, et al. Better a cream puff than a soggy biscuit!

Why don't they give us more films like Renaud Hoffman's "Not One to Spare"? Clean and sweet as a baby's breath. A sprig of arbutus. No maudlin sentimentalism to mar its beauty of theme. Worked out to a sensible conclusion and a happy one. A cast to please the gods—David Torrance, Ethel Wales, Russell Simpson, and the sweetest bunch of "kids" I ever saw. If all movies were good as "Not One to Spare" all our censors would be selling lead pencils.

Once I saw a picture, with the hero going to the electric chair—and he wore a sport shirt. I've never been the same since. Sort of sorry he was saved at the eleventh hour.

Reverting to type, so to speak: In re "The Mad Marriage," a proofreader working piecework would have made his fortune revising subtitles.

Good luck to you! G.

Many, Many Thanks.

Dear Miss Tinée: I have been an unknown admirer of yours for a long time, but have never told my love before, although tempted many a time, but felt your pathetic plea for Æsop's Fables, in this morning's TRIBUNE could not be disregarded.

I don't think there is anything shown on the screen that I enjoy more,' not only because they are so funny, but because they are so wonderful. I never see one without wondering how it is done. The perfection and precision are marvelous.

I have lots more I would like to say, but am afraid I have exceeded the limit as it is. C. M.

WORLD'S RADIO AMATEURS WILL STORM CHICAGO

League to Hold August Convention Here.

Amateur radio enthusiasts from the United States and Canada and to some extent from Europe and other countries will gather at the Edgewater Beach hotel in this city, Aug. 13 to 21, to attend the third national convention of the American Radio Relay league. Included in the attendance will be internationally noted experts in all branches of radio and amateurs who are experimenting with this fascinating science in their own homes.

The convention, the first in two years, is being staged under the auspices of the Chicago Radio Traffic association, of which W. E. Schweitzer is president. It is planned to have papers and demonstrations on many of the startling radio discoveries of the last two years, such as photographs and motion pictures by radio, short wave low power transmission in daylight, and kindred developments.

Hoover May Come.

Among the men prominent in the radio world expected to attend the convention are Secretary of Commerce Herbert Hoover and C. Francis Jenkins, inventor of radio protography and radio motion pictures.

Another part of the convention work that will be of great interest is the gathering of radio telegraphers in the traffic field. These operators, whose work makes possible nightly talks between men on opposite sides of the country, are to discuss betterments in their message handling work.

Where radio communication in the past with the lower powered stations has been largely during hours of darkness, the introduction of short wave work within recent months promises many new developments.

Much Food for Discussion.

The work of the traffic department of the league in assisting the Navy-MacMillan expedition by relaying messages from Donald B. MacMillan to the National Geographic society will, by the time of the convention, furnish much food for discussion of the day-light work on short waves.

John L. Reinartz, principal proponent of the short wave theories, is operator of the MacMillan short wave station and in consequence the findings of league members at this end will be of great value to radio science in general.

Be important is his gathering from the government standpoint that provisions are being made for the examination of visiting operators who are making licenses for transmitting stations. This work will be in charge of supervisor of Radio E. A. Beane of the ninth radio district.

AUSTRALIANS ESTABLISH NEW RADIO RECORDS

Washington, D. C., July 18.—Some interesting records have been made recently by Australians in wireless experiments, especially by amateurs, says Trade Commissioner Babbitt, Melbourne, in a report to the department of commerce. An amateur from Maffra, Victoria, reported having received wireless communications from Durban, South Africa. The call was heard distinctly, and afterwards a concert and other items. A message, it is stated, was sent 15,000 miles to Finland by an amateur at Box Hill, near Melbourne, and other Australian experimenters were also heard in Finland on the same occasion. An experimenter at Albury, New South Wales, reports having received the American station KGO during daylight at loud speaker strength. Cables from London report that signals sent out by Mr. Maclurcan of Sydney, New South Wales, on a 25 meter wave, have been heard by two British experimenters. Though there was slight fading, the signals were reported to be quite readable, and established a new record. The set used by Mr. Maclurcan was built in two days, and his power was 60 watts. The results have demonstrated that it is possible to reach England on short wave length in daylight, and is the first time daylight communication has been made with England.

PACIFIC FLEET STATION MAKES RECORD IN RADIO

Washington, D. C., July 18.—[Special.]—As the Pacific fleet of the United States navy gets ready for its swing south from Hawaii to the islands of the south seas and the Australasian group, Lieut. F. H. Schnell, traffic manager of the American Radio Relay league and officer in charge of the short wave station on the flagship Seattle, is making radio history with his twenty and forty meter transmitters. Calls are picked up in south Africa and on the eastern seaboard of the United States, and two way communication has been established with many amateur radio stations in odd corners of the world.

H. S. Johnson of Hartford, Conn., owner and operator of station 1HN, has worked with NRRL, the fleet short wave station, on 20 meters, while A. E. and A. H. Towne of Santa Monica, Cal., and K. L. Reidman of Long Beach, Cal., stations 6AGK and 6CGW, respectively, have maintained fairly regular schedules with it.

Japan, New Zealand, Australia, Mexico, England, south Africa and Argentina are among the countries listed by the American Radio Relay league as having heard NRRL.

List of Navy Shore Stations Now Available

A list of United States naval shore radio facilities will soon be ready for distribution. It is requested that any errors noted be reported to the chief of naval operations in Washington, as it is intended to keep this publication corrected up to date in the future.

EXPERTS TO GET TOGETHER UPON RADIO RESEARCH

New York, July 18.—For the purpose of conferring with Prof. Marius C. A. Latour, French radio wizard, Joseph D. R. Freed, eastern radio expert sailed today on the steamship Paris. Results of mutual research on increasing effectiveness of radio transmission and reception and the development of an entirely new type of receiver will be discussed at this meeting.

Basic inventions by Prof. Latour are used in nearly all receiving sets. His claims regarding infringements of his patents granted and pending stirred the radio industry in America last winter, when Prof. Latour was here, resulting in the purchase of licenses to use his discoveries by the Radio Corporation of America, the American Telephone and Telegraph company, the Postal Telegraph company, and several radio manufacturers. The French scientist announced that he intended to devote his time to experiments when he returned to Paris.

PLAN ECLIPSE RADIO EXPERIMENTS.

A naval vessel will be sent to Sumatra to conduct radio experiments during the period of the solar eclipse, Jan. 14, 1926.

SLEUTH "MIKE" HEARS BUGS IN GRAIN OR TREES

New Service for Radio Is Found by Scientist.

BY S. R. WINTERS.

Washington, D. C., July 18.—[Special.] — Farmers may take a radio microphone to their corn cribs and determine whether insects are eating the stored grain, or lumbermen may carry a microphone into the forests and ascertain whether insects are boring into the heart of the timber!

As fantastic as it may seem, this new application of the principles of radio has received the official recognition of such a distinguished scientist as Dr. L. O. Howard, chief of the bureau of entomology of the United States department of agriculture.

Detect Insects' Presence.

Upon noting this strange use of the invisible radio waves, he commented as follows:

"Mention may be made of Prof. C. K. Brain's just announced discovery in South Africa of the adaptation of certain radio principles to insect investigation, in which he shows that by the use of microphones the presence of insects may be determined, not only of wood boring insects, boring in wood, but of insects in stored grains."

Thousands of farmers and lumbermen are equipped with radio receiving sets, but you would hardly expect them to be equipped with microphones. The latter are employed for the sending rather than the receiving of electric energy, and their use is confined to broadcasting stations. They are the sensitive devices that pick up the voice of the speaker or singer in the broadcasting studio, after which the sound waves are amplified and converted into electric impulses and as such are radiated through the ether.

Mike Gives Alarm.

Therefore, in view of the limited use of microphones, some manager of a broadcasting station may be approached by a farmer or lumberman for the loan of his microphone. Mr. Studio Manager, do not hastily have the applicant examined for lunacy, for in the light of this recent discovery his request is sensible, indeed! Bug or beetle hunting by means of a microphone sounds like a tale of Arabian Nights, but remember science is stranger than fiction.

Millions of dollars' worth of grain and timber are exacted annually by an army of insects. As might be expected, they do not work with a blast of trumpets, but subtly and silently they bore into the bin or stored grain or stately pine tree. Their very presence, undoubtedly, may not be known. The sensitive microphone, capable of picking up the slightest sound, is enabled to detect the presence of the beetle boring into the heart of a pine tree or an insect taking the kernel out of a grain of wheat or corn. Strange, but increasingly useful are the applications of the principles of radio!

IF YOU CATCH THESE SIGNALS IT'S MAC MILLAN

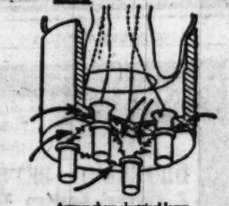
For the guidance of amateurs the following official call letters of the navy-MacMillan national geographic polar expedition have been given out. WAP is the Peary, WNP the Bowdoin and NA-1, NA-2, and NA-3 the three naval airplanes.

The letters WAP are the initials of the words "Wireless Admiral Peary," WNP, "Wireless North Pole," and the plane designations, "Naval Arctic."

MAUBORGNE MOVES UP.

Maj. Joseph O. Mauborgne has been placed in charge of the engineering and research section of the army signal corps. He was director of research and experimental work at the bureau of standards. Capt. Guy Hill, formerly of the signal corps school at Camp Vail, N. J., succeeds him.

DE FOREST TUBES



Across these electrical lanes sound by new De Forest beam.

ISOLANTITE BASE
stops electrical leakage

THE strength of radiowaves in the air is infinitesimal. It must be magnified again and again. This is done by the tube. The purpose of the "low-loss" movement is to conserve every particle of this strength. Perfect insulation in the base of the tubes adds volume and quality to radio reproduction.

Porcelain, glass, rubber, and the other common insulators are electrically porous, absorbing electrical energy in a sponge-like manner. Such absorption, or leakage, means loss of voltage inside the tube where it would be useful. These ordinary insulating materials allow from 8 to 50 times the loss possible through Isolantite, the new synthetic quartz.

Isolantite is used only in De Forest Tubes. It makes leak-proof bases, which deliver the full energy of the radio signal to the tube elements.

Authorized De Forest dealers display this sign.

Inside the Loud Speaker

with Quin A. Ryan, the Voice of W-G-N

WELL, we greet you this morning after a week in Dayton, and what a week it was. On Monday the A. T. & T. lines from the courtroom to Chicago went Darwinian and there was no broadcasting of that day's matinee of the Punch and Judy Armageddon.

P. T. Barnum wrote the scenario of that show, and the Western Union produced it.

Dayton was merely playing a little game of Hear-No-Evil, See-No-Evil and Speak-No-Evil. And suddenly a horde of newspapermen arrived to make it this year's Olympics.

But the townfolk spread on their inimitable brand of hospitality. They consider all visitors their guests, and guests of Daytonians are given free rein, with no left turns.

We stayed, for instance, in the home of F. E. Robinson, druggist, in whose soda fountain the circus was born. We took our excellent meals across the street at the home of A. P. Haggard, mayor, banker and "richest man in town." His son, Wallace, is one of the lawyers for the prosecution. Across the other street is the courthouse.

Everywhere in town the families are the essence of hospitality and courtesy. They charge things for us in their shops, cash checks unhesitatingly, and bring us ice water unrequested at all hours of the evening. The town charms one by its graciousness, and not because we are its press agents, but its "guests." A confidence man would have his heart broken here in ten minutes.

The informality of the great show astounds the visitor. One night we had a chocolate soda with Darrow in Fisher's place. Bryan and Dudley Field Malone greet us on the curbstone. H. L. Mencken cusses the local soft drinks and the radio as he ambles with us down Market street. Scopes, Rappelyea and Judge Raulston chat with us on Main street, and gladly agree to talk on our radio after court if it will help us any. You probably heard them Tuesday and Wednesday.

It was our enterprising engineer, Paul Neal, who arranged the layout of the whole courtroomh for the Scopes trial, when he was down here in May. All Tennessee courts are designed with the judge on a high bench, the jury seated directly in front of him and the witness stand further in front, facing them. The attorney's tables are to the right and left. For purposes of broadcasting Neal persuaded the judge to set the jury box up ahead, facing the bench, with the witness stand in the foreground, and the lawyers on either side facing the microphones. The press seats were built outside a rail, on three sides.

The chief comedian in Dayton is W. O. "Bill" McGeehan of New York who writes for Liberty at times. Of a fire-eating radical talking on the streets last week he said he was "arrested for talking below the belt."

A hideous fire siren, screaming like a box of monkeys, wakens the whole town at six every morning. It is a general call to the citizenry to come to work in the strawberry and peach crating works, on which Dayton thrives. A fine place for an alarm clock salesman.

Dayton is not a hill-billy town, not a really rural town. Just two cement paved streets, across which you could toss a medium sized anvil, lined with neat shops, and all the shops with overhanging balconies. Just a nice little town to send back post cards from.

LATIN-AMERICAN PEOPLE NEED FACTS ON RADIO

Reporting on a recent radio survey of nearby Latin-American markets, R. A. Lundquist, chief of the department of commerce electrical division, said he believed our manufacturers in many cases fail to send out sufficient instructions with their sets.

"This may not be necessary in the United States, where stations are near enough so that indifferent tuning will always bring in something and the owner gradually learns by experience to operate his set.

"Down there where the nearest stations are far away the beginner needs more in the way of advice on installation and operation. We must remember that there radio is not the everyday affair that it is in this country. Many people down that way have never heard of it."

WAVE LENGTHS OF EUROPE TO BE MODIFIED

GENEVA, July 18.—(AP)—The technical committee on radio telephony under the auspices of the league of nations has decided to make several modifications in the European wave lengths, although recognizing the necessity for retaining the older and important stations on the existing wave lengths.

A new plan of wave lengths has been prepared and, in order to determine if this plan of compromise will be successful, it has been decided to request the delegates to ask permission of their respective governments to consider the new arrangements.

QUESTIONNAIRE FOR FARMERS.

By way of better suiting his needs, the National Farm Radio Council of Chicago is sending a questionnaire to the farmer asking what sort of radio program appeals to him most. The answer should prove informative.

RADIO NOW IN "BIG BUSINESS" CLASS—JEWETT

Says Industry Has Spirit of Conscious Pride.

New York, July 18.—[Special.]—"There is a spirit of conscious pride about radio manufacture today that has not existed heretofore. It will have a remarkable effect, a good effect, on the forthcoming radio season."

Such is the substance of an interview granted this week by Edward H. Jewett, one of the leading figures in the giant radio industry.

"Radio has achieved a dignity which is symbolic of 'big business,'" Mr. Jewett continued. "For such a young industry it has been unusually voluble, but I believe it may be truly said that from now on most of its fluency will be based on performance and no longer on promise.

"The better the performance, the less the shouting. Radio is not so loud in its claims today, but it certainly gives more satisfaction than it did a few years ago.

Proofs of Progress.

"There was a time not so long since when any one living on the eastern seaboard, who got merely a peep from a California station, just enough to distinguish the call letters, thought it a good night's work. Today he wants to hear the California program as clearly as he hears any one of his local stations; nothing short of completeness satisfies. I call that progress.

"The radio fan has brought his demands up to the point where he is satisfied only when he obtains a completely satisfactory result. He has transmitted these demand to the manufacturer, who, in meeting them, has raised the morale of the entire radio art. Thus there has come about a dignity of performance, a pride in good work, which has raised the standards to a degree which would have seemed impossible a short while ago.

"Receivers and loud speakers have already been improved until, in my opinion, they are very close to perfection. Tubes have not yet reached a stage of uniform excellence, but the rapidly expanding competition in this part of the radio field is also expanding the imagination of the engineers and we may confidently expect an improvement comparable to that already achieved in loud speakers and sets.

Progress Without Limit.

"Broadcasting is continually getting better; both in transmission and in programs. No limit can be forecast here. The broadcast station can be made to serve every worth while purpose; it can be the ally of the newspaper, the university, the theater, the concert stage, the lecture platform, the political rostrum. Today the broadcaster tries to do a little of everything. I think the time will come, however, when broadcasters will specialize; either on music, or travel, or lectures, or education, or drama—specialize on one general field and stick to that.

"No matter how you look at it, radio faces a glorious future."

AMATEURS GIVE FIRST ALARM OF QUAKE TO WORLD

Santa Barbara, Cal., July 18.—[Special.]—To Brandon Wentworth, Jr., and Graham George of this city, the former an official relay operator of the American Radio Relay league, fell the duty of first linking up Santa Barbara with the outside world after the disastrous earthquake that shook the entire city recently.

The first news telling the outside world of the city's plight; the first reassuring messages to friends on the outside; the first call for naval aid in guarding against vandals were the work of Wentworth and George.

When the temblor hit the city, cutting off Santa Barbarba from the rest of the world, these two youthful radio enthusiasts lost their home stations.

Undeterred by the loss of their own equipment, the two young men made posthaste to a radio store, where materials were available for the use of those who knew how. Wentworth and George knew how. Within an hour of the first shock they had assembled a three-inch spark coil, a rotary gap, twelve-volt battery and a key for transmission of an S O S.

Raymond-Whitcomb
Round the World Cruise
Three requirements are fundamental to the success of any Round the World Cruise

1. Avoid Japan in Winter: The Raymond-Whitcomb Cruise will be in Japan in Chrysanthemum season, avoiding the raw, cold winter.

The S.S. "Carinthia" is the newest liner afloat and the finest Cruise-ship ever designed—generous decks; hot and cold running water in every room used; 77 rooms with connecting bath; squash-court, gymnasium and swimming pool.

Visiting Japan, Peking, Java, India, Egypt, etc., plus New Guinea, New Zealand, Tasmania and Australia.

Lake Forest Horse Show Noted Next in Social Program

By Mme. X.

THE next event on the summer's program in the world that amuses itself, and that is the particular field in which this p. s. is supposed to cast its shadow is the Lake Forest horse show. This will be held in the jolly little ring built for this purpose a few years ago on the grounds of the Onwentsia club. The show is a combination philanthropic, social, and sporting event, for the proceeds from the sale of tickets and boxes are devoted to the maintenance of the Lake Forest orphanage and Alice home. The latter is an up to date and really attractive—if you can apply that term to a hospital—little hospital. It was founded by the late Mrs. Charles B. Farwell several decades ago and is housed in a picturesque structure of English cottage design which stands on the edge of the Lake Forest university campus.

Socially these annual horse shows are always made the reason for an extra amount of entertaining. Week-end parties, luncheons and dinners, and club dances will fill up the hours intervening between the two afternoons devoted to the horse and his riders.

This year's horse show is going to make a special feature of all entries in which children take part. Also it will emphasize local horses more than heretofore. There will be jumping contests for children under fourteen years of age mounted on their own ponies, and there will be classes of children's saddle horses ridden by children under twelve, others for children under fourteen, and still others for children under sixteen. Class seven requires that contestants must be children under fourteen years old who will take a letter from the judge, ride to a fence, open the gate and pass through, deposit the letter in the mail box, pass through again, and close the gate and return to the judges' stand. There will also be a class for thoroughbred foals.

Emphasis on Riding Horses.

The principal emphasis will, however, be laid on riding horses, especially hunters. There will be three driving classes only. All of the rest of the events will be riding classes. Friday the show opens at two o'clock; on Saturday at half past one. The ward and his wife, also his progeny and friends, will all be there.

Among the boxholders are Messrs. and Mesdames:

Lawrence H. Armour, Prentiss L. Coonley, J. Watson Armour, Alfred Landon Baker, Edgar Armour, William E. Clow, Edw. A. Cudahy Jr., Donald M. Ryerson, Joseph M. Cudahy, Kersey Coates Reed, Albert Blake Dick, Joseph T. Ryerson, Reuben H. Donnelley, Earle H. Reynolds, Francis Farwell, Albert A. Sprague, E. A. Eckhart, Clive Runnells, William V. Kelley, Samuel Insull, Paul Gardner, William McC. Blair, Noble B. Judah, Howard Linn, John R. Thompson, John T. McCutcheon, E. J. Lehmann, F. Edson White, Solomon A. Smith, Thomas E. Wilson.

If the weather be fine there ought to be a big gallery besides the boxholders, as there is ample room to accommodate a crowd. The ring where the show is held is in the south field of Onwentsia's broad and fertile acres, quite near the polo grounds and easily accessible from Green Bay road. Those who like a gay and pretty spectacle will enjoy a visit to this equine event, for both horses and humans will be on exhibit in surroundings uncommonly attractive. And the time has not yet arrived when the combination of horses and humans is not one of the most picturesque and interesting of any of the events in the world of sport. No automobile show touches it for dramatic quality and for a certain smart atmosphere always inherent in anything that has to do with horses or dogs. It is an inheritance from our Anglo-Saxon ancestry which has made these two species of quadrupeds companions, who have accompanied us since time immemorial on our way up from primeval conditions, important participants both in the business and pleasure of life.

The officers of the horse show are: Prentiss Coonley, president; William E. Clow Jr., vice president; Earle H. Reynolds, treasurer, and Austin Niblack, secretary.

Back Into Favor.

It is said that the sale of saddle horses, which, a few years ago, when automobiles became our national pastime, dropped off so much as to make it seem hardly worth while to raise them, has now assumed sizable proportions again, and that riding is becoming more and more à la mode among the people who set the fashions. The rebirth of the Lake Forest hunt a few years ago, after a long dormant period, did much to bring the horse again into his own. An evidence of this is to be seen in the fact that whereas the old Onwentsia stables which went up in smoke a year ago had eighty stalls, but was seldom called upon to house more than thirty horses, today has built stables to shelter a hundred horses, and is already full and with a waiting list of horses whose owners would like to find stabling room for them there.

Sixty people are on the list of those hunting with the Onwentsia pack in the autumn, and the average field is forty, a pretty sizable crowd of riders to tear across the shorn fields and to make the often quite ugly jumps. When one recalls the serious, sometimes fatal, accidents that have happened to skilled riders in this region, it seems as if fate were capricious and whimsical, in that so few serious disasters of a dangerous kind have befallen this band of intrepid, if not always experienced, riders as they have torn across rough and stubby fields, topping sizable fences and jumping treacherous ditches. What spills happen are taken cheerfully and as merely a part of the game.

Among the expert cross country riders in the Lake Forest hunting set are Mr. and Mrs. Prentiss Coonley, Mr. and Mrs. Donald M. Ryerson, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph T. Bowen, Mr. and Mrs. Austin Niblack, Mr. and Mrs. Volney Foster, Mr. and Mrs. Howard Linn, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph M. Cudahy, Mrs. William E. Swift, Miss Jane Morton, the Misses Elizabeth and Janet Chase, Joseph T. Ryerson, and Edward Hines Jr.

Cushion with a History.

It is, perhaps, not just the moment to talk of weddings and such things, as for some reason no one seems to get married at this the most beautiful moment of the year for such a fiesta. But I have only lately learned of an institution which struck me as being one of the sweetest, nicest of its kind, and well worth handing on to my readers. This is a wedding kneeling cushion, such as it is customary to have for the bride and groom to kneel on while the minister pronounces the final blessing at the end of the marriage ceremony. It was made by the then Miss Mary Gillette, to be used at her wedding to Charles W. Dempster, between two and three decades ago. She was not satisfied by the one provided by—was it the church or the caterer?—so she fabricated a lovely white satin affair for this moment in

[Moffet photo.]

Chicago society is interested in the wedding plans of Miss Marion Condon, Miss Virginia Taylor, and Miss Katherine Martin. The engagement of Miss Condon, who is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James G. Condon of 222 East Delaware place, to Paul Gerhardt Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Gerhardt of 457 Fullerton parkway, was announced this spring, and their marriage will be an event of the fall, probably November.

Miss Virginia Taylor, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd B. Taylor of 196 East Delaware place, is to be married to Robert J. Dunham, Jr., son of Mrs. Ethel Richardson Dunham and R. J. Dunham, on August 26. The wedding is to take place at the summer home of the Taylors at Bar Harbor.

Announcement was made last week by Mr. and Mrs. James L. Martin of Highland Park of the engagement of their daughter, Katherine, to Robert Roosevelt Shaney, son of the late Mrs. Clifford Bucknam of New York City. Their wedding has been tentatively set for next January.

the service. She kept this cushion, for sentimental reasons, and then the thought came to her that it might be acceptable to, other brides for similar service, so she began lending it to her friends.

The autograph of each bride and groom is inscribed on the underside of the little kneeling stool, so it has in the course of time become a unique record of weddings among our F. F. C.'s. The cushion must have magic qualities, as the average of happy marriages among those who knelt on it, asking God's blessing, is almost 100 per cent. Here is the list of those to whom Mrs. Dempster has lent it during the years since she and her husband used it: Mr. and Mrs. Augustus A. Carpenter (Mrs. Carpenter was Miss Alice Keith), Mr. and Mrs. Charles G. King (Ginevra Fuller), Mr. and Mrs. Harry Farnum (Lillian Drake), Mr. and Mrs. David Cook Jr. (Margaret Meeker), Mr. and Mrs. Thomas E. Donnelley (Laura Gaylord), and Mr. and Mrs. Frederick F. Norcross (Alice Wrenn). This was the first crop of bridal couples whose names are recorded on the stool. After several years it came to the second generation. Miss Katherine Meeker used it when she married Horace Grey, Miss Grace Meeker when she married Ambrose Cramer, Miss Florence Taft when she married Philip Peck, Miss Catherine Keith when she married David Adler, Miss Ellen Ryerson when she married Victor Salvatore, Miss Evelyn Shaw when she married John T. McCutcheon, and Miss Mary A. Chase when she married Preston Boyden.

When it came to lending it to Miss Ginevra King, daughter of the Charles G. Kings, when she and William Mitchell II. were married, it was the first case in which it was used by two immediately succeeding generations. Then came Richard Bentley and Miss Phoebe Wrenn Norcross, whose parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Norcross, had knelt on the same cushion on which they knelt at the close of the wedding service.

The names of other bridal couples include the following: Miss Eleanor Newell and William Burry Jr., Miss Anna Marquis and Arthur Dixon, Miss Lydia Hibbard and John E. Holland Jr., Miss Frances Lowden and John B. Drake Jr., Miss Marion Erskine and Paul Fenimore Cooper, and Miss Marjorie King and Clarence B. Mitchell, the last marriage mentioned being another case of its use by a second generation.

So, you see, the cushion is really becoming an institution, and will probably be more and more in demand as its fame as a bringer of good fortune spreads abroad in the land. When strangers ask if so and so's marriage turned out happily, the answer will be: "Of course it did; their names are on the Dempsters' kneeling cushion."

Horticulturalists' Show.

For several seasons the Lake Forest Garden club and the North Shore horticultural society united in giving annual exhibitions of the high art of horticulture, the designing of gardens, and the arrangement of flowers. Now the two organizations have parted and the former identifies itself more with the ever increasingly important question of general design and color arrangement in gardens, while the horticultural society is pursuing the even tenor of its way in making the growing of flowering bushes, vines, and plants, and the cultivation of vegetables its chief preoccupation. Its membership is chiefly among the gardeners of the north shore, an ambitious and capable lot of men, skilled in their profession, and an important factor in the development of the beauty and fruitfulness of the surrounding country.

The society is holding a two day midsummer flower and vegetable show that opened yesterday and will continue today at Gorton school, Lake Forest, and it would profit any one interested in the development of a garden to visit this exhibit.

There will also be two of Lake Forest's handsomest places open to visitors to this flower show: Havenwood, Mr. Edward L. Ryerson's place, and Walden, the estate of Cyrus H. McCormick. They lie almost side by side, their main entrances being cheek by jowl, as it were. Both are beautiful examples of gardening carried to its ultimate possibilities, where skillful workmanship, correct design, and charming color schemes are united to create the loveliest work of man, a perfect garden.

Robert Larson is president of the horticultural society, which has a list of associated members that includes the names of most of the prominent Lake Foresters. Here are as many of them as this col. can compass: The Mesdames Byron L. Smith, George A. McKinlock, James Vlies, Barney Eckhart, Edward L. Ryerson, John T. Pirie, George D. McLaughlin, Walter S. Brewster, Francis C. Farwell, J. Ogden Armour, G. W. Heyworth, the Misses Colvin, and the Messrs. J. O. Armour, A. B. Dick, E. A. Russell, Carter Fitzhugh, Hugh J. McBirney, Cyrus H. McCormick, Albert M. Day, Louis F. Swift, Horace H. Martin, John V. Farwell, Alfred Baker, and John T. Pirie.

Encouraging the Love of Golf.

The money raised from the sale of tickets is devoted to some public benefit. Last year this society gave $1,000 to the municipal golf course at Lake Forest, which is in process of construction on that level, lush district out to the west of the town and bordering Deerpath avenue. These community golf courses are a boon to the suburbs which establish them, giving to all the residents of the adjacent territory an opportunity to enjoy this ancient Scotch game. Young and old, rich and poor alike can play at it. A nation that enjoys outdoor sports has a far healthier outlook on life than one that is minus this sort of recreation. Had the Russians been a nation of golfers, they never would have raised a race of bolsheviks. Can you imagine a Scotch bolshevik? Neither can I.

Living in Simplicity.

The members who attended the school of landscape design which was held at Lake Forest last week and the week before are still discussing what they learned there and disputing earnestly the merits and demerits of various local gardens. I am glad I live in a simple hearted, unself-conscious garden, a quiet, secluded retreat where the trees and bushes and a few flowers grow joyously, and for the most part unwatered and unclipped, careless of whether they are part of an English, or French, or Italian, or Spanish garden. We sit under tall trees that cast a generous though not too dense shade on grass that is soft as velvet, yet not guiltless of the abhorred dandelion. Here we read, or chat, or play cards, or even have luncheon or supper served on the somewhat aged and frail tables. It is lovely and restful, so without design or effort that the soul can enjoy it without exertion. Various friendly dogs gambol about or scratch their flea tormented hind quarters; little boys, who don't belong there, occasionally stroll furtively through it, looking slyly at the heavily laden apple trees to see how soon their fruit will be ready for stealthy stealing. Little apples were made for little boys to steal.

Not far away from the shade of the stately and sheltering trees is a hedge inclosed pale jade green swimming pool, a rendesvous for people of all ages from two year old Mary Cornelia to men and women of quite mature years. Would-be swimmers come at all hours of the twenty-four. Even after midnight, when the moonlight lies shimmering over the hazy garden, the writer occasionally hears the sound of splashing and murmured talk coming from the green and hidden place where the pool glints and blinks, or just lies in profound meditation, according to whether there is a wandering breeze or merely summer's utter peace.

NEWS OF CHICAGO SOCIETY

Manton Monroe Marble, the well known baritone, gave a program of songs in various languages out under the trees on the lawn that lies to the south of the house. The guests sat in a wide and shallow semicircle about the singer. The sun set behind the trees and the hour was ideal for music and companionship. After the program the party adjourned to the tennis court, which is one of the most scientific in this region, as it has a quick drying floor, so that it can be used immediately after the fiercest summer shower. Here supper was served, the daylight continuing until quite late. The tennis court is rather above the rest of the grounds, so one could look down from it into the grove, or across the lawn to the swimming pool, dark and gleaming, or get glimpses of the flowers blooming in various glades.

Mrs. Hibbard provides much entertainment for her friends, as, besides a first class tennis court and a delicious swimming pool, she has a most up to date squash court, housed in a picturesque pavilion at the southeast corner of her garden. Her garden has many aspects, each one interesting and lovely and all of them linked together with rare art, so that when you walk along the red paths in the woods you think you are quite far away from the world, yet a step will bring you into open glades surrounded by perennial borders, with wide and low hawthorn trees making you think of Japan; or another step will bring you to the house itself with its spacious, hospitable rooms and shaded and screened porch.

She uses her porch in the late autumn long after the rest of her neighbors have had to abandon theirs, as she has a huge stone chimney running up one side of it and a wide fireplace wherein good sized logs can burn quite comfortably, though I wonder if it is comfortable for a forest tree to find itself part of a hearth blaze! Sometimes when I see one sizzling and spitting I think it is not as happy as the human beings who sit in front of it, basking in the warmth it throws.

Winnetkans who live on the western border of this suburb have the great privilege of hearing Martinelli's glorious voice float out across the Skokie wastes or perhaps penetrating to some bridge playing group. They say it is as heart stirring as when he sings in the classic groves of Ravinia. It must be quite exquisite.

Beauty That Is Ravinia.

Every week the performances at Ravinia grow in perfection and splendor. Last Tuesday evening's presentation of Offenbach's "Tales of Hoffman" raised this usually tuneful but not particularly interesting opera to the top line of really remarkable performances. Little and young Helen Freund, still just on the threshold of her career, made a perfectly charming Olympia, the doll in the first act, a more than ordinarily difficult rôle, as it takes a young, petite person with a delicate and sweet voice and a keen understanding to carry it out successfully, all of which qualities she manifested that evening. Mlle. Bori was transcendently beautiful and stunning as Giulietta and exquisitely lovely as Antonia. Tokatyan never sang better than he did as Hoffman, the wandering lover. The less important parts were sung and acted in a way to make them of first importance, and a source of delight. Ina Bourskaya, Leon Rothier, Desire De Frore, Giordano Paltrinieri, and Ada Paggi were of an excellence that made one realize we have in the Ravinia company one of those rare achievements, an organization of perfect proportion, wherein the averages is so high that the celebrated artists have to work hard to maintain their supremacy.

After all, the greatest art is having a well balanced company wherein the most insignificant part is as important as the most conspicuous. That we have in the fragrant and lovely groves of Ravinia. It is well worth anybody's trouble to take either the special train on the Northwestern, which is $1 the round trip, or the special on the North Shore electric, which is $1.50 the round trip, in order to spend an evening in open air, listening to the works of the great composers rendered by this matchless company at prices far below anything ever asked for grand opera in this country. In fact, never anywhere else have they given such good opera for such low prices.

Summer Brings Garden Teas.

On the same day as Mrs. Hibbard's garden musical a garden tea was given in one of Lake Forest's fine places. Mr. and Mrs. William V. Kelley invited their friends to meet their two handsome daughters-in-law, Mrs. Russell Kelley and Mrs. Phelps Kelley. The large house was full of flowers and people, and groups of gaily dressed women, and men in summer flannels strolled about the garden and the extensive grounds or sat under the trees looking towards the Skokie. It was a perfect summer afternoon and an open air theater with a sylvan stage, a mirroring pool in front of it, looked as if a band of wood nymphs and satyrs might come out from the green, bosky side scenes and give a Greek masque, with dances and processions to the sound of the pipes of Pan.

The unusually spacious lawns stretched westward to a little lake beyond which distant fields and groves were outlined against the glowing sky.

The house itself has a long façade and a wide terrace on the side overlooking the green lawns, the placid lake, the distant groves, and Samuel Insull's imposing regiment of what their author calls "sentinels of progress," the tall, gaunt structures that carry the electric power and light, so necessary for the entire countryside. These power-carrying pillars are the most animate inanimate objects I ever saw; quite stationary, they yet seem to be striding across the land; made of steel spars and coils, they yet look like stark figures from Mars or some other highly organized planet. One must look at them with an intensely imaginative eye to see their beauty, but even that is possible, and the thought of the difference what they carry makes to life along the north shore, and out to the westward should reconcile the most esthetic to their presence in an otherwise bucolic scene.

Lee Pattison Talks on Music.

Lee Pattison's musical talks which Mrs. A. A. Carpenter, Mrs. Clyde Carr, and a group of other north shore women have organized for the residents of that territory began last Thursday morning, not on Friday, as at first scheduled, and will continue on the next two Thursdays. They are charming and enlightening. Mr. Pattison is one of the most delightful of the recital talkers. Mrs. Carr is hostess for the first two of these events and Mrs. Carpenter for the final one. Both hostesses live in Lake Forest.

The topics of the recitals are: "Dances—Old and New," "The Great Dreamers," and "The Modern World." The patronesses are, besides the two ladies already mentioned, the Mmes. Lester Armour, Arthur Bissell, William G. Hibbard, Annette R. Jones, Louis Laflin, Horace Martin, Everett Millard, John J. Mitchell Jr., Murry Nelson, A. A. Sprague, John W. Scott, Leverett Thompson, and Slason Thompson. It is a distinguished and chic employment for an hour on a summer morning, and one that leaves those who attend these talks the richer in knowledge and understanding of matters musical.

EDITED BY Professor J. ARTHUR THOMSON

CYCLONIC DISTURBANCES.

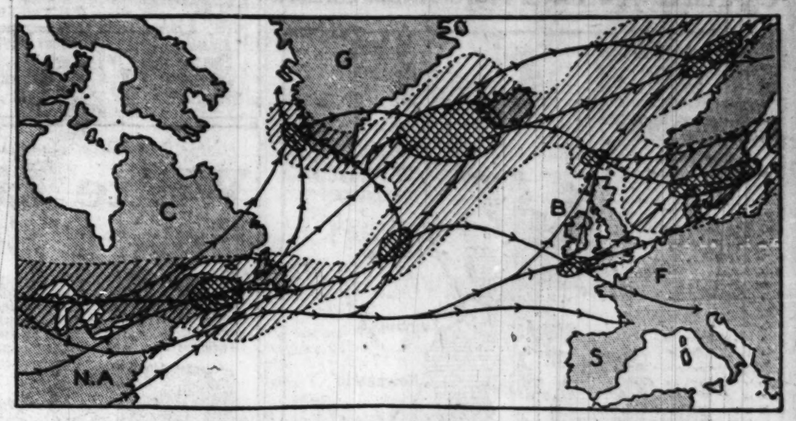
CYCLONES and anticyclones are names familiar to every one who pays attention to weather reports. They are terms applied to those erratic changes which take place within the great general circulation of the atmosphere which has been already described.

Within the tropics sudden sharp revolving storms, known locally as hurricanes, whirlwinds, and typhoons, sometimes spring up and cause immense havoc. These storms usually cover a limited area, and follow well defined tracks. The tornado of the United States often leaves behind it a track about ten miles long and only a few hundred yards wide, but within this track destruction is singularly complete.

In our latitudes, however, the cyclonic disturbances are much more frequent and are not nearly so severe; but they cover a much greater area, being sometimes 1,000 miles in diameter.

The cause of these disturbances has been stated to be due to the irregular heating of the land, and to the rapid ascent of warmed air in the case of the tropical storms. But for those disturbances in our latitudes, the meeting of two great air currents of different temperature has been regarded as the chief cause by some meteorologists; others believe they are due to changes that take place in the temperature of the stratosphere—the upper layer of the atmosphere.

Probably all these causes contribute in some measure towards the production of the differences in pressure that give rise to the violent winds.



STORM TRACK MAP OF THE NORTH ATLANTIC.—The lightly shaded area shows the region of most frequent depressions; the darker areas are favorite points upon which the storms converge, and whence they disperse; while the barbed lines show the general routes they take. B, the British Isles; F, France; S, Spain; G, Greenland; C, Canada; N. A., North America.

Formation of Cyclones.

Now air, as we have seen, tends to flow from high pressure areas towards low pressure ones, just as brooks run down a hill to seek the valley, but this air will, in the northern hemisphere, be deviated towards the right by the effect of the earth's rotation, as already explained, so that a system of large eddies will be set up in the atmosphere and there will be a tendency for the air to circulate round regions of high pressure in a direction similar to that of the hands of a clock, while round low pressure areas the direction will be counter clockwise. All our changes of weather are due to these circulating systems whose names are made familiar in the daily weather forecasts: The "low pressure system," which used always to be termed a "cyclone," is now more commonly referred to as a "low," or a "depression." The high pressure system is spoken of as an "anticyclone" or "high." The anticyclone may be regarded in general as the normal settled weather, while the depression bespeaks bad and usually stormy weather.

The cyclonic depressions form and develop chiefly along a belt which stretches from the great lakes of America across the Atlantic to northwestern Europe, and they are much more numerous in winter than in summer. It is worthy of note that at this season there is extreme cold in central Canada, while the combined influences of the Gulf stream drift and the general southwesterly current of wind across the warm ocean maintain a temperature on the coast of Norway fully 25 degrees Fahrenheit warmer than that found in the Gulf of St. Lawrence, about 1,000 miles farther south. Then there is a cold ocean current streaming down past Labrador from Baffin's bay, and a steady flow of cold air is sweeping from off the ice clad plateau of Greenland. The temperature conditions are therefore complicated and favorable for the development of the depressions. The depressions formed over America move generally northeastward towards Greenland, while those reaching our neighborhood usually commence out on the Atlantic, and either skirt our islands in a northeasterly direction towards northern Norway or move across them on an easterly course to the Baltic.

From THE OUTLINE of SCIENCE Edited by Prof. J. Arthur Thomson

HOW THE ANNUAL RAINFALL IS DISTRIBUTED IN THE BRITISH ISLES.—The prevailing moist southwesterly wind and the mountainous regions in our islands combine to make our west coasts much better than our east coasts.

into the atmosphere manifests itself in many forms other than rain. All the clouds are due to it, for they are nothing but aggregations of excessively minute droplets of water or crystals of ice, that have condensed out of the air because the latter has become too cool to retain them in the form of water vapor. Our skies are seldom without a cloud; we watch them with ever fresh wonderment and curiosity.

The forms of clouds are endless and ever changing, but there are certain characteristics which allow them to be grouped roughly into several classes. There are the thin feathery lines and bands of cirrus, commonly called "mares' tails," floating nearly five miles high; these are formed of ice crystals and give rise to many beautiful sights in the sky, such as the wide "rings" round sun and moon, called halos. Somewhat lower are the "speckled," "mackerel," and "dappled" skies of cirro-cumulus and alto-cumulus, the most beautiful of all clouds; we see a wonderful arrangement of orderly and serried ranks. Between broad, straight, parallel bands of snowy white cloud we have a multitudinous sea of little wavy rippling cloudlets. These often show close "rings" of rainbow colors (coronæ) round sun and moon, and they are generally seen during a spell of fine weather. In place of these types there is sometimes seen the "watery" sky, known as alto-stratus, a greasy gray sky with a patch of pallid light where the sun or moon may be dimly showing; this sky usually follows after the appearance of mare's tail cirrus in front of a depression and is practically always succeeded by rain.

Thunderstorm and Hail.

Lower still, about a mile high, we see the great rolling masses of clouds heaped up in the sky which are called the cumulus, the ordinary domed "woolpack" clouds of the summer sky; they are the dark clouds with the silver lining; the cloud is due to moisture carried upwards by ascending air currents which have been warmed by contact with the ground. Here we have also the heavy gray ragged pall of nimbus—the rain cloud. The gigantic cumulo-nimbus or "thunder cloud" may sometimes grow till it becomes three miles deep from summit to base! It is simply a dense rain cloud of the cumulus form. It is very unstable and is the source of all our heavy showers of rain and hail in the summer months. Often it is accompanied by storms of thunder and lightning, the latter caused by the disruptive discharge of the electricity that has accumulated upon the raindrops in the cloud, and the former being the audible effect of the discharge. Light travels nearly a million times as fast as sound, and therefore we see the lightning before we hear the thunder; both are, of course, actually simultaneous. Lightning flashes may take place between cloud and earth, and also from cloud to cloud.

There are many clouds in other parts of the world which we have not portrayed here. There is not always a simple answer to the question, why they do this, and why they do that.

The huge cloud which overhangs a volcano (Humboldt's volcanic cloud) as it rolls in huge masses, with the lightning flashing through it, sometimes descends to earth with violence, and rolls down the mountain side with a velocity for which neither gravitation nor wind can account. It so moves because it is attracted to the earth, by the direct action of its high electrical charge. In various degrees similar electrical phenomena doubtless play their part in the movements of more ordinary clouds. Again, the gossamer threads of cirrus clouds, the highest clouds of all, sometimes run crisscross in complex entanglement, and do other things which wind, or wind alone, is not enough to account for. The puzzles which the clouds set us, one way and another, are endless, and our study of them, like that of so many other interesting things in the world, has only begun.

Cause of Mists and Fogs.

When warm air blows over cold sea the air becomes chilled in contact with the cold water; the water vapor in the air then condenses out as fog, which is thus really a layer of cloud resting on the earth's surface. In somewhat similar manner, the rapid cooling of the land on a clear night gives rise to valley mist and dew. In winter time, when condensation takes place below the freezing point, we have falls of sleet or snow in place of rain, and hoar frost instead of dew forms on the ground, while a warm wind setting in suddenly after a hard frost may cover trees and walls with a glassy coating of ice.

Large hailstones, if examined, often prove to be built up of several distinct layers of ice, due to the fact that they are carried up and down many times by the powerful vertical currents of air in the cloud from which they fall, and by this process they receive successive additions of water which become frozen when the hailstone again reaches the higher regions of the cloud.

The atmosphere everywhere contains dust in suspension. Sand blown from the desert, salt from the ocean spray, soot from factory chimneys, ashes hurled from volcanoes, the debris of meteorites, and pollen from the flowers all contribute to form the veil that lies between us and the sun. Were it not for these dust particles in the atmosphere we should never see those gorgeous color effects that delight the eye. Our asure skies would be almost as black as they are at night, and we should see the sun and stars shining with undimmed luster; for it is really the dust that produces the lovely limpid blue of the sky. The floating dust particles are exceedingly minute, especially those found in the upper air; they scatter the blue light rays from the sun, and thus cause the sky to assume the color that it does.

Color in Clouds; the Aurora.

The soft shimmering light of twilight is merely the lingering illumination by the sun of the dust particles in the Weigle, Yale university; Dr. Benjamin S. Winchester, former editor of the Congregational Publishing society, and the Rev. Erwin L. Shaver of the Congregational Education society.

NEWS OF THE RELIGIOUS WORLD

South Shore temple, is touring Palestine and Europe. During his absence Friday evening services are being maintained. Rabbi David Rosenbaum and visiting rabbis are officiating.

The Moody Bible institute reports it has sent 1,294 of its students to the foreign mission field and that 959 of the number are now at work. Moody students are serving under fifty-seven different societies and boards. The fields having the largest number of representatives are: Africa, 241; China, 264; India, 149; Japan, 55; Korea, 31, and South America, 65. In addition to those named there are thirty-one other countries in which former students are at work. It is said the Moody institute sends more missionaries to the foreign field than any other single institution in the world.

A summer assembly under Baptist auspices will be held at Alton, Ill., beginning next Saturday and continuing until August 1. A similar conference was held at Mt. Carroll, Ill., June 20-27.

The committee of Fifteen, authorized by the Presbyterian General assembly at Columbus, Ohio, to present a plan for allaying unrest occasioned in the denomination by the fundamentalist-modernist controversy, and for harmonizing differences in interpretation of the rights of the general assembly as to creedal standards for entrance to the ministry, has been announced by Dr. Charles R. Erdman, moderator. The membership is:

Ministers—The Rev. H. C. Swearingen, St. Paul, chairman; the Rev. Alfred H. Barr, Chicago; the Rev. Hugh T. Kerr, Pittsburgh; the Rev. Mark A. Matthews, Seattle; the Rev. Lapsley A. MacAfee, Berkeley, Cal.; the Rev. Harry C. Rogers, Kansas City; the Rev. W. O. Thompson, Columbus, Ohio; the Rev. Edgar W. Work, New York City.

Laymen: John T. M. Finney, M. D., Baltimore; Judge J. H. De Witt, Nashville; Edward D. Duffield, Newark, N. J.; C. A. Herrick, Philadelphia; Judge Nelson Loomis, Omaha; Judge Nathan Moore, Oak Park, Ill.; and Dr. Robert E. Speer, New York City. The committee will report to the general assembly which meets in Baltimore next May.

Retreats for Catholic laymen at Mays Lake, near Hinsdale, Ill., are now in progress. They are sponsored by the Knights of Columbus, but men who are not members of the order will be received at any time. At each retreat there are accommodations for thirty men. Illinois and Joliet, Ill., council closes its retreat today. Next Thursday to Sunday, Dowling and Hennepin councils will be represented; July 30-Aug. 2, Ravenswood and Barry councils. The schedule continues to Sept. 20.

The first of a series of conventions offered Chicago by a laymen's committee will be held in Rogers Park at Lunt avenue and Clark street beginning at 8 o'clock tonight. The Rogers Park Ministerial association has indorsed the campaign and will coöperate in a union service this evening. The program will continue for six days with four sessions daily. There will be a children's hour in the morning and afternoon meeting at 2:30 for parents. At 7 o'clock there will be rallies of Boy Scouts, young people, men's Bible classes and Sunday school officers and teachers. The closing session at 8 o'clock nightly will be a mass meeting with a patriotic and religious address.

This Chicago Committee of Christian laymen has undertaken a city-wide campaign for the summer months with an appeal to various communities of the city to consider the responsibility of families to the neighborhood in which they live. A series of eight conventions will be held in tents.

The convention will be conducted with the coöperation of the Christian Family Crusade, with the Rev. William Matthew Holderby as general director. The Rogers Park Kiwanis club and the Rogers Park Business Men's association are sponsoring it in their local community.

Varied Activities of Women

Under the Swiss federal factory act, any woman who has household responsibilities may request a Saturday half-holiday, and her employer must grant the request.

In being elected to life membership in the National Academy of Science, Miss Florence Sabin of Central City, Colo., is accorded the highest honor ever won by her sex.

According to Dr. Nellie B. Cooper, president of the American Cosmetians' society, American women spend more than $5,000,000 daily for beautification purposes.

Not to be outdone by her three brothers, all of whom are lawyers, Miss Grace E. Smith, an Oregon girl, took up the same profession and now is assistant attorney general of that state.

The Baltimore Federation of Democratic Women has put its official stamp of disapproval on the nomination of women candidates for office of governor of Maryland.

ART AND ARTISTS

"Morning," by Frederick F. Fursman, is part of the one-man show of his work now on view in the east wing galleries of the Art institute. The summer exhibits, of which Mr. Fursman's exhibition is part, opened last Wednesday, and will not close until far into September.

Summer Reflected in Latest Exhibits at Art Institute

A summer day, with cloudless skies
And sun that from a chalice pours
A golden threnody of light
Where roses scent secretive doors—

A summer day and doors that stand
Wide open to the mingled sweet
Of honeysuckle and of pine
And scampering of tiny feet.

A summer day—and then a moon
That rises over pointed trees
Like a huge lantern trailed by stars—
Thank God for days and nights like these! E. J.

By Eleanor Jewett.

THE days of summer slip away, golden sands falling through a reluctant glass, marked in their going by the scarlet of sunset, the crimson of sunrise, the black of sudden storm, and the soft dusk of twilight deepening into night, with the stars and the moon alive in a fathomless, boundless sky. Woods and waters, birds and flowers embroider exquisite patterns for the days of summer to wear. Each similar to the other, but none alike. Beauty, sheer, unadulterated beauty, summer at her best, shorn of the imperfections of winter, free from noise and rapid motion, from smells and loud, raucous strangulations of saxophones, summer alone—she may be found if you have the heart and will to seek her out.

Representations of some of the loveliest bits from a diary of summer are to be seen in the exhibitions of work by various artists which opened last Wednesday in the east wing galleries of the Art institute. There is so much of beauty and interest crammed into those rooms that the temptation is great to wait upon the exhibits in turn, visiting this today and that tomorrow, skipping this gallery entirely for a week or so and then discovering it suddenly with undiminished excitement. For there is an excitement to this hunt for pictures to enjoy. It is an excitement that grows with feeding. Well have the tables been spread for the summer visitors to the Art institute!

There is the gallery shared by Jessie Arms Botke and her husband, Cornelius Botke, to mention but one, and a second is that shared by the paintings of Wellington J. Reynolds and of Anna Lynch. The greatest surprise and the greatest excitement and the greatest pleasure, to my mind, among these several artists, were stirred and stimulated and aroused to fever heat by the remarkable certainty and beauty in the paintings by Anna Lynch. For so long a time has Miss Lynch allowed herself to be thought of primarily as a miniaturist and secondly as a painter of flower still lifes, that it comes as a shock to realize her ability as a painter of landscape and sea.

She shares a gallery, as was mentioned above, with Mr. Reynolds, and she completely eclipses him in this exhibit. Full of the knowledge that Mr. Reynolds has received extraordinary honors in the Paris salon this spring and amply aware of the fact that he ranks high in the list of Chicago painters, one goes to this exhibit with a mind tuned to accept only Mr. Reynolds' work. And then Miss Lynch turns the tables. She refuses to be set one side as superfluous. She commands instant attention. She arouses from canvas to canvas active admiration, quick respect for her control of her medium, wonder at the insight that has given her the key to these beauty spots she has transplanted, and eager, eager interest in every detail of her work.

Mr. Reynolds, on his side of the gallery, presents a striking portrait of a woman, not entirely attractive, and a number of beautifully and placidly painted scenes of cloud and sun effect upon a lake. These struck a reminiscent note at first sight. Several summers ago Mr. Reynolds took a vast amount of pleasure in going each evening to the shore of the little lake near which he was vacationing, and painting it from approximately the same spot, but with the variations caused by the variations in the weather. The results were extremely satisfying and charming. One of them hangs on a wall in my house, and I would not give it up for a good deal.

Evidently the present exhibit of his work at the Art institute was, part of it, painted in a similar inquiring spirit. What will today bring forth? You will find coolness and beauty in the replies. Some of the pictures must have been bits of the shore waters of Lake Michigan; others are, apparently, glimpses of the wooded banks of a smaller lake. They are all possessed with the spirit of beauty, the beauty, rather idle and not excessive, that is found in vacation hours and an amusing comedy of professionalism, a play at work.

Willis P. McCauley of the architectural school of the Armour Institute of Technology, with architectural class rooms in the Art institute, has just been awarded a medal for general excellence in the four year term, by the American Institute of Architects.

From the battlefields of France, where Dudley Crafts Watson of the museum extension department and his caravan of tourists, are now doing their bit in judicious sightseeing, comes the remark from Mr. Watson that this is "a terrifying and unbeautiful experience."

From THE OUTLINE OF SCIENCE

higher regions of the atmosphere, and the many beautiful spectacles seen at sunrise and sunset are also due to the diffraction and scattering of the light rays from the sun. The dust particles and water droplets in the atmosphere have the power of scattering first the blue violet and then the green components of white light, and so causing the light to change through yellow into red. The glorious tints of the rainbow are due to the reflection and refraction of the rays of light from the sun by the drops of rain, which act like tiny prisms and break up the white light into the rays of varied colors of which sunlight is really composed.

But no appearance in our skies can vie in mystery and delicate beauty with the aurora, whose shimmering rays of yellow-green, rose, or crimson light at times transfigure the starlit skies of winter. The aurora occurs some fifty miles up in our atmosphere, and is generally regarded as being due to electrical rays of the nature of the cathode rays which are given out by the sun in greatest quantity at the times of sun spot maxima. The frequency of aurorae, of sun spots, and of magnetic storms within the earth show a sympathetic connection with each other, and are in all probability due to the same original cause. Contrary to general belief, the aurora does not presage stormy weather.

Weather Lore.

A good deal of traditional weather lore is familiar to most people, and part of it, at all events, has some scientific basis. There are certain cloud developments, such as those associated with a depression, and which have been already described, that are really accurate guides to coming changes of weather, and there are many reliable maxims in use by sailors, as for instance:

If the wind backs against the sun,
Trust it not, for back it will run, a saying that is quite justified by the behavior of the wind before a coming cyclone. Such proverbs are based on experience and are capable of scientific explanation. Another adage that "a rainbow in the morning is the shepherd's warning" is also accurate, for it implies that if showers are falling as early as morning time they are likely to continue most of the day; and this is very likely to be the case, for the rising air currents that form the shower clouds are not usually effective enough to cause showers until the afternoon. Therefore, if showers are already falling in the forenoon, they are not likely to cease before evening, and may even continue to fall during night time.

Halos round the sun and moon are in the majority of cases followed by stormy weather, because the cloud sheet of ice crystals, in which the halos are produced by the refraction and reflection of the light rays by the crystals, is always found in front of a depression, though it may also occur without the presence of a depression.

Other maxims, again, have considerable value in some localities, but are inaccurate in others. In mountain districts the cloud-cap that forms on the mountain tops is often used as an indication of the coming weather.

Statements regarding the stormy presage of a red sky in the morning, or of the happy augury of a gray dawn, are not always trustworthy, for their accuracy depends entirely upon the meteorological situation, and a good deal of expert knowledge is required before such signs can be correctly interpreted.

But, on the other hand, some "proverbs" are quite unworthy of serious attention. The effect of the new moon upon the weather, so widely believed in, has been investigated and found to be nonexistent. The belief that six weeks of daily rain will follow a wet St. Swithin's day is equally absurd, for the common occurrence of more frequent rain after that date is due merely to the seasonal change, from the dry early summer to the much wetter late summer and early autumn, to which our islands are subject.

But the old maxims provide a very interesting study, as those can testify who have read the volume on "Weather Lore," compiled by Richard Inwards.

Studebaker's USED CAR PLEDGE

Under our new Certified Used Car policy a child can select a good used car just as easily as an expert mechanic.

Here's our pledge, in co-operation with Studebaker Corporation of America to eliminate all guesswork and gamble in used car buying:
—to mark the price plainly on each used car, and to have one price to all.
—to allow five days' trial on Certified Used Cars. Then, if the purchaser is not satisfied, he may return the car and apply the money paid as credit on any car in stock.
—to give a 30 day guarantee with each Certified Used Car, which means free adjustments and the replacement of all defective parts.
—to tell frankly all facts about a car; its mileage, age, and mechanical condition.

Every used car must be honestly presented: sold for just what it is. We will not dicker or match wits. We have some cars that are suitable only for used car dealers, or mechanics who can make the necessary adjustments. These cars are listed elsewhere on this page and will be sold to used car dealers or mechanics only.

You can buy from us with confidence. We consider the used car as a legitimate article of merchandise and sell it in a businesslike way.

Here's some, see 100 others.

JORDAN

WILLYS SAINTE CLAIRE SPORT TOURING. We do not believe this automobile should really be classed as a "used car; its condition does not warrant calling it such; mechanically it could not be improved upon and can be depended to render high class service for a long period of time; strikingly beautiful with its new finish of Battleship Gray with disc wheels to match; equipment is most complete and in keeping with the rest of the car; the circumstances surrounding the sale of this car permit us to offer it at a low figure; price $1,000.

1925 WILLYS-KNIGHT COUPE, 2 PASS. After receiving only 4,474 miles of service traded to us in new car condition. The finish is the standard two-color color, interior shows no signs of use, and equipment includes 5 balloon tires, 2 bumpers, motometer and rear visor, mirror, cowl ventilator, wind shield spotlight, stoplight, snubbers, etc. This virtually new car can be bought at $1,400.

JORDAN TOURING, VERY LATE 1923. A rebuilt, new appearing, perfectly balanced 5 passenger that will make some family a real buy. Refinished Crane-Simplex Gray, black fenders, top, upholstery A1, 5 good tires, snubbers, motometer, spotlight, etc. Has big power and easy riding with low upkeep. Carries the "Mark of Jordan Service" and guaranteed on same basis as new Jordans. $1,000.

JORDAN 4 DOOR SPORT BROUGHAM, 1924 SERIES. No more comfortable closed car for touring than this Jordan sport brougham exists. This one particularly attractive because of its new Crane-Simplex Gray finish and complete appointments. Interior like new. Has trunk, motometer, squeegee, mirror, snubbers, windshield spotlight and 5 almost new cord tires. We have rebuilt the motor and chassis and back it with our new car guarantee. Carries the "Mark of Jordan Service" and guaranteed. $1,700.

JORDAN 1925 GREAT LINE EIGHT SEDAN, 5 PASS. This car was used by an official of this company and driven only a short distance. It would be difficult to distinguish it from new in any particular. Has 5 balloon tires, 4 wheel hydraulic brakes, 2 bumpers, motometer, and much other equipment. Our guarantee to save better than $700. Price, $2,600.

REAL ESTATE NEWS

COUNTY FOREST PRESERVES NOW 29,380 ACRES

Commissioners to Speed Up Buying.

BY AL CHASE.

With only 5,620 more acres to acquire before the Cook County Forest preserves reach their temporary maximum of 35,000 acres, now allowed by law, the commissioners announce they intend to step on the gas in their buying program and force stalling owners to come to terms quickly or have their property condemned.

According to Frank H. Landmesser, real estate clerk for the forest preserve commissioners, the county to date has expended $13,669,948 for land and improvements.

Purchases Year by Year.

Following is a table of yearly acre purchases since the forest preserve commission got under way:

1916	1,316	acres
1917	8,477	"
1918	3,662	"
1919	1,585	"
1920	3,587	"
1921	3,487	"
1922	3,281	"
1923	1,804	"
1924	1,551	"

It is understood that when the 35,000 acres authorized by the state are purchased, steps will be taken at once to allow Cook county to buy many thousand acres more.

It was thought years ago that 35,000 acres would be more than enough for the outer belt of forest parks. No one at that time dreamed that the preserves would become the popular playground of such a gigantic throng of Chicago motorists and also the camping ground of so many thousand touring automobilists as it has.

Must Plan for Huge Metropolis.

So as the 35,000 acre goal nears, the commissioners realize more and more that to care for a future city of ten or twenty million, forest preserves of 100,000 to 150,000 acres are needed and should be provided as fast as possible.

Many improvements, at present held in abeyance because the buying program is considered most important, are to be added later on. For instance, a great concrete drive, several times wider than the present narrow, inadequate state roads, is contemplated to link up the entire outer belt of preserves.

May Follow Boston's Example.

It is pointed out that Boston's magnificent forest preserves, which were acquired several decades before Chicago even bought an acre, are connected with a metropolitan parkway system as fine as any of Chicago's city boulevards. This should be done in Cook county and probably will eventually.

There are several broken links in the chain of preserves surrounding the city, which cannot be mended through the purchase of tsrips of woodland, owing to intervening cemeteries or towns.

At these points, wide concrete boulevards, it is pointed out, could be constructed which would knit the preserves into one continuous park.

New Buying System to be Speedy.

In the new system of buying the commissioners will send letters to all owners whose property is needed, giving them ten days to come in and submit their land for sale. If after due time the owners still hang back condemnation proceeding will be promptly started.

The commission yesterday bought forty acres in Bremen township at the northeast corner of Batchelor Grove road and 143d, at $500 an acre; also thirteen acres in Proviso, south of 22d and east of Mannheim road, from the American Company Volunteers association of Chicago, at $1,700 an acre.

Realtors Still Looking for Place to Hold Outing

Postmaster Arthur C. Lueder, chairman of the outing committee of the Chicago Real Estate board, admits he's having a hard time to find a place for holding the 1926 outing of the board.

"I'll be glad to hear from the owner of any place in Chicago or vicinity capable of providing proper facilities for the entertainment and recreation of approximately 300 men," he said yesterday. "We hope to have the outing about the middle of September."

Store and Flat Building for 75th and Bennett Ave.

A syndicate headed by David Silbert is having plans drawn by Architect A. L. Salzman for a $225,000 three story building, 134x114, to be erected at the northeast corner of 75th and Bennett. It will have five stores and twenty-one flats. Work will start in about a month, with completion date set for the spring of 1926. The Capitol Bond and Mortgage company has underwritten a $145,000 bond issue.

BUYS SITE FOR COAL YARD.

George W. Ford and Reuben J. Parker have bought 305x248 on the west side of Loomis, 650 feet south of 26th, from the Cooper Lumber company, for an indicated $110,500, and will use it as a coal yard. This adjoins 183,000 square feet they bought five years ago. D. L. Madden and C. R. Webster were attorneys.

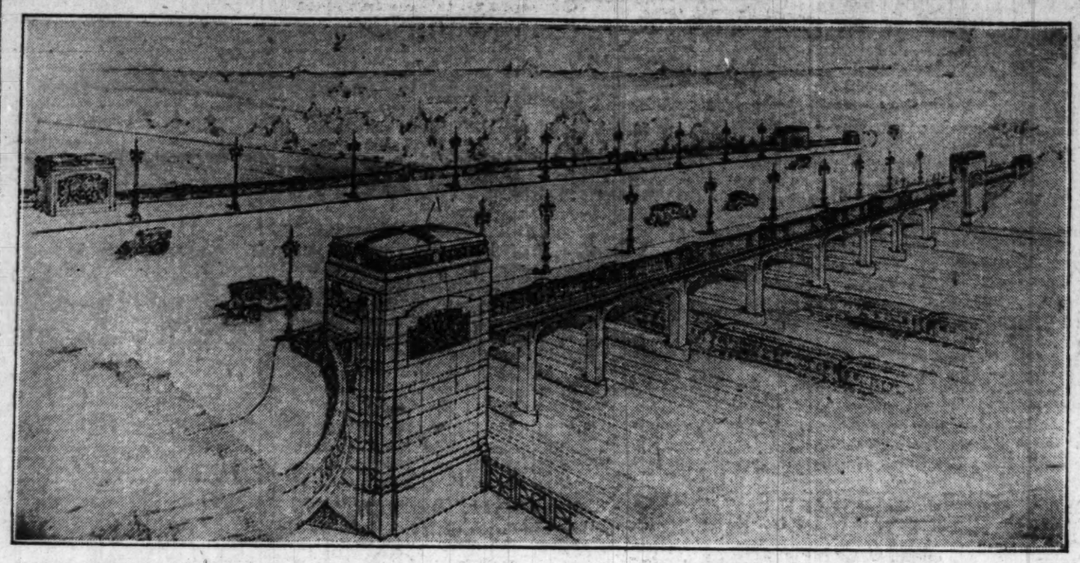
HOWARD STREET DEAL.

Edward G. Bunker, attorney, has sold the three stores at 1332 Howard street, 32x100, to Louise Goode for a reported $75,000, subject to $27,650. D. V. Ferguson & Co. were brokers.

BUYS GARDENER-SOUTH FLATS.

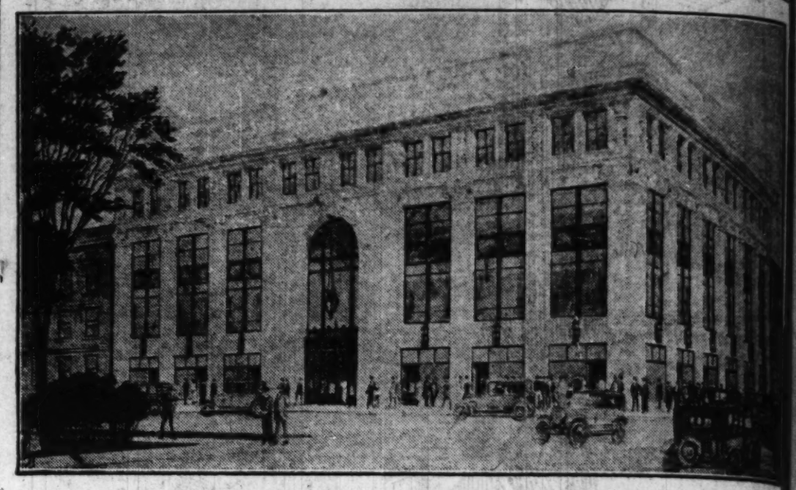
Adolph Rodgmin has purchased the twenty-four flats at the southwest corner of Calumet and 50th, lot 100x108, from Richard A. Gullick, for $130,000, subject to $60,100.

How New South Parkway Viaduct Will Look When Completed



This is how the new South parkway viaduct over the I. C. tracks at 23d street will look when completed. This structure, designed by T. L. Condron and C. L. Post of the engineering firm of Condron & Post, is said to be the most advanced example in this country of the "continuous girder" principle, with girders 290 feet in length, extending over three ninety-seven foot spans. There are eighteen continuous steel girders supported on thirty-six rigid and twenty-four rocker columns and two abutment piers, all carried on concrete caissons extending down to bedrock, about seventy feet below lake level. The embellishments of the structure, including the pylons, balustrades, and finials, were designed by Eugene C. Fisher, consulting architect, and are being carried out in ornamental stone.

At Orrington and Davis, Evanston



This is the new bank and Commercial building now being erected at the northeast corner of Davis street and Orrington avenue, Evanston, by the State Bank and Trust company, from plans by Childs & Smith, at an estimated cost of $750,000. The bank will occupy the second floor, leaving the first floor for shops. There'll be offices on the mezzanine and fourth floors.

The unit now under construction is at the north end of the lot and is part of the old site of Lord's department store. During its construction the bank will continue in the present structure on the corner. Frank J. Scheidenhelm is president of the bank and William A. Dyche, business manager of Northwestern university, is chairman of the board.

Gold Coast's Newest Hotel—the Eitel

Architect Louis Guenzel designed the above Hotel Eitel, to be erected by Eitel, Inc., composed of Max and Robert J. Eitel, who operate the Northwestern terminal restaurants and also are owners of the Marigold Garden. It will be at the northwest corner of Cass and Delaware on a lot 100x80. More is told about this project in a nearby column.

HOTEL EITEL TO BE 19 STORIES INSTEAD OF 16

New Hostelry to Have 350 Rooms.

Since the original announcement that Robert J. and Max Eitel, comprising Eitel, Inc., were going to erect a Gold Coast hotel at the northwest corner of Delaware place and Cass street the project has been enlarged. Architect Louis Guenzel announced last night that instead of the originally planned sixteen or seventeen story hotel the two Eitel brothers have decided to make it nineteen stories high. This means it will have 350 rooms instead of 310.

The Hotel Eitel will have artificial ventilation in every room in the hotel, something unusual in Chicago hoteldom. Every room will have a bath.

Lobby to Be Tiny.

There'll be a lounging room on the nineteenth floor. The restaurant will be on the first floor. There'll be a tiny lobby also on the main floor.

Mr. Guenzel, one of the few Chicago architects who believe in having all outside walls of the same material, has designated a structure which will be of granite on the first floor, stone on the second and face brick above. All decorations will be in terra cotta and will be carried around the entire building.

No Shacks on the Roof.

Another feature which Mr. Guenzel will emphasize, and one almost always ignored by local architects, will be the incorporation of the roof penthouses into the architectural ensemble. They usually form an unsightly group of shacks on the roof—the most conspicuous part of the building.

The Hotel Eitel will be ready for guests about Aug. 1, 1926, according to Mr. Guenzel.

Special Tribune Tower Edition

"The Gothic cathedral is a blossoming in stone subdued by man's insatiable demand for harmony. The mountain of stone blooms into an eternal flower, with the lightness and delicate finish, as well as the aerial proportions and perspective of floral beauty." —Emerson.

"Majestic ... Beautiful ... without a Peer!"

TRIBUNE TOWER stands on an avenue of temples, majestic, beautiful, without a peer!

Here is a flower in stone and steel, of perfect architectural beauty.* Know this, that Tribune Tower was built without thought of cost. The best materials procurable anywhere in the world went into its making, because it was meant to stand forever . . . we have gone to Canada for flawless granite, to Italy for incomparable marble, to Mexico for rich dark mahogany, and the forests of America have furnished their lustrous black walnut. Solid bronze is here, such as the doges lavished on their Venetian palaces . . . and hand-forged wrought iron of which medieval craftsmen could be proud.

Those executives who secure offices in Tribune Tower can refer to their business location with the same justifiable pride with which they refer to the community in which they live, to the school which their children attend, the country club to which they belong and the fine car which they drive.

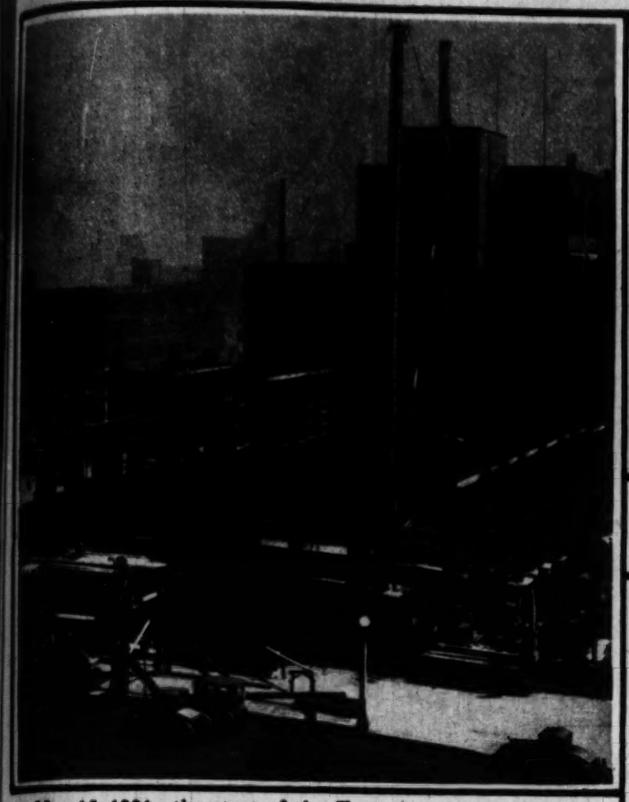
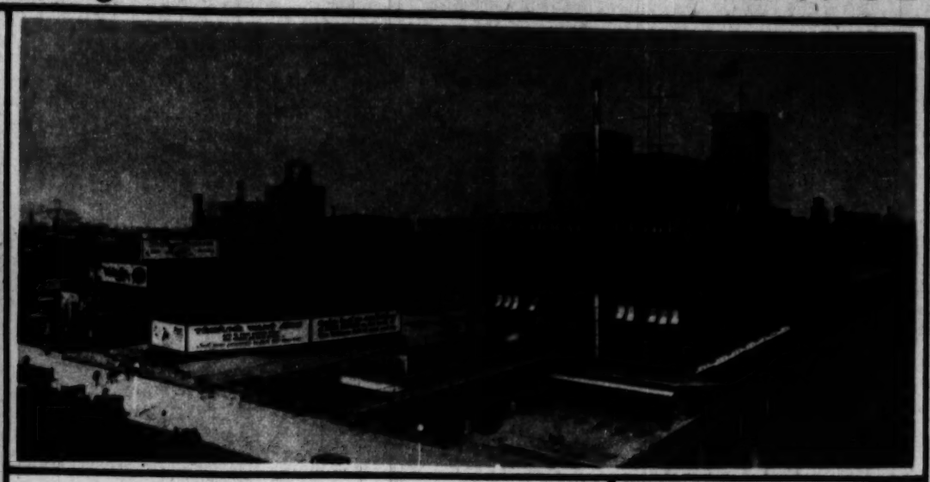
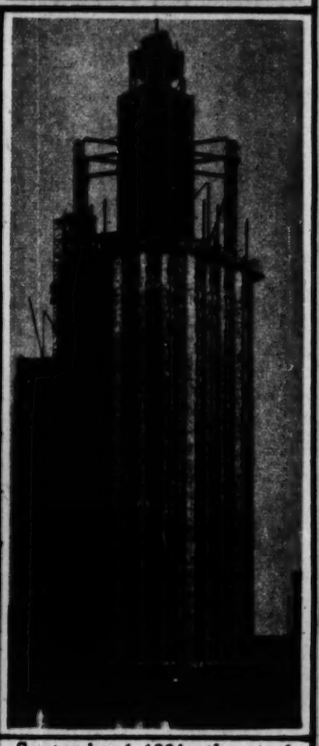
A Picture Story of Tribune Tower Construction



May 15, 1924—the start of the Tower's great steel cage. The caisson foundations are sunk 110 feet below lake level to bed rock.

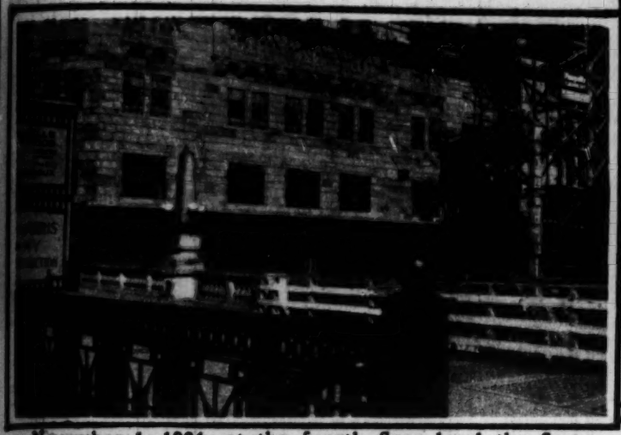


The site of Tribune Tower before ground was broken for the present structure. Note The Tribune plant in the background.

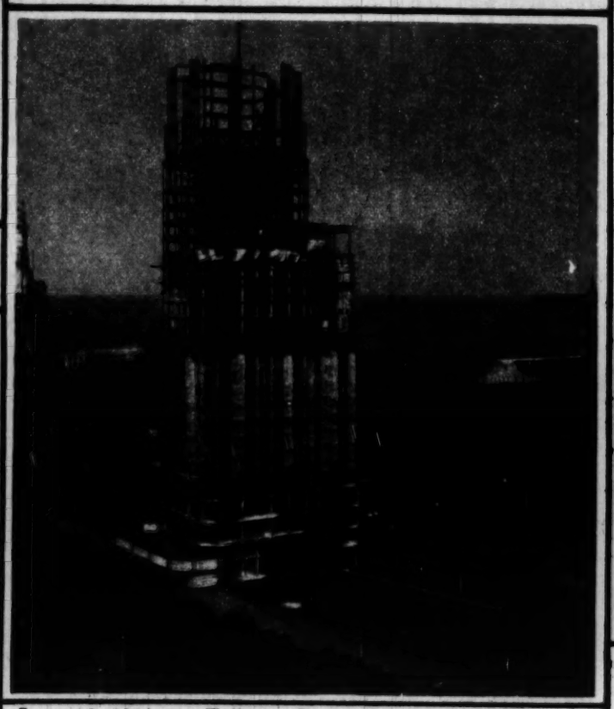


September 1, 1924—the steel framework is complete to the topmost point, 476 feet above the Michigan avenue street level; and the giant flagpole soars far above the city.

Today—The World's Most Beautiful Office Building, Tribune Tower; a triumph of architecture, and an important step in the development of Chicago—and the north central business district.



November 1, 1924—at the fourth floor level the first ornamental decorations, consisting of a series of symbolical grotesques, have been created in stone.



June 15, 1924—as Tribune Tower begins to assume proportions. Here you see the Indiana limestone in variegated shades of gray, placed from the fourth to the twelfth floor level.

A Superhuman Elevator

A great structure such as the new home of The Chicago Tribune proves that vertical transportation is as vital to man's comfort as surface transportation. To meet the demands of its Up and Down traffic The Chicago Tribune has installed in its Tower Building the latest product of the Otis Elevator Company—the SIGNAL CONTROL ELEVATOR.

Seventy-one years of continuous designing and manufacturing have achieved an elevator which can be operated almost without the aid of human hands. The exacting requirements of a building of the magnitude of The Tribune Tower make it imperative that the elevator service be of the highest type, both in quality and quantity. The high-speed, intensive-service cars installed by the Otis Elevator Company are provided with time-saving devices that eliminate, as much as possible, the uncertain elements of the human mind, substituting a mechanism which is superior to, and more certain than, the human mind.

As its name implies, this most up-to-date of elevators runs automatically under a system of signal control. Safety, speed, and service are its chief attributes.

When a passenger enters one of The Tribune Building Signal Control Elevators he is requested to announce his floor. The uniformed attendant immediately presses a button on a metal tablet bearing the corresponding number. The process is repeated with each new arrival.

The car is ready to begin its upward journey. A slight movement of the attendant's hand releases a lever which he pushes back. This motion sets the doors in action. They close swiftly and simultaneously, automatically starting the elevator. As if by magic the elevator cage mounts.

The elevator approaches the first floor for which the signal has been given. It automatically slows down. The micro drive brings it level with the floor while the doors are sliding back, so that they are wide open when it reaches the landing, permitting the passenger to alight with the greatest ease and—speed! That it may proceed, the attendant again initiates the closing of the doors, and so the elevator continues until all its passengers have been discharged at their respective destinations. What is true of the ascending is true of the descending trip.

The Signal Control Elevator stops and levels itself. The hard-driven business man has been spared the nuisance of being carried past his floor and the aggravation of stubbing his toe, for this extraordinary car (which appears to be, and is, run by an unseen power) never "inches" and always comes to a standstill flush with the landing.

The Otis Micro Drive with which the car is equipped is responsible for the self-leveling feature of the Signal Control Elevator. When an Up or a Down car enters the Micro-Zone the main operation is automatically cut off, and the Micro-Drive brings it to the landing. In this zone the great speed at which the elevator travels—under ordinary circumstances 800 feet a minute—is reduced.

To the passenger the transition from fast to slow is practically imperceptible—he notices only that he has never before been in an elevator that runs so smoothly. The Unit Multi-Voltage Control with which the main motor is equipped insures uniform acceleration and retardation.

So much for the passengers within the car—what of those without? On every landing there are the customary signal buttons and indicator lights. An Up or Down button is pressed. The message is conveyed to the elevator, not to the attendant, who remains in ignorance of it. Without any fuss it stops at the landing and, in a fashion most hospitable, opens its doors and admits the waiting one or ones.

A Signal Control Elevator never neglects a passenger. It is impossible for it to run by a floor from which it has received a signal, unless the attendant, seeing he has a capacity load, bypasses his calls to the elevator immediately behind him, which automatically picks them up.

Those who travel in the Signal Control Elevators of The Tribune Building are protected by every safety device known to the art of elevator construction. The electrical and mechanical safeties with which they are equipped are those which for years have made vertical travel in Otis Elevators safer than any other form of transportation.

Drains in Seven Seconds Easy to Keep Clean

IN the new Tribune Tower there are 587 Crane Idalia lavatories of twice-fired vitreous china. They were chosen for the same reasons that would lead you to prefer them. In addition to their beauty and convenience, they are easy to keep clean.

Lift the Securo waste fixture, for instance, and the Idalia basin will drain in seven seconds. The water rushes out so fast that dirt and soap have little time to settle and the basin thus is kept clean. This direct-lift Securo fixture has no levers to wear or get out of order.

The twice-fired vitreous china of which the Idalia is made has the same smooth surfaces as a china dish. And it is as easy to keep clean.

Crane plumbing and heating materials are sold by responsible contractors in many styles at prices within reach of all. Come to the Crane Exhibit Rooms and see our unusual display of fixtures in interesting model bathrooms.

Beauty Everlasting

BACK in the dim pre-historic past, mankind used stone when building for permanence. It has ever been a factor in the forward march of civilization.

Across the page of time is being written a new chapter in the Story of Stone. It tells how the most distinctive buildings in this country are being constructed of limestone from the great quarries around Bedford and Bloomington, Indiana. From Maine to California, from the Canadian border to Texas, the entire nation looks to this district for its building stone.

Indiana Limestone has also been shipped to England, France, South America, Cuba and Japan, and has been carried by dog-sled and canoe into the frozen regions of the Arctic Circle. No other building stone has such wide-spread distribution.

Illustrations show a few of the fine Indiana Limestone buildings erected in Chicago, wherein beauty of design and structural soundness are united with longevity. Time will only enhance their grandeur.

Interesting Facts About Indiana Limestone

Indiana Limestone is a Natural Stone —not a manufactured product. It is a fine, even-textured, non-crystalline limestone obtainable in colors — Buff, Gray, and Variegated. The Variegated, with its subtle play of colors, is a singularly beautiful blending of Buff and Gray. Indiana Limestone has the peculiar quality of hardening on exposure to the air, assuring unequalled durability, and is the lowest in cost of all building stones.

The massive deposit forming the ledges in the hills of Southern Indiana from which this easily-worked, yet durable and permanent stone is quarried, constitutes the largest and the most useful of building stone deposits in the world. More than twenty-five million dollars have been invested in its development. It constitutes a solid sheet of stone sixty miles long, five miles wide and seventy feet deep—sufficient to supply the nation's building needs for centuries.

What a golden opportunity lies ahead of the architect!

THE WORLD'S GREATEST NEWSPAPER

July 19, 1925

A CAMERA MAN FLIRTED WITH DEATH to get this closeup of the tornado that wrought destruction in David City, Neb., and was rewarded by an awesome study of the terror of the air. The regular outline of the long funnel belies its deadliness. Whirling with an ominous roar, it swept down on the earth with express train speed, and left ruin in the countryside wherever it touched.

SIX HUNDRED FEET UNDER THE SEA this man-made monster walked about, four hundred feet deeper than is possible with the ordinary diving suit. The outfit is fabricated of aluminum and steel by a Berlin concern and is equipped with phone, lights, and an air tank with three hours' supply. The diver can look a fish in the eye through one of four windows; and, if agile enough, can hook it with the tongs at the ends of the arms, which he manipulates as hands.

A NEW HORSE IN MIDSTREAM is Walter J. ("Rabbit") Maranville, chosen manager of the Cubs to replace Bill Killefer. "Rabbit," who is 33 years old next November, is on his thirteenth year in the big leagues. His great work as shortstop for Boston contributed largely when the Braves won the pennant and world's championship in 1914. And he may be given some credit if his present team should succeed in moving upward from seventh place in the league.

YOUR three meals a day may be a warning of disaster—or a prophecy of happiness. Many a man has bitterly blamed his fate who should have blamed his food. Fate and Food. Food—and Fate! Sometimes it's hard to tell them apart. Wrong food can crash to disaster the best body and brain that ever grew. Right food will make you fit and keep you fit for life's struggle. Heavy, heavy, what hangs over you?

Delicious, easily digested, supplying varied nourishment

a food like this safeguards your body's future

When all is said and done, you can't get away from this—your body's future is your future. If you want health and energy with which to build success and enjoy life you must give your body daily the food elements Nature intended it to have.

And that's the trouble with the average modern diet—it seldom gives you all of these vital elements in sufficient quantities and in correct proportions.

Just for this reason, an expert in food values originated Grape-Nuts. It supplies dextrins, maltose and other carbohydrates for heat and energy; iron for the blood; phosphorus for teeth and bones; protein for muscle and body-building; and the essential vitamin-B, a builder of the appetite.

Combine Grape-Nuts with milk or cream, and you have an almost perfectly balanced ration—a food of the highest possible value.

And it is delicious! It is made from wheat and malted barley—their blended, nut-like flavors are brought out perfectly by a special baking process which also makes Grape-Nuts particularly easy to digest. And its delightful crispness gives your teeth and gums the healthful exercise they need.

Van Ess Scalp Massage is preventing baldness and growing new hair; used by 800,000 men and 600,000 women

Completely bald at 23—Mr. Overman grew 7 inches of thick hair in 7 months. Read this:

Van Ess Laboratories, Inc. Oakland, California, 11/15/26

Dear Sirs:

July (1923), within three weeks, I lost ALL of my hair. It just dropped out. As I am a pharmacist and a drug store owner, I tried everything that I had for sale and that doctors knew of but—in November I was still naked on top—and only twenty-three years old! At last I tried Van Ess. Two bottles—a little white fuzz.

Then—in January my wife left me for a 5 months' tour. When she returned in June I had seven inches of hair all over my head. I had used eight bottles. Van Ess daily, it's hair insurance.

Yours truthfully,

The darling litt who own gardens. up by their roots,

"How's Your Garden?"

By W. E. HILL

"Come, Toto, precious; Toto mustn't bury bones in the garden beds!" However, it all depends on whose dog it is, yours or your neighbor's.

"There was a little melon on the vine yesterday, but I guess the birds got it," says the man in the lower left corner, of his everbearing mammoth melon vines, which were expected to yield a harvest like that depicted in the colored catalogue plate, wherein a young lady in a ball gown is completely surrounded by melons. O, well, such is fact and such is fancy.

The Smythes have one of those happy combinations, a chauffeur and gardener in one. They are happier about it than Niles, the chauffeur-gardener. "I don't think I ought to let that car go without a good washing another day—it's bad for it," opines Niles plaintively. If Mrs. Smythe and her charming daughter Opal fail to take the hint, Niles will complain of backache.

Three garden hats, showing that some are not so grand as others.

"Shoo! Get away from my flowers, you bad, naughty pussy!" Aunt Zela has a little green apple all ready to hurl at the pussy! Scaring away marauders is great exercise for stout persons.

The darling little child, beloved of all who own gardens. She pulls the flowers up by their roots, the dear!

Young girl with hose watering seedlings in one of those city back yard gardens. We wouldn't give a lead cent for those seedlings when Lillian finishes with the hose. She's very intent on some one who hasn't drawn the curtains three doors away.

QUEEN NEARLY SWALLOWED UP BY GLACIER—Wilhelmina of Holland had a narrow escape from death when her automobile, ascending Mont Blanc above Chamonix in the Swiss Alps, started slipping toward a crevasse hundreds of feet deep. The brakes held in time, happily, and the queen was unhurt except for laceration of three fingers in a door of the car. Such a trifle, however, was nothing to the Dutch sovereign. She continued undaunted on up the glacier, where she is pictured following the foremost guide. (Photograph from Pacific and Atlantic)

TITLED BENEFICIARIES OF GOULD ESTATE—Lord and Lady Decies, arriving in New York to take care of their interests in the litigation over the George Jay Gould millions, found the case had ended. The settlement will add about $10,000 a year to the income of Lady Decies, who was Vivien Gould, daughter of the late capitalist. (Photograph from Pacific and Atlantic)

The coolest, most refreshing drink of all after exercise

Golf . . . tennis . . . baseball . . . perhaps a hiking trip along the seashore's sands or far up on the slope of some wooded mountain. . . . Wonderful summer days for play and pleasure!

Tired and hot when finished? Yes! But what a healthy tiredness! And how welcome, then, a cooling bottle of "Canada Dry"—especially on the club-house veranda or as you come from the shower.

Its flavor delights you, of course, yet this fine old ginger ale is ever so much more than just a pleasing beverage for your thirst.

It lifts you up! Refreshes! Brings mild and gentle exhilaration to your mind and body! Makes you feel keener—fresher—more gloriously alive!

That's because of the real Jamaica ginger that is in it and because it is one ginger ale that does not contain capsicum in any form.

It is the coolest, most refreshing drink of all after exercise—a welcome respite from the summer heat.

SU SUM SA

by Ida M. Evans

This Anne, who was coolly staring at her.

Intimate Flashes of the Chorus Girl's Life Behind the Footlights —and Outside the Theater, Too— in This Blue Ribbon Short Story of the Girl Who Thought She Couldn't Forget

WHEN the Su Sum Sa curtain goes down in sensuous velvet finality at three minutes before midnight, the Su Sum Sa audience gets crampedly up out of plush seats and into hats and coats with a grunting, housewide sigh of mixed relief and regret.

With relief, because that curtain goes up promptly tonight. As even a hardened theatergoer moans, rubbing calves deadened by long inaction, "Four hours is enough of any show for me, if it ain't for everybody." With regret, because eleven dollars and seventy-five cents is the least any self-respecting ticket speculator will accept for a Su Sum Sa seat behind a post in the nineteenth row. As an occasional theatergoer from Chili, Ohio, grumbles, kneading benumbed leg, "For the price, the darned show ought to last all night. Though"—at right to friend of own sex, not to georgette gowned stout waisted Ohioan wife at left—"that love moon scene—some dope for tired eyes, huh? 'Member? Date palms, lavender moon, and little baby in red satin? Mighty little (chuckle) satin."

The friend retorts, with pardonable residential pride, "O, Ben Tigany—when he puts on a show, it's some show! Dunno but what it's worth the price. His girls (mouth turned discreetly from his wife) sure are there with the ankles and the clothes. Or (chuckle) look! Some folks may moon about the good old times of our grandfathers, but this age (another chuckle and lingering look back at slow swishing bottom of velvet curtain) is good enough, I'll say, for father!"

"It sure is!" Business of exchanging winks between large waisted old friends, to the leeward of respective wives.

The list of characters of the Su Sum Sa extravaganza is long and sumptuous, from the chief caliph of great gold and purple girth and three princesses in diamond crowns down to the dancing desert girls whose whirling brown stained bodies in one scene make a hit that depends little on costumes.

These desert girls in another scene are singing sultanas. In others, Persian water carriers, temple maidens, and Aryan slaves. Their twenty-eight names are printed in less conspicuous type than the more important characters of the extravaganza program.

But to Alice Derry, who had never been nearer a drop curtain than an orchestra seat, one name of the twenty-eight needed no conspicuity of print for her sharply focused gaze. It was black typed in her mind, not to be forgotten; never, while life lasted, to slip entirely from her bitter mind. Barbara Earl. In private life, of course, Barbara Ickes. Unless they had been divorced! Hope, like a tiny green live root, pushed often at the bottom of her heart. It hurt, this insistent push. It demanded that a constant effort be made to ignore it, in order that she might have any peace of mind at all.

And then had come old Mrs. Corning's death in Luxemburg and that absurd will made six years before and never changed by a foolish, sentimental old woman.

Negligence or a senile lack of memory—and three people (or at least two!) must be jerked into a distasteful and unnecessary thought of one another.

THEY had seats on the center aisle; Alice and Murgtywood. Row H, scalpers' prices. She had asked him to get seats as near the stage as he possibly could. Murgtywood's pocketbook did not matter to her. Phil's had—once. Her throat tightened now, remembering the balcony seats she used to urge to Phil, the cheaper plays.

She hoped, however, that Murgtywood would not suspect why she wished seats near the stage. She did not suppose, though, that he had heard anything about the will. It had nothing to do with the routine of the Barrows bond brokerage offices. And her choice of seats had nothing to do with the business of the will—except that, having heard she was in town, Alice morbidly desired to see Barbara again. Eyes burned to see her again—the girl that Phil had preferred to herself.

Murgtywood likely had heard gossip, for all his three brief years in the Chicago office. She did not greatly care, of course. In her heart something had numbed, grown so like dead, six years back, that she did not care a great deal what any one in this world thought or heard or deduced.

You could not guess this from the composed prettiness of her small, oval face. She was of that ash blonde type whose delicacy of coloring can be a most indomitable mask for emotion or for thoughts. It is like thin, pale painted glass. It may not seem so, but it is opaque.

Tonight her ash blonde hair was waved high and smooth. That was her best style. She had amethysts in her ears; an inexpensive pair, but the soft colored stones gave a pinkish luster to lobes. Her rather light colored eyebrows were deftly darkened, giving needed animation to her delicate, cameolike profile. Sometimes, crying into her pillow, Alice had blamed her eyebrows for Phil's defection. She had splurged for her French blue gown. She did not expect to meet

Phil. But the thought of him, of his Barbara—well, she had chosen to rouge skillfully. She was six years older than she had been. Although, of course, she did not look aged. With bitterness and ache, one can watch the years crawl, the jeering years, from nineteen to twenty-five, and yet not be marked so facially by the scythe that enemies can point.

There was her desk, of course. It stood in a big office with other desks. Regular work is an antidote to physical signs of heartbreak. So are other desks in daily view. When one's ash blonde head must be composedly lifted to view eight hours a day, ache of desire and tears of night cannot quite get the upper hand in the way of scars. Particularly when, as the nights have gone on, desire has numbed and tears have lessened by sheer pendulum law.

In spite of her heart, she was conscious that she looked well. She had the slight, normally proportioned figure that is well fitted in shops. Getting in and out of the taxicab, Murgtywood had given her a quick stare of approval. He was the large, bulky type of man who succumbs helplessly to small, dainty women. And for thirty-six months now his desk had adjoined hers.

Beside him now, without the barrier of office atmosphere, Alice was relieved that he only looked and did not touch her. Her hands were ice cold.

This although the February evening stood at fifty-six outside, and the big theater—it was the Auditorium—was heated to that exact comfortable degree that theatrical managers know to be preferred by chiffon scarfed shoulders.

Getting in and out of the taxi, she had been most careful not to let her fingers touch his. And now she kept on her gloves, although she disliked gloves even for formal occasions and although she became increasingly aware that from her apparently cold palms the perspiration was oozing through the white kid.

Not that she greatly cared what might be his thoughts if accidentally he discovered the betraying state of her hands. O, he must have heard some of the story. Undoubtedly gossip still curled, like old slow smoke, through the office, along all La Salle street. Phil's jilting of her! How one noon he walked out from his desk which nearly touched hers, and married a little caracul coated, black eyed show girl who was in town for a month.

ALMOST so off hand had it happened. They—Alice and Phil—had been engaged over a year. Alice had half framed her letter of resignation to stout old George Barrows Jr. Phil was keeping an eye open for a bargain building lot, or bungalow, out on the north shore, near a golf course and her people's old Evanston home. Shopping noon hours, she had begun to pick up linens; gray and white remnants, rose and delft lettered guest towels. Phil had written his folks in Minneapolis.

Old Mrs. Corning, whose bond holdings were a large item in the Barrows bond brokerage books, came upon them one late afternoon in a side corridor. Phil's arm was around her shoulders and, extended, he held sets of bungalow plans. He had sponged them from a friend.

Old Mrs. Corning flung out yellowed, fleshy, bediamonded, sentimental hands. "Don't blush! I simply adore a young couple starting out in life!" Alice had done some legal typing for her that week. The previous month Phil had attended to a small bond transaction for her. She sailed for the Orient and then Europe the next month. And the month that followed——

That Wednesday noon—would she ever forget? Even now her eyes burned, hating the memory. State street, and the hard, bright winter sun. Mary Huldby hurrying at her side, saying, "Let's snatch a piece of pie and run over to that lace sale at Crerie's." The seafood piled on chipped ice in the window of the St. Golny ground floor grill. The cool black eyes, mascaro lined, of the girl entering the swinging door, with Phil's tight eager hand on her beige fur sleeve, Phil laughing, saying, "Nearly late, wasn't I, but——"

Phil, who twenty minutes before had leaned over Alice's desk to explain regretfully that he'd have to skip lunch, except a sandwich, because he had to go to a bank for Mr. Barrows.

Alice had stopped, incredulous of her own sea gray eyes.

The confusion on Phil's face—red, sulky. Mary's malicious understanding. The hard, bright winter sun. Even now, it all burned at eyes, blistered sight.

Phil ended an uncomfortable week by resigning, marrying Barbara, and leaving town. He was red faced, sheepish, and resentful during the week. The under salesmen eyed Alice surreptitiously. The typists whispered; sometimes when she was in the same room. Mary Huldby was a talker. Alice, being proud, chose not to resign but to stay on composedly. After all,

Alice.

La Salle street was hardly large enough to hide in; to make a change of desk worth while, as far as pride would be served.

The sensuous velvet curtain was going up. Murgtywood leaned so that his shoulder touched hers.

She did not move away. The heavy, conscious touch did not disturb her. It left her indifferent.

A caliph, large girthed, in gold and purple velvet, with a retinue in gorgeous tunics, swept on the stage. Murgtywood fastened smiling, expectant gaze on the sight.

Alice leaned forward a little in her seat, tensely. The temple maidens were swaying on from the wings; white tunics and flowing dark hair. Barbara Earl was the twelfth. Those unforgettable vanity ridden black eyes, that pert, baby round cheek. The single time that Alice had seen them, put their distinct imprint on memory! From all impressions of other women's features, they stood out cruelly; as among a dozen or more clean shaven, brown haired salesmen of the Barrows changing personnel Philip Ickes' form stood out.

Barbara looked ridiculously young. And graceful. Her white garbed body swayed like a reed in a slow stream. Alice closed her eyes, as if a hard winter sun had touched the balls too brightly.

She reminded herself that stage makeup can illusively create rare youth; and dancing choruses are trained to grace.

HER tense attitude must have communicated itself to the man beside her. Murgtywood took his attention from the stage.

"Don't you like the show?" he whispered in concern.

The gold and purple caliph was a world known comedian. Already four gags from his large genial mouth had brought a riot of laughter from the great house. A tenor with a beautifully blue satin clad, slight body had begun to sing a brilliant modern ballad in a voice whose limpid sweetness earned him thirty thousand dollars a year. The three Su Sum Sa princesses were a trio of knees, throats, and personalities that ticket scalpers went into raptures over.

But Joe Murgtywood brushed all aside, so to speak, as nothing if Alice were not amused thereby.

He was almost too bulky of build for the orchestra seat. Leaning to her, his concerned face was so near that his smooth brown hair almost mingled with the ash blonde curl that a hair dresser had effectively drawn over an amethyst set small ear.

She could not control a small drawing away. That sickish feeling swept over her at intervals. It had come when Phil's desk was first filled by another man; it had come the first time Murgtywood had brought her to a theater.

Composedly enough she had seen Mary Huldby and a girl named Selina put their heads together when Murgtywood first began to follow Phil's example and surreptitiously watch her ash blonde head bent over the adjacent desk. Mary and Selina did not discompose her. It was her own backward turning mind.

As time went on, in the majority of her moments Alice Derry admitted to herself that she might have found life good enough with the one man if the other had not preceded him. But Phil had preceded. And gone on his way, flipping back her heart to any other hand that might be extended. O, Phil, how could you? In her white gloved, her fingers curled with sudden physical pain.

Murgtywood still leaned toward her, solicitous. She was afraid that she was betraying herself. O, she did not greatly care—except as instinctively one does not not care to show ragged emotions or ragged petticoats to a stranger. There had been moments lately when she hotly blamed Phil more for what might happen in her future than for what had happened in the past. Because of him, she knew a little snaky fear that some day, having weakly accepted a half-loaf instead of the whole she had lost, she might hatefully squirm under Murgtywood's companionship and find it intolerable.

She wanted to squirm now, under his attentive eyes. Impulsively she asked if he had a sheet of paper and a pencil.

"I know a girl on the stage," she said, forcing a small, animated smile.

"Do you?" with interest.

It was hardly possible, while she wrote, to hold the notebook sheet so that he could overlook a word. By all the rules of ordinary breeding, such action would be uncalled for. To Alice's relief, Murgtywood turned his attention to the stage. An oriental love song was beating forth like a tom-tom.

She wrote deliberately, without preface of name:

"You will be surprised at receiving this. Would you mind giving me Philip Ickes' present address, or communicating with him to the effect that by the will of the late Mrs. Winter Corning, who recently died in southern France, he inherits jointly with myself a house and grounds in the city here? The administrator of the estate has been unable to locate him since he left Chicago. One of the girls in the office reported your own presence this week in town. It is necessary to find out what arrangement he wishes to make to terminate the joint ownership of the piece of property.

"ALICE DERRY."

She addressed the folded sheet, "Miss Barbara Earl, or Mrs. Philip Ickes."

Murgtywood took it and motioned to an usher. Out of the corner of her eye Alice saw that he did not glance even slightly toward the superscription. He was that kind of man. There is no cruelty, no injustice, such as that a woman can show to the wrong man, but with grudging justice Alice admitted this of Murgtywood.

At the usher's murmur of "Against rules, sir," he took out a bill and smiled persuasively. In the Barrows' brokerage establishment, office boys invariably responded with grins to Murgtywood's likable smile. It was that kind. It, with the bill, sufficed to still the usher's objecting murmur.

TWENTY minutes passed. The Persian water carriers filed on the stage and off; nude shoulders, gracile hips, and huge brown earthenware jugs swaying in trained and sensuous harmony.

The attendant returned, with a reply. Alice's white gloved fingers were unsteady as she took it. She hoped Murgtywood did not notice this.

She read: "I'll say I'm knocked dead! This isn't somebody's far fetched idea of a grand joke? For the love of heaven and my nervous system, come right around and give the detales. Phil's in Brooklyn—I'll telegraph him to get here on the run, without stopping for a clean collar, and help along any probaiting. Pretend you're a sob sister, if you can get away with it—Rules bar callers, y'know, during performances. Twenty mins. between eleventh and twelfth scenes."

Barbara's chirography was bold. Barbara's spelling was bad.

Alice Derry, the highly paid secretarial worker allowed her lip to twist with contempt. Then the color burned and receded in her cheeks. A challenge from the other to a face to face encounter? A taunt?

She hesitated, but she managed a light smile for Murgtywood's interested look.

"She asks me to come around behind the scenes presently for a chat."

The die was cast. If she did not go, he would wonder, become curious, perhaps.

She consulted her program for the number of the next scene. The caliph was due to be tortured by a rubber chief and then betrayed by his caliphess in rhinestones and silver colored velvet. Murgtywood chuckled at intervals. Alice managed to smile at intervals.

Murgtywood rose at her movement of preparation. As she stood in aisle, he bent suddenly and whispered in her ear, very low, "Don't forget to come back."

Startled, Alice looked up at him. His eyes were inscrutable, but something seemed to lie far back, almost hidden, in their depths.

She was a little annoyed, but she forgot him as she gained the shadowy wall aisle and thence a passage leading past the boxes on that side of the parquet floor. She had never been behind scenes. But with a beginner's luck she made her way rightly past a series of great mutually supporting canvas walls which, shifted audienceward, became green forests or far gray mountains or Italian villas; and, guided by voices and two stage shifters, went back and up to a large room filled —overfilled it seemed!—with lovely eyed girls in all degrees of partial nudity.

In medley were shrill voices, flashing industrious bare arms, mirrors, brilliant ornaments, and silks. And for a moment she was curiously affected, as she stood in the doorway and gazed. Time and place seemed unreal. So strange the sensation that came upon her—that she stood, or once had stood, in a well kept, orderly garden, and looked out fascinatedly at a brilliant, disorderly wilderness where rioted strange fruits and vines and birds of rich plumage. Had she read a story once with that setting, with a character named Lilith? Probably, she decided with a small frown.

One of the girls saw her and came whirling to meet her. She had a vivid impression of a lovely bare upper body, gaudy oriental bracelets, dark hanging hair, and a lively, black eyed face.

"Is it a joke?" came excitedly. "Say, tell me!"

Alice stared haughtily.

"I'm afraid I'm not inclined to that sort of joke. The wealthy Mrs. Corning——"

"Wait." Barbara pulled a chair almost from under a tall, black haired girl. "Park yourself against the wall, Anne." Anne began, "Well, of all nerve——" Barbara pushed Alice in the chair. "Get comfortable and spill the story." Hand flashed back to a porcelain jar, and Barbara was rubbing brown stain upon her bare feet.

A FURIOUS self-anger took Alice for coming. All these hearers! This Anne who was coolly staring at her! Two blonde dolls who turned from greasepaint jars to hearken! And Barbara to compel her to relate the whole humiliating episode——

"Don't keep me on hooks," said Barbara, knee engaged. "Have a heart."

Anger nerved Alice. She raised her head composedly. There is no strength like pride's. Since she had been foolish enough to come——

"The wealthy Mrs. Corning was an old customer in our offices. Philip"—it would be an affectation to say Mr. Ickes or "your husband"—"did her a few small favors. So did I. She must have drawn the will several years ago. She had been abroad for a long time before her death. I myself was very much astonished to be remembered."

There! It was out for all hearers! She waited warily for Barbara's inevitable laugh because an old woman's sentimental plan had been thwarted; because instead of a devoted pair's occupancy of the house, there must be an unromantic sale and division of profits.

"She must have been a generous old party," said Barbara. "What's it worth?" The question was put greedily.

"It was worth about fifteen thousand dollars when she made the will. It is a three story stone house with quite extensive grounds; out north, in a good neighborhood. Real estate has gone so high in the last few years that I understand the value has nearly trebled."

"And Phil—we——" Barbara leaned toward Alice, her lips parted excitedly.

Alice felt more at ease. No complexity about Barbara!

"About twenty-one thousand dollars, at least."

"A-ah! Pinch me!"

Alice saw a chance for a thrust.

With a well done hint of amusement, she said, "If Philip hadn't chosen to drop so completely out of sight after leaving Chicago, you might have heard the good news sooner."

"O, he didn't drop out of sight," promptly explained Barbara, again knee engaged, "but you see first he went to New York with me and didn't step into anything good but puttered around for a year in offices that he didn't dote upon. And then he took a road position, because I was on the road anyway most of the time, too. And then Junior was born, and we stayed in Newark a year, where it was cheaper to live. And then he got into this office in Brooklyn, and I must say I was relieved when he got it, because it broke him of the nasty habit of reminding me, whenever he was in a bad humor, of what a peachy prospect he enjoyed in the brokerage joint here that I tempted him away from."

Barbara was a rapid talker and she could attend to two things at once. From round knees to ankles, the brown stain had been swiftly applied. Alice watched her fascinated, but her hungry mind held the significant kernel in Barbara's last sentence.

"To tell you the truth," went on Barbara, unexpectedly, with a flashing smile, "for a year or two I was uneasy; always fearing Phil was regretting you!"

It was candor!

"Indeed," The rejoinder was icy. But Alice's heart beat painfully. And would Mrs. Corning's blundering legacy remind Phil of what might have been——

"Well, you know men," explained Barbara cheerfully, patting her ankle browner.

"And—and you got over your fear?" smiled Alice. Her face burned. The listeners——

But her smile was very well done.

"Well, you see, Junior came and I was in such a bad humor over him coming that I didn't think of much of anything else. And then after he was all here, bawling and needing attention, I didn't think of anything much but him. And then Phil's mother died and Phil broke his ankle at her funeral—it was winter and icy walks, you know!—and then Junior got the scarlet fever—it's left him with the horridest running ear, poor little baby—and you know! Things happen and you quit thinking about a lot of other things."

Alice sat silent. One does not always quit thinking. Besides, this recital had an effect on her that she did not quite understand. It removed Philip Ickes from a familiar, clear cut place in her mind.

The Anne person was still staring. Alice haughtily turned a French blue crepe shoulder on her.

"Want to see a picture of Junior?" asked Barbara, vivaciously. She reached for a snapshot propped against a cold cream jar. "It isn't a bit good. His father's there, too."

Alice took the picture. The watchers, the listeners! She could not turn her rigid head.

A boy of four or so, with an eager, sickly face. He had Phil's mouth and his mother's lively black eyes. And Phil beside—how had Phil changed? He was preoccupied with the child, holding his arm firmly as if to keep him from running across the street. He had a mustache—small and stubby.

"D'ye think he looks like me or Phil?"

"Both of you, I think," said Alice, composedly.

"Won't I flutter to a good studio and get some decent ones, now!" Barbara blew a kiss at the staring listeners who were nearest. "I've come into dough! Over twenty thousand!"

"You're a liar," retorted one.

Barbara blew another kiss.

"Have your own opinion, darling!"

She made her way past great canvas walls.

But she turned vivaciously to Alice for confirmation. "It's so, isn't it?" To the doubter who had a Madonna profile and Broadway eyes, "This is an old flame of Phil's! And a generous old party who didn't keep up with current events will be mentioned in my prayers until I get down in the ground with the worms."

Alice sat still, burning with mortification. Was Barbara as naive and careless as she seemed? Or was it purposeful malice? She was not sure. Barbara's face, bent over in the assiduous business of make up, was not so young as it had seemed to an orchestra seat. O, not by far!

"Is Junior with his father?" she asked mechanically.

"I hope not at this time of night! Or he's eating salted peanuts, potato salad, chocolate, shrimps, and God knows what else. And I can't say Aunt Linda's much better, although she does make an effort to control her weakness where Junior is con-

DUTY

By FREDERICK BOUTET
Translated by William L. McPherson

M. Blagny bent over the hand which the young woman held out to him.

CLAIRE MOULTIER was reading in her little salon, seated by the window, through which she could see the Luxembourg Gardens, bathed in the afternoon sunshine. She was dressed with the sober gravity from which she had never departed in the three years since her husband's death. She was reading an austere novel.

The door opened, she put down her book, her two daughters entered to kiss her good-by before going to school. Thérèse was ten years old and Renée eight. Both of them resembled her. Like her they were blonde and high bred, with a serious and gentle manner. They threw themselves in their mother's arms, and she told them to be well behaved and to study hard. Then they went away, accompanied by their governess, a dull and angular person. Claire resumed her reading.

A little later the bell rang and a servant announced M. Blagny.

"Bring him in," said Claire.

M. Blagny bent over the hand which the young woman held out to him, and then took a seat. He was a man of thirty-seven or thirty-eight, dark, slender, and correct in appearance, with courteous though somewhat reserved manners—more reserved at present because he was laboring under a hidden embarrassment.

He uttered some commonplace phrases, was silent for a moment, and then began, in a voice which trembled a little despite his efforts, "I thank you for granting me this interview. I must speak to you. You are too intelligent not to know what I wish to tell you. I love you. No, no, do not answer me; let me finish, please. I have loved you for ten years, since the day I first saw you, when Moultier, whom you had married not long before, presented me to you. Before I saw you I had never loved any one. Since then I have loved no one but you. Love for me is an exclusive feeling. Never during all your married life did I permit myself a look or a word. Never did I dare to dream. I knew that you were too loyal, too pure. You were another's wife. I scrupulously kept silence. I also was afraid of losing your friendship. But tell me, didn't you guess?"

She had lowered her eyes and made no answer.

"I have tried not to love you any longer, to keep away from you," he continued. "I suffered much. But it was all in vain. Every day I loved you more. I never could imagine happiness except with you. Every woman beside you seems to me commonplace, false, and empty. I love you. I tell you this now because you have been free for some time and I can venture to ask you to marry me."

He awaited her answer breathlessly. Claire did not raise her eyes and said to him in a low voice, "I am not free."

"Do you love another?"

He had said these words with so much pained surprise that she made a movement toward him.

"No, no," she protested. "Don't think that."

"Is it your husband's memory?"

She shook her head.

"No. My husband was not for me what he should have been, what I was for him. He was not true, or faithful. Everybody knew it. I loved him very much, with all the sincerity of my youth. Then, by his fault, I ceased to love him. It isn't because of his memory. I don't want you to think that. I am not free because I have two children."

"But I will love them. I already love these two charming girls, who are so like you. They will be my daughters."

"No. O, I don't doubt your kindness, or your affection for them, but they worship their father's memory. They have a touching adoration for me. They are not ordinary children; they are serious, thoughtful, loving; they have in the highest degree the sense of duty. I want to do my duty toward them. They would not understand it, if I married again. They would not permit themselves to judge me, I am sure. But I would know well what they felt in the recesses of their sincere and sensitive minds. I owe myself to these children. I owe myself to their education, to their present and future happiness. I must not think of any other happiness. In life I am no longer anything but their mother.

She had spoken in accents so absolutely decisive that M. Blagny knew it would be useless to persist. He bowed his head and remained silent. He felt a hand placed on his shoulder, and lifted a face moistened with tears.

"You cannot but approve of what I am doing. You cannot but understand me," Claire told him.

"You don't love me," he murmured.

He seemed so overcome and his voice expressed so much despair that the emotion against which Claire had been struggling since the beginning of the interview suddenly mastered her.

"Don't say that I do not love you!" she cried. "That is too unjust. I cannot love you. I cannot be your wife because I have another duty in life. But don't say that I do not suffer also."

After this confession she controlled herself with a great effort.

He went away hopeless. He knew her too well to have any illusions.

CLAIRE, left alone, took up her book again. But her eyes were blurred with tears. She felt a cruel regret, nevertheless, she did not hesitate for a second. She might suffer, but she would do her duty.

For years she performed this duty unwaveringly, and with the utmost vigilance and devotion. The great events of her life were the incidents which marked the lives of her daughters: sicknesses, examinations to pass, etc. Thérèse and Renée became adolescents, then young girls, without missing for a single moment the watchful solicitude with which she surrounded them. As she had said she would do, she formed their minds and hearts and taught them to become women after her own image, grave, thoughtful, and sincere. She guarded with jealous care their thoughts, their studies, and their pleasures. At eighteen and twenty, respectively, Thérèse and Renée gave her every satisfaction. She was proud of her work. During all these years she never repented the decision which she had taken or the sacrifice to which she had consented.

At first there had been moments of revolt. She loved M. Blagny. She could not help loving him, but she could conceal that love and the desire, which sometimes tortured her, to live and to be happy with him. She saw him occasionally. But they never spoke again of love, and in time her suffering was deadened. There remained only an almost tender melancholy for which her maternal joys compensated her.

At twenty, the elder daughter, Thérèse, had a proposal of marriage. Claire, whose love for her children was without egoism, resigned herself to be separated from one of them, knowing well that presently she would have to be separated from the other and be left alone, already growing old and with no further personal interest in life.

She investigated the character and reputation of Thérèse's admirer, and gave her consent.

The evening of that very day as Claire was getting ready to go to bed she was seized with a desire to kiss once more the child who would soon leave her.

She went toward Thérèse's bedroom. She walked noiselessly, having on slippers. Going down the hallway she heard two voices—those of her two daughters who were together in Thérèse's room. She was so surprised at what she heard that she stopped short and listened to the conversation.

"You are lucky to get away from here," said Renée, the younger. "When I think that I am going to remain here alone and vegetate——"

"Yes, I am very happy," Thérèse responded. "I hadn't the strength to go on leading the stupid life which we live here. I think I would have accepted almost anybody for a husband in order to have a chance to live a little and to enjoy some freedom. My family-in-law is gay and goes around everywhere. That will change me. But you know, my little Renée, you will often come to see me. I will get you out."

"Oh, yes, don't forsake me! Alone here with mama! Poor mama, God knows how good she is and how much I love her! But this life, this austerity, this perpetual duty."

"Yes, my little Renée, it is not amusing. I am like you. I adore mama. I would do anything to avoid giving her the least annoyance. But, oh, to get away! It was a misfortune, you see, that mama didn't marry again. Yes, I know well she adored papa and continued to worship him. It is admirable but——"

"Yes, it would have been fine to have a stepfather who would have taken us about, who would have prevented mama from being so austere—so sad—who would have made her understand that we were young and that we could enjoy life like other young girls. Thérèse, you will not abandon me, will you, as long as I remain unmarried?"

"Count on me, my little Renée. Good night."

"It is too late, it is too late," Claire said to herself, thinking despairingly of M. Blagny.

She returned silently to her room.

The GATES of DOOM

By RAFAEL SABATINI

Did she not share her burden with another, she must sink under it and die, she thought.

READ THIS FIRST!

CAPTAIN HARRY GAYNOR, a young soldier of fortune, is the [illegible] between the Stuart pretender in Rome and the prince's followers in England. To the government he is known only as Captain Jenkyn. In England Gaynor meets

LORD PAUNCEFORT, supposedly loyal to the Stuart cause and engaged to a great heiress,

DAMARIS HOLLINSTONE. Seeking to win the girl's vast fortune for his prince's cause, Gaynor stakes [illegible] winnings at cards against Pauncefort's claim to Damaris. Gaynor loses. He visits the girl's guardian,

SIR JOHN KYNASTON, a secret supporter of the Stuarts. From Edward Templeton, a pompous second secretary of state, Gaynor discovers that London knows of Captain Jenkyn's visit, which means there is a spy in the pretender's camp. Sir John later warns Gaynor to beware of Pauncefort. The latter had made veiled threats when Sir John refused to sanction his immediate marriage to Damaris. They could have married without Sir John's consent, but that would have cost Damaris all but one-tenth of her fortune, and Lord Pauncefort had refused that sacrifice. His stand disillusioned Damaris, who saw him at last as a fortune hunter. At the Kynaston home Gaynor mistakes Damaris for EVELYN, daughter of Sir John, and devotes himself to Damaris, who he thinks is Evelyn Kynaston. Thus Gaynor spends a delightful week with Damaris. Evelyn writes to Pauncefort warning him that a rival for Damaris has appeared. Pauncefort fails to appear at an important meeting of the Jacobites, and they are all arrested except Gaynor. He escapes, and to establish an alibi, he feigns drunkenness and is thrown into jail. He is freed by Edward Templeton. Gaynor then visits the Kynaston estate to leave a warning for Sir John with Damaris, who he still thinks is Sir John's daughter. Walking in the garden he discovers suddenly that she loves him, even as he loves her. He tells his love, and puts his life in her hands by telling her that he is Captain Jenkyn. She, too, reveals her true identity. They are interrupted by Pauncefort. Damaris scorns Pauncefort, and in revenge he tells her how Gaynor gamed with him for her hand and lost. Gaynor's face tells her the charge is true, and, heartbroken, she flees. Gaynor forces a duel on Pauncefort, but the latter escapes just as Gaynor is about to finish him. Next day Gaynor is arrested. He admits he is Captain Jenkyn, but refuses to admit Jenkyn and Gaynor are the same man. Thus he protects his friends. He is sentenced to hang in three days.

AND THEN—

INSTALLMENT IX.

The Road to Tyburn.

IT WAS not until the evening of Wednesday that Captain Gaynor asked for pen, ink, and paper. He desired to make that communion with Damaris almost the very latest act of his swiftly ebbing life, setting at last to paper the thoughts that since his trial had almost entirely occupied his mind.

He headed his epistle: "From my cell in Newgate, on the eve of my death."

That done he was fretted awhile, as he sat pen in hand, to know how to address her. He solved the riddle, at last, by confining himself simply to her name. "Damaris," he wrote, "when you read these lines I shall have gone where neither execration nor compassion can pursue me, and for that reason if for no other I have the consolation in these my last hours of hoping that you will read what assuredly you would not read were I still living and at large. For that reason alone I think that I am glad to die, since death gives me certain privileges and rights that are denied the living. Further still, since I stand upon the dread threshold, since the gates of doom are opening to admit me, and I am on the eve of facing my Eternal Judge, I have a claim to be believed when I write of things that might seem to you incredible did I still walk the great highway of life. For it is not to be thought that I should in such an hour and for no possible temporal profit sully myself with falsehood in matters whereupon I might without temporal loss continue silent to the end.

"When you consider, then, how little falsehood can avail me now, when you consider how repellent it is even to the most abandoned to deal in falsehood with the cold eye of death upon him, the icy scythe severing him already from all earthly hopes, desires and aspirations, I die content in the knowledge that what I am writing here you must believe, and believing will come to give me dead that treasure of your loving thought which living I could never have claimed again.

"All that my Lord Pauncefort told you was true, yet no less true was my assurance, when you asked me to deny his story—that only were I the dastard he represented me could I have saved myself by the falsehood of such denial. You did not understand. You do not yet. For in these words, until all is known, must seem to dwell nothing but confusion. Yet in them dwells the whole and absolute truth. For never, O Damaris, was truth more untruly told than by Lord Pauncefort on that evil day.

"It is true, then, that I played with him that ill considered game. It was on a night when he had lost to me some eight thousand guineas, and he was bewailing that he stood upon the brink of utter ruin and in peril of a debtor's gaol. In that ill omened hour, I bethought me that he had something yet to stake—his right to wed you—for I believed him still betrothed to you—and it is true that when I made him that proposal I had no thought of winning your own self, and that your fortune was the real stake I saw upon the board. But it is not true that by this—assuming that I succeed with you did I win that game with him—I was an adventurer seeking your fortune for myself. My only thought was to devote that fortune to the service of my master, who is in such dire straits for means to his high ends. It was for him that I played that game, as my Lord Pauncefort well knows. That I should sacrifice you to a cause to which already I had sacrificed myself, in which I was imperiling the life that at last I am about to lose, did not then—nor does it yet—seem so heinous and unforgivable a thing.

"HIS lordship won the cut. I paid him his guineas, and there the matter ended, or would have ended but for the deception which for reasons that I cannot fathom you thought it well, with your cousin, to play upon me. For here we touch upon a truth which should efface all other things in this mistaken enterprise, a truth which already I have uttered. I did not know, nor ever dreamed, that you were other than you represented yourself to be. I did not know, nor ever dreamed, that you were Damaris Hollinstone until you told me so in the garden a moment before his lordship came upon us. I looked upon your cousin as the heiress—as, I suppose, you intended that I should—and from the hour in which I met you I was glad that it was so, that it was not you—you, Damaris—whom I was pledged by the fortune of the cards to abstain from wooing. I was glad in that hour to think that I had not won a game, whose stakes my honor must have compelled me to take up—for my honor is so bound up with the service of my king and master that I must account dishonorable all measures that do not aim at its advancement.

"There, my beloved, you have all the truth, and it is my hope as I write—nay, it is my certainty—that the knowledge will help to comfort you. You need not take shame in any thought that you were the mere prey of an unscrupulous fortune hunter, that you gave the pure and holy treasure of your love to an adventurer, a mercenary, and a scoundrel.

"The thought that you will come to know and to understand enheartens me and irradiates a season that must otherwise be dark indeed. It warms and gladdens me in this hour, and I shall go blithely to my end, knowing that it is the modest price I pay for the sublime good of sending you this undoubtable assurance.

"Tomorrow, for as long as thought can hold a place in this poor head, that thought will be of you. What is to follow after I do not know, nor do I fear. But if memory of life is still to be retained in the great beyond, one memory will linger to make my heaven—the memory of you, the consciousness that, knowing all, you will hold the memory of me in tenderness until we meet again, if there be meetings yonder.

"And so, my sweet lady, my dearest love, good-night!"

IT was late when the letter was concluded. He folded the sheets, tied them together, sealed them and placed them in his breast pocket. Then he lay down and soon was peacefully asleep.

Before the hangman's minions came to seek him in the morning, he had given the letter into the hands of a friendly gaoler, together with his purse, containing some twenty guineas in recompense for the service the fellow had promised to do him.

Soon after eight the ordinary was introduced. He was a short, stoutish man with mild eyes, but a heavy jowl, and the stubble of beard—a week's growth at least—that blackened his face lent him an almost ferocious aspect. He wore a soiled surplice; there was a peck of snuff hanging about his bands and in the stubble of his upper lip.

Captain Gaynor gave him a courteous if somewhat distant welcome, presuming upon which the parson straightway fell to talking of the captain's soul. In this the captain cut him short.

"By your leave, good sir," said he, "I am of opinion, look you, that I know more of my own soul than any man can tell me. So leave me, I entreat you, to search it for myself. Meanwhile I can minister to your body. You'll find some passable Hollands in that jar, and there is a bottle of Burgundy which the gaoler has just procured me. Pray honor me." And the captain waved him to the rude table where stood the vessels and a couple of drinking cans.

Thereafter he was but little troubled as he paced to and fro in his cell, awaiting with some impatience the coming of those who should take him for his last ride. They arrived at last, at a little before eleven. They conducted him to the courtyard, where the cart was waiting, a company of redcoats drawn up about it, and every window of the gaol packed with villainous faces, their eyes greedy of as much of the coming spectacle as it might be theirs to witness.

He leaped lightly into the cart, and the ordinary, somewhat flushed with Burgundy, clambered after him. Gladly would he have dispensed with the fellow's company; but the rules did not permit it. The parson must be with him to the end—must, indeed, intone the psalm that would be sung at the turning off. So perforce he submitted with the best grace possible.

The driver stood up and turned to the prisoner. He held a length of whipcord in his hand, and with this he pinioned the doomed man's wrists behind his back. Then he took up a length of hempen rope with a running noose in it, and deftly flicked this noose over the captain's head, leaving the end of the rope to hang behind him. That done—and with the utmost nonchalance, the ruffian puffing, meantime, a short and very foul pipe—the gates were opened. The sheriff's deputy, a splendid figure in a gold laced, scarlet coat, gave the word of command, and the procession formed up and started.

Ahead went the military in their red coats and miter shaped hats, opening a way with their musket butts through the mob that had collected about the prison gates. Out into that seething, human ocean rolled the cart. With dispassionate, almost pitiful eyes the captain looked upon that surface of upturned faces. One bestial fellow was singing an obscene song allusive to the captain's grim condition. The captain's eyes fell upon him in a look so profoundly compassionate that the rascal broke off short in the middle of his ditty, and after a moment's silence loosed a volley of lewd oaths at him.

Looking, the captain had wondered in what circumstances death would come to find such a man, and he had seen—with that extraordinary vision which is vouchsafed to men who stand upon the threshold—an image dreadful beyond words, an image that had informed that profound compassion of his glance.

THEY pushed on. Crowds everywhere along the cart's way; every window held a little mob, assembled there to see a man pass to his death. To Harry Gaynor, though ever dispassionate now and beyond resentment of such trifles, there seemed something foul and obscene in this curiosity.

He turned his gaze from it at last and met the mild eyes of the ordinary. They were full of tears. This he deemed very odd. He was almost touched by it, forgetting entirely the amount of Burgundy which the chaplain had consumed and in which his heart had been softened so that the death of a stray dog would have rendered him maudlin.

"Sir," he said very gently, "I beg that ye'll not weep for me who do not weep for myself."

"That is the very reason of my weeping," the parson answered him, and a tear detached itself at last, ran down his ample cheek and joined the snuff on his neckband, all of which the captain observed with extraordinary interest.

"This is very odd," he said. "Do you, then, not believe in what you teach? Do you not believe in a joyous and glorious hereafter?"

The ordinary stared at him, and in his surprise forgot his weeping.

"Or is it that in your own experience this world has proved it so extraordinarily delectable a place that you will not barter it for any other?"

"Nay, nay, sir. But you so young——" the fellow mumbled inconclusively.

"Am I not fortunate therein, since I shall be spared the infirmities of age?"

"But to be cut off in mid-life, thus! It is so monstrous pitiful. O, sir," he implored, "turn your thoughts, I beg, to other things."

"They are so turned," the captain answered quietly. "'Tis yours, sir, that seem to be earthbound, else why this grief in which I cannot share? Sir, I do think you lay too much store by this little moment we call life." And lo! It was the doomed man who set himself to offer spiritual comfort to the parson. "Since go we must in the end, what shall it signify that we go today or tarry until tomorrow? Shall we bewail a day? Let me tell you a story I heard once in the east."

"God forbid!" ejaculated the ordinary. "In such an hour!" he cried, all scandalized. "Would you still dwell upon your past when your thoughts should be all of the future?"

The captain smiled a little, and said no more. Still overlooking the Burgundy, he accounted this fellow unfit for the ordeal of bearing solace to the doomed. The task, it was evident, confused him. There fell a silence between them. The cart, at a snail's pace, was crawling up Holborn hill, and everywhere surged the same brutal, unfeeling crowd, staring, shouting, jesting, jeering.

Do not suppose that in this was any political rancor. Few, indeed, had any notion of the offense for which the captain was to suffer. He was just a man going to be hanged, and a man going to be hanged was ever an interesting and often a somewhat amusing spectacle, always sufficient to justify a holiday.

THE ordinary, watching his face, saw its almost contemptuous wonder, and misinterpreted it.

"I marvel vastly, sir," he said, "that you did not get leave to come in a coach."

"Could I have done so" asked the captain, with but indifferent interest.

"At your own expense," the parson assured him.

"Ah, well, 'tis little matter."

But now another thought occurred to the ordinary. He had just observed that the cart contained no coffin.

"Have you no friends" he asked abruptly. He was obliged to shout almost that he might be heard above the din.

"Friends? I hope so."

"Where are they, then?"

The captain's brows were knit an instant. "Would you have them here to swell this dreadful throng?" he asked.

"Nay, nay; but what provision have they made?"

"Provision, sir?"

"Ay, for your burial. Have they obtained leave to bury you?"

The captain looked at him, and smiled. "The thought has never engaged me. I had imagined, if I imagined anything, that all this was the concern of those that hang me."

"Then ye were mistaken, sir."

"Does it signify so much?" he asked. And before the extraordinary calm of the soldier's eyes, the ordinary became suddenly aware that he was very far astray from the path of his duty, that his thoughts were all for this wretched, perishable body instead of for the imperishable soul.

He uttered some commonplaces of religion, some of the minor currency that it was his trade to circulate. The soldier sat silent, his thoughts far away, thankful for this respite from the man's more trivial chatter of trivial things. He turned his head to look forward, and he heard the ordinary's sudden, alarmed "Don't look!"

But it did not deter him. They were trundling down hill now, the mob growing more and more dense, the houses thinning. Below there, at the hill's foot, the ground was black with swarming humanity, and from the midst of it, a dark triangular object reared itself—the sinister triple beam.

Captain Gaynor eyed it steadily, then turned him to the ordinary once more.

"We approach the journey's end," he said, and smiled. "It is very well, for the journey itself is none so pleasant."

OFTEN has it been written that death is life's greatest adventure. A paradox lurks subtly in the statement, which may be the reason why the phrase has been esteemed of so many writers. But of the death Captain Gaynor was to die that day at Tyburn, the statement can be made in its literal meaning, and without paradox, that it was the greatest adventure of his life.

I am tempted at this stage of my history to interpolate here a memoir from the pen of the somewhat famous Dr. Emanuel Blizzard. And if upon due consideration I have resolved not to quote this document verbatim, it is because, despite its wealth of detail, this record is, after all, an incomplete one; for there was, of course, much concerning Captain Gaynor's history with which the famous professor was never made acquainted.

I write, however, with the doctor's memoir before me—indeed, in its absence, it would be impossible for me to fill in the details of this most extraordinary part of the history I am relating. Much of that memoir and my reader will be quick to discern the passages I transcribe almost literally, save that here and there I have been able to elaborate from other records at my disposal certain points which to the doctor remained perforce obscure. Moreover, it will better contribute to the lucidity of my own narrative if I marshal the events in the order of their happening—an order by no means observed by the professor.

As the cart bearing Captain Gaynor came under the fatal beam, the vociferations of the crowd abated. They sank to a mere murmur, to a subdued hissing whisper, as of a breeze stirring through a forest, and lastly into an absolute and deathly silence—the impressive, expectant hush of nature when a storm impends.

The ordinary was reading aloud the office for the dead. Jack Ketch, the ruffianly driver of the cart, was on his feet. He took the end of the rope that hung from the noose round Captain Gaynor's neck, swung it a moment to gather the required momentum, then threw it over the beam and deftly caught it again as it came round and down. In an instant he had knotted it. In another he had resumed his seat, taken up his whip, and with a sudden stinging cut sent his horse at a half gallop down the lane which the military had opened out for him in the mob.

CAPTAIN GAYNOR found himself alone now in the cart. The parson had vanished, though he could not remember at what precise stage of the journey the fellow had left him. All round the vehicle seethed the crowd, yelling, shouting, cursing, laughing once more, but they seemed no longer to heed him.

Onward the cart rolled, with a thundering rumble now, which increased in volume as they went, and the captain observed with faint curiosity that those who were not quick to avoid it went down under its wheels. Theirs were the curses and foul oaths with which his ears were being deafened.

Soon, however, these and all other sounds began to fade. They had left the crowd behind, about that the angular structure which he knew stood some way in the rear. They were coming into the open country. The wheels of the cart still rumbled, but less noisily now, and as they rolled presently over a soft spread of emerald turf this sound faded almost entirely.

The captain discovered that his hands were no longer pinioned, and this was as mystifying as the sudden disappearance of the parson, for he could not recall at what particular stage of his progress the bonds had been removed.

He turned, and saw before him, sitting upright upon his plank, the immobile figure of the driver in his ragged three cornered hat and coat of rusty black. The fellow still puffed his short clay pipe, for the smoke of it hung in wreaths about his head. He marveled at his unconcern and apparent disregard of his prisoner.

They were ambling gently now down a lane between hedgerows that were aflame with extraordinarily rich blossoms. The sunlight was dazzling. It shone upon the waters of a pond, which he perceived through a gap in the hedge, so brilliantly that his eyes were hurt and dazzled.

It occurred to him then that since Jack Ketch was so unobservant and unconcerned, and since there was none other by to hinder him, he need not continue in the cart. He threw a leg over the rail at the back, and leaped lightly to the ground.

The vehicle rolled on. He stood watching it, and with incredible swiftness it diminished in size down that interminable avenue. When it was no more than a speck in the far distance, he turned and went through the gap in the hedge with that unbearable reflection of sunlight on water beating upon his eyes; and to which way he would he could not avoid it. There was water all about him now, and it all shone fiercely, like a mirror in the very eye of the sun. At last he perceived a bridge. He advanced towards it, and crossed it, shutting his eyes to exclude that fierce glare, but still conscious of it even through closed lids. He opened them again to make the discovery that the bridge which he had crossed was the rustic structure leading into the garden of Priory Close. Strange, he thought, that he should never before have observed what a deal of water flowed down the little ravine it spanned. And then he ceased to wonder about anything, for before him stood a radiant Damaris with arms held out in welcome.

He plunged forward with a cry, and sank into her embrace.

"My dear," she said, "why have you left me so long to my bitter thoughts of you?"

He sought to answer her, but could not; her arms were laced so tightly about his neck that he could not speak. She was strangling him. Had he been able to speak he would have told her so. But he could not. Yet although the choking was hurting him, he did not attempt to struggle. It was so good to lie there. He was very, very weary. He nestled his head more closely upon her breast. A great drowsiness overcame him, and he fell asleep.

Between two of the three uprights of that triangular structure the body of Captain Gaynor swung gently to and fro, as if the warm summer breeze made sport with it.

About the foot of the gibbet there was an open space, maintained by a hedge of men in scarlet coats and miter shaped hats. The drums had long since ceased to beat.

Came a sharp word of command, and a line of muskets flashed up and rattled to rest, each upon the shoulder of its owner; another word of command, and the redcoats maneuvered into marching order, four abreast. Then the drums rolled out again, and the scarlet phalanx swung briskly away through the tumultuous crowd.

The show was at an end.

Into the open square which the military had maintained at the gallows' foot sprang now some half-dozen obstreperous and bustling ruffians. The crowd surged after them, like waters suddenly released, and a cart pressed forward with the foremost.

The tallest of these ruffians, with a knife between his teeth, shinned up one of the vertical timbers and threw a leg over the crossbeam from which the captain's body was swinging. With his knife he slashed through the rope, and the body tumbled into the arms of his companions below. Two of them bore it away. The others plied elbows and tongues to force a passage through the rabble with their prize. They gained the cart, flung in their limp burden, and as one of them clambered after it, the driver cracked his whip and cursed the people volubly and obscenely. A way was reluctantly opened, and into this the little cart pressed, driven forward like a wedge. Slowly it won through.

Some little distance from the gallows a chaise had been drawn up. In this sat an elderly gentleman, who, with a gray face and dull, pain laden eyes, had watched the execution. His aspect was so profoundly grief stricken that the crowd about his carriage had felt the influence of it, and had preserved an almost utter silence. They resented being constrained to this despite themselves, for they felt that their enjoyment of the show had been marred; but for all their resentment they had not been able to shake off the spell of that anguished old countenance.

Suddenly, as the body was being borne away, Sir John Kynaston—for he it was—seemed to rouse himself from his trance. He uttered a cry and carried a trembling hand to the carriage door. He fumbled at it for some moments, opened it at last, and sprang down, shouting. But his voice was lost in the terrific uproar. He attempted to struggle through the crowd. But, spent as was his strength by grief, he was unequal to the effort, and after a quarter of an hour's striving he had got no farther than the foot of the gallows, whilst the cart was vanishing into the Edgeware road.

He implored those about him to pass the word along that he would pay the snatchers handsomely for their booty. An attempt was made to do his will, and the message traveled some little way, but it was scattered and lost at last.

In the end he was forced to give up the attempt. Blaming himself for not having thought of the matter sooner, he made his way with feeble, unsteady steps—his vigor all sapped—back to his carriage. The crowd was growing thinner now. He regained his chaise, and so returned in sorrow to Chertsey, deriving, if possible, an added grief from the reflection that he had neglected to perform the last rites by the body of his old friend's boy.

PRIORY LODGE in those days was haunted by an atmosphere of gloom. Evelyn and Damaris remained both invisible even to Sir John, both pleading indisposition.

Evelyn was overcome with terror at the ruin she had wrought, for she accounted that Captain Gaynor's arrest and execution had all resulted from the disclosure of his identity when Lord Pauncefort spied upon the lovers in the garden. She it was who had fetched his lordship to Chertsey by her letter, and she, herself, had conducted him to the garden that he might surprise his betrothed in the arms of another.

It had been with her no more than an act of petty vengeance, she could scarce have said for what. But she had intended that it should remain petty; she never dreamed of such tragic consequences as these. She was prostrated by them and by her consciousness of guilt; and it went as near to making a woman of her and arousing her dormant intelligence as anything could do. She had not seen Damaris since the happening—now some ten days old—in that garden. She had been afraid to face her, and now her fear had increased to terror since Sir John had brought word three days ago of the sentence of death that had been passed upon their whilom guest. That had been terrible enough. But now came the still more terrible news—again brought by Sir John—that Captain Gaynor had been hanged.

In her anguish, in her overwhelming panic, Evelyn wanted to die. She could never again meet the eyes of Damaris. She was—she told herself that night, as she lay wide eyed upon her bed—a murderess. Once, in the gray hour of dawn, she rose from her bed, fell on her knees beside it, and prayed—not to heaven, but to the spirit of Captain Gaynor—for forgiveness. Conceiving that this spirit being disembodied must be now all knowing, she cried out to it that she had not meant to work this havoc, that her deed had been light and heedless, that never would she have performed it could she have dreamed of such consequences to himself as these.

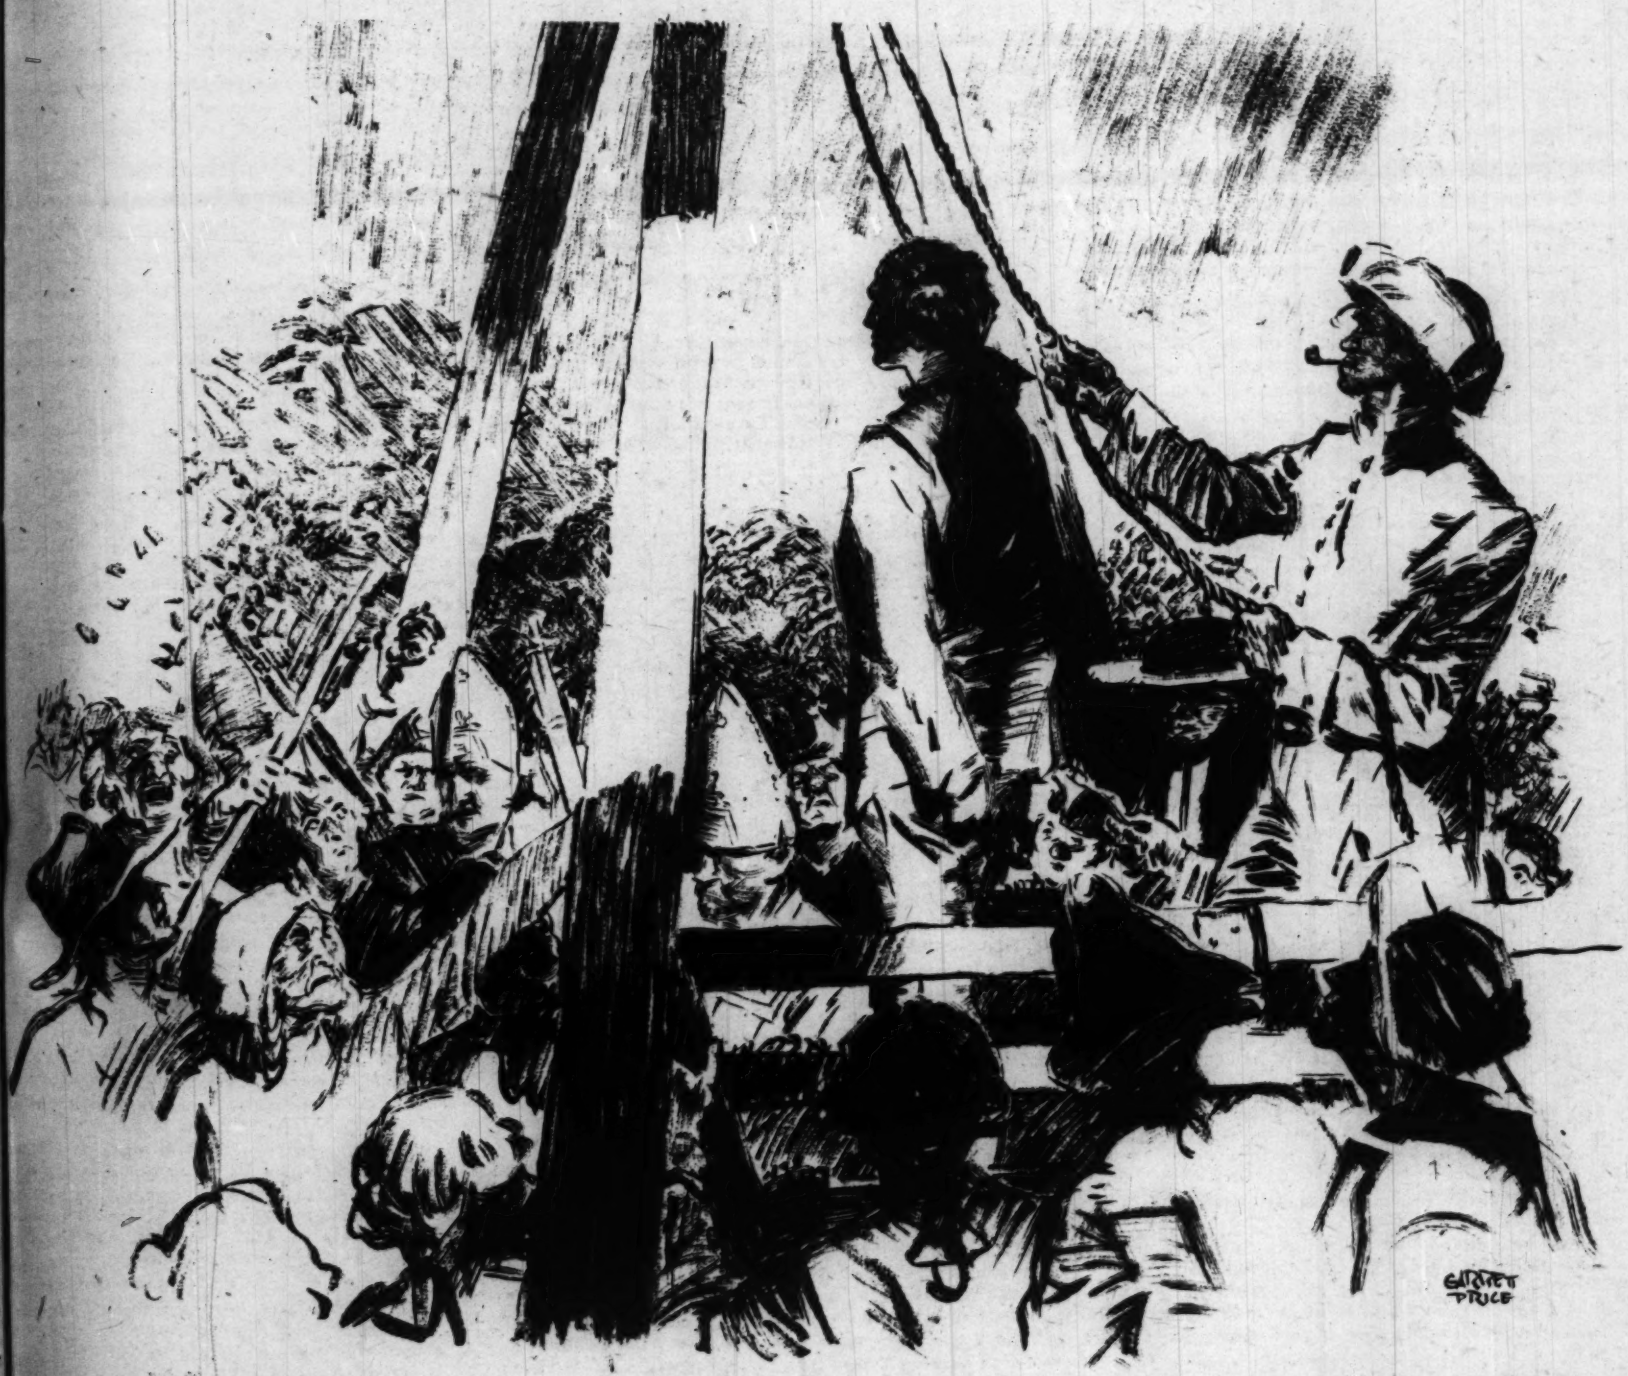
Some comfort she took in the reflection that he must know, and that knowing all he must forgive, as all must who know all.

It was on the morrow that Sir John brought himself to question his wife on the subject of the captain's sojourn at Priory Close. His wife, with habitual irrelevance and her passion for the unimportant, related to him the deception that had been practiced by the girls. He gathered from this and from what else she added that Harry Gaynor had wooed Damaris under the impression that he was wooing Evelyn; he learned that Pauncefort had been at Priory Close on the very morning of the day upon which the captain had been arrested; and he was able for himself to piece together the event, save that he knew nothing of the revelations that had driven Damaris away in a loathing of Harry Gaynor as great almost as had been that which earlier had turned her from Pauncefort.

HE sat in the library pondering it all, and thinking of the elder Gaynor who had been his friend, his more than brother, and thanking God that he had not lived to see this day of sorrow. He pondered the hope he had nourished of wedding his only child to Harry. That hope must, he saw, in any case have been frustrated. It mattered little now. For Evelyn, indeed, it was better as it was; better that she had not loved him. And then he sat up sharply with a sudden, a terrible thought. It moved him to rise and go in quest of his wife again.

"What ails Evelyn?" he inquired.

"I do not know, my dear. The child is odd always, and headstrong." Lady Kynaston sighed. "I never had her confidence."



The ordinary was reading aloud the office for the dead

"How long has she been ailing? How long has she kept her chamber?"

Her ladyship considered a moment. "Why, ever since Captain Gaynor left us," said she.

He was answered, he thought. His daughter, too, was stricken by the same blow. She had conceived for the captain an unrequited passion. His heart bled for her, and in his compassion he went at once to seek her.

He found her sitting listlessly by the window of her room, her hands idle in her lap. The roses had all fled from her cheeks; she looked haggard, so haggard and woebegone that even her air of intense femininity had departed from her. She raised heavy eyes to her father's face, and he observed the dark lines under them that told the tale of sleepless nights.

"My dear!" he said. "My poor child!" He held out his arms to her, and there were tears in his old eyes.

His pity stabbed her. She did not understand it, but she understood that it was sprung from some misapprehension.

"Ah, don't touch me, father!" she cried. "You don't know, you don't know!"

"I think I do," he answered gently.

"You do?" He saw horror in the eyes so suddenly lifted to stare at him. At once she realized that he had no knowledge of the truth, that something different was in his mind. He came upon her ripe for confession, at a point where, did she not share her burden with another, she must sink under it and die, she thought. She rose, flung herself upon his breast, and there, through a storm of sudden weeping, in a voice broken by sobs, she poured out her miserable story.

He listened, frowning awhile. But when the end was reached he did not put her from him in aversion, as she had feared. Gently he stroked her golden head.

"For the unworthy thing you did, Evelyn, you have been punished enough," he said. "Do not torment yourself with the supposition of a greater sin. It was not you who gave Captain Gaynor to the hangman, nor did Lord Pauncefort do it in consequence of what he witnessed here, nor yet did he, as you suppose, discover Captain Gaynor's identity as a result of what you enabled him to overhear. He knew it already. He was himself a Jacobite who had betrayed his fellow plotters. So comfort you at least with the knowledge of that."

She comforted herself speedily and completely, as such natures can. She slept soundly that night, and on the morrow when she made her appearance at the breakfast table she had resumed much of her habitual air.

Nor was she any longer oppressed by the fear of meeting Damaris, since in no degree now did she account herself guilty towards her cousin. It was true that she had done a meanness in writing to Lord Pauncefort and bringing him to spy upon the lovers, but for the rest she had her father's word for it that her action had nowise altered the inevitable course to which the events of these last days had been foreordained. But if she no longer feared to meet Damaris, yet she could not go the length herself of seeking Damaris, nor for that matter could Sir John, despite the urgings of his deeply sympathetic nature.

THERE was not, however, the need. Damaris, of her own accord, came forth on the following evening from her retirement, and sought her uncle.

He was in the library, writing to his brother, when suddenly she stood before him, almost ghostly in her intense pallor as she paused among the shadows by the door for his leave to intrude a moment. He sprang up at sight of her and went to meet her, and even as he was shocked by the change that grief had wrought in her, so was she shocked by the grayness of his face, the haggard air where joviality had ever sat and the dullness of those blue eyes that usually were so bright and smiling.

He held out his hands and she took them, her fingers tightening upon them. But for this man who had been more than father to her, her loneliness must be utter now.

"How cold you are, my child," he murmured. Then his voice broke. "O, my poor Damaris!" His voice told her that—no matter how—he was informed of all, or, at least, of all that mattered.

"I came to talk to you of him," she said quietly, her voice, as controlled as her face, like her face showing, despite her, the suffering through which she was passing.

He led her forward to a chair, and when she was seated he went to stand by the overmantel. So had he stood, she remembered, on that day when at P[auncefo]rt's side by the window there, she had looked [up] him as her enemy, and defied him. How [bitterly] now, she repented her that momentary defi[ance]. How profoundly she loved him, since today, in his [af]fection for Harry Gaynor, she discovered a fresh [and] very solemn bond between them.

"He desired me to give you certain mess[ages] he was on the point of setting out," she said, neither of them deemed it strange that she should no need to mention any name. "They do not [matter] to very much, but he dared not write them, he [did] lest his letter should miscarry. As it is, you [may] will have guessed what he would wish to say." she repeated with a rare fidelity the words he had trusted to her.

"Yes," he said heavily, when she had done, "that I understood."

"I—I have since had a letter from him," she [said]. "He wrote to me from Newgate, on the eve of Thursday last. You—you were with him—at the [end]" she asked.

"I was there," replied Sir John, "but he did not [see] me."

She swayed on her chair. She passed a hand [over] her brow, her face strained with the effort of self-control. "How—how did he die?" she asked at last.

"Happily, I think," Sir John replied. "He [died] smiling at the end, when—when he stood up. What had he to fear?" cried the baronet, a sudden vigor turning to his voice, a defiance almost. "What [has] he to fear? He was as brave and gallant a gentleman as ever drew the breath of life, a man whom [all] honored and loved, and he died a martyr to truth and right. What, then, had he to fear in death?" The tears ran down the old man's cheeks and his voice sank again, as he concluded: "Had the poor [lad] been my own son, I should have been as proud of him as I was of the affection with which his father honored me."

She rose and came to him. She reached up to [him] her arms about his neck, drew down his head, and very gently kissed him. And so, quietly, her [grief] ever silent and contained, she left him.

cerned. But you can't impress things on Phil! Even doctor bills don't teach him."

Alice bit her lip. Two more lovely young bodies had turned toward her in lively interest. Why had she asked that purposeless question? Certainly not to inject into her mind a rather unpleasant picture of Phil, with a not becoming short, stubby mustache, feeding peanuts and shrimps from a paper sack to a greedy child.

Barbara looked up brightly. "By the way, I'm glad I've seen you. You know, Phil's said two or three times that he was sorry he didn't marry you."

"Ah! That was kind of him." A scarlet face—an icy voice.

"And I came right back, 'Too late, old boy! Too late. That girl has long ago forgot you and got better company.'"

"Thank you!"

Some persistent chatter across the room suddenly lulled; then shrilled with renewed force.

"And I said to him, 'You can't do me dirt like this! You can not do me dirt like this!' I said to him——"

"Dirt! Well, let me tell you, Corale, what happened to me last week. That brother of mine meets me on the street and lays me out flat because I don't hand him a good sized loan! Me—that ain't finished paying for those two lots at the edge of Jersey City."

Hurting Alice's ear drum, Anne's lusty contralto shouted, "Lay off! There's something interesting to be heard over here! Give us a chance to listen!"

"Say, Anne," hissed Barbara, with an alarmed movement of body. "Shut up! Corale'll dog me for a loan before Phil gets here and collects the legacy!"

"O," gasped Alice, involuntarily. "There isn't much privacy here!"

"Privacy?" said Barbara with matter of fact bitterness. "Say, when a show's finished a New York and a Chicago run, even a goiter is not considered a piece of personal property."

SOME one across the room, possibly Corale, called inquisitively: "You really going to get that divorce, Earl?"

Alice Derry gave a small start. With frowning scrutiny she looked at Barbara, listened to her.

"No. That's off. It was never on, really." Barbara spoke carelessly enough.

"You said——"

"Did I? I don't remember what I said."

"You said Phil said——"

"O, well, threatening to divorce each other is our favorite indoor sport. But Phil's all right now."

"Sure," jeered Anne. "A lot of money——"

"Money nothing," said Barbara, comfortably. "He was all right two days ago. I got a letter that proved it."

Barbara beamed on Alice, who was attentive. And Alice was of that ash blonde type whose delicacy of coloring is a most indomitable mask for emotion.

BLUE RIBBON FICTION

Another remarkable adventure of James Hughes, the mysterious psychic detective. Readers of Blue Ribbon fiction have met the uncanny Hughes in two previous tales, "Bell Glasses" and "Three Liars." And now we have a third gripping detective story by

HENRY C. ROWLAND

"You know, Phil's one of these nasty nice men," she confided. "And he doesn't like to take medicine that tastes bad and he doesn't like to be messy! But the only thing that will cure a cold of his is strips of bacon around his neck when he goes to bed at night! When I'm at home with him, I don't argue! I simply say, 'Phil, put that on and don't talk.' He sulks, but he gets over that. So when I got a letter two days ago telling me that he'd had a bad cold, but he put six strips of bacon right on the night before, I knew Phil was simply dying to be nice to me, and please me. Poor boy!"

"O!" gasped Alice. Involuntarily she put up a hand to her eyes, as if to shut away a picture.

But it could not be shut away—that picture of a Phil who was not the Phil she had known, but the Phil who had somewhere, some time, taken his place in a changing world; a man, with a short, stubby mustache, holding his neck ungracefully to Barbara's handful of detestable bacon!

"It is messy," sighed Barbara, meditatively. With a startlingly swift movement, she was adjusting a thin, sand colored silk garment.

"O," repeated Alice weakly. She put out a hand weakly, as if she had lost hold of something that once was securely in her grasp, and she rose.

At the same moment, a dozen other girls rose—lithe, with barbaric bracelets and brown bodies. Unheard by Alice, some signal must have been heard. Barbara flung back a cordial smile that seemed to mean good-by. Barbara's voice to Anne floated back, like a carol, "Lot I care right now when this show ends its run!"

The dancing desert girls were running out on the stage.

Alice made her way down and out, directed by an indistinguishable murmur and two scene shifters. Past great canvas walls which, shifted audienceward, [be]came desert sand, temple walls, or coral isles.

A tenor in blue satin pumps passed her. He was saying bitterly, "He says to me, 'Spray your [throat] with this solution,' and I said, 'That's what you [told] me last week.'" A large girthed person in gold and purple passed, saying, "She crowds me again in [the] act and you watch what I do to her! Watch, I tell you."

Alice heard, but was not interested. Forms and voices were vague, unreal. She gained a passage [by] ing past the boxes on the right side of the house, thence along the shadowy wall to the back, and [the] center aisle.

THE twenty minutes just past seemed kaleidoscopic unreal. So many colors had whirled, but [what] was one that had seemed woof of life? Somber [warp] of woof! But somehow lacking—now!

The floor was dark. The stage was a rainbow [pit], however. She found Murgtywood's familiar head [at] side of aisle. The dancing desert girls whirled [their] colored thin silken scarfs. Barbara's face, [pale], smiling, whirled behind the footlights.

Alice in the dim aisle smiled at a thought. [Of] wherever old, impulsive Mrs. Corning was, she was not regret! Alice herself was impelled toward [him], shaking secret laughter.

Murgtywood sprang up, perceiving her. "But—"

"I've come back," she murmured, drawing off [her] gloves.

"You were gone a long time."

"It's so different behind the scenes."

Dimness, like a temple's shadows, held the [whole] house. Her face was not plainly to be viewed. Murgtywood leaned toward her quickly, as if a bell had been rung for his willing attention. Too dark for [him] to read her composed eyes. Too smooth for [him] the inflection of her voice! But beyond physical [sight] and physical sound, bells may be rung. O, bells [may] be rung.

"It always is," he said oddly. "And scenes change too!"

"Yes. They change."

In front of them, an indignant seat holder [turned] back to enjoin silence. The dancing desert girls [were] off the stage.

The tenor, in rose satin doublets, came on. His [voice] would haunt ears, long after a curtain had come down. It was an eastern love song, haunting, melodic—My Heart Is a River For Thy Solace.

"Joe," whispered Alice, "do you ever bind [your] slices on your neck for a sore throat?"

"Good Lord, no!" he exclaimed in disapproval. "At least, not since I was ten years old and my [throat] was strongest."

"Would you?" she whispered, with laughter.

"If you were the one that insisted," he said [with] hesitancy.

"I wonder," she murmured, "if I'll insist?"
